Ace the Bat-Hound. Ace was introduced as Batman's pet dog in the Golden Age. He was later revamped as a rescue dog, rehabilitated from his earlier days spent as a guard dog for the Joker.

Since the family formula had proven very successful for the Superman franchise, editor Jack Schiff suggested to Batman creator, Bob Kane, that he create one for the Batman. A female was chosen first, to offset the charges made by Fredric Wertham that Batman and the original Robin, Dick Grayson, were homosexual. But now, in one suspenseful surprise after another, Batman finds he has a great rival in the mysterious and glamorous girl. For example, the contents of her utility purse were actually weapons disguised as stereotypical feminine accoutrements such as lipstick, cosmetic compacts, charm bracelets, and hair nets. Although letters from fans indicated Batwoman had become popular with readers, [3] editor Julius Schwartz considered the heroine, as well as other Batman-related characters, to be inappropriate for the new direction he planned to take the Batman universe. Following the revamp to Detective Comics in 1969, Batwoman was removed from the series. Batgirl also proved to be more appropriate for her time period and the realistic approach DC Comics began taking with its characters. But thanks to the big change and a foresighted editor, these hapless females are gone for good. In their place stands a girl who is a capable crime-fighter, a far cry from Batwoman who constantly had to be rescued by [sic] Batman. I was counting on her making the scene in a new story, perhaps coming out of retirement to offer assistance to your Dynamite Duo [Batgirl and Robin]. After she was widowed, she and Bruce fought side by side and were lovers for a time until it appeared she was killed. Kane converses with Renee Montoya. Layout by Keith Giffen. Cover art by J. Subsequently, all comic book titles published by DC Comics skip forward one year and a new maxi-series entitled 52 retroactively chronicles the 52 weeks which directly followed Infinite Crisis. In an interview with Newsarama, Ross states "They had me change the mask and hair to make it a bit more Batwoman, rather than Batgirl. It was really important to me to make sure every character felt unique. She is presented as having porcelain white skin, several tattoos, and a clothing style defined as punk-psychobilly-goth in her civilian persona. Her father is an ex-colonel and in Detective Comics, it is stated she is the cousin of Bette "Flamebird" Kane. The younger Kate also has a stepmother named Catherine Kane, [17] making Catherine the aunt of Bette. That year, Batwoman briefly took over as the lead character in Detective Comics, starting with From, the character began appearing in the self-titled series Batwoman. Williams III and W. Issue seventeen was also a milestone as it featured Kate proposing to her girlfriend, Maggie Sawyer. Haden Blackman announced that they would leave Batwoman after the December issue because of conflicts with DC over storylines. This is partly out of altruism and partly to attract the romantic attentions of Batman. During the Silver Age of Comics, Batwoman guest-starred occasionally in Batman stories published from to While Batman wished for Kane to retire from crime-fighting due to the danger, she remained his ally, even when she temporarily became a new version of Catwoman. In however, DC dropped Batwoman, as well as Bat-Girl, Ace the Bat-Hound, and Bat-Mite from the Batman titles, which were undergoing a revamp under editor Julius Schwartz that eliminated many of the sci-fi elements that were introduced in the s. The character would later reappear in the late s, [6] made guest appearances in the Batman Family and Freedom Fighters comic book series, often fighting crime alongside Barbara Gordon, who had become the new Batgirl. In the new continuity, Kathy Kane did exist, though her persona as Batwoman had been erased. Bat-Girl never existed either, but a superheroine named Flamebird was introduced who had a somewhat similar costume and similar name, "Bette Kane". Batman briefly recognizes her as "Kathy", but then quickly denies knowing her. Kathy, sans her Batwoman identity, was also referenced in a few post-Crisis publications. She eventually became a crime fighting ally to Batman, although she never used the Batwoman name. The encyclopedia entry explains that she eventually purchased a circus and was murdered by a member of the League of Assassins; however, Bronze Tiger was not her killer. Her murder was again recalled in Suicide Squad. Later Kathy appears in a flashback story in Batman, in a panel showing Batman and the original Batwoman kissing, with Robin showing his distrust of her and Bat-Girl. In this story, Kathy is referred to as "Katy" Kane. Grant Morrison later chose to heavily reimagine Kathy Kane in for his Batman Incorporated series. Nathan and Kathy were madly in love with one another, and it was Nathan who ended up buying Kathy her circus as a birthday present. As part of her first assignment, Kathy was tasked with tracking down Batman and discovering his true identity. As a result, she refused to reveal his identity to her superiors at Spyral. Later, Kathy was confronted by the head of Spyral, a Nazi supervillain named Dr. Dedalus Otto Netz who claimed to be her real father and threatened to expose her to Batman unless she continued her mission. Leviathan Strikes, students of an assassin training facility masquerading as St. Later, these women are shown to be agents of Spyral, dedicated to hunting down Talia al Ghul, whose organisation Leviathan is waging war with Batman. When Dick tries to leave the organisation behind, he knows he cannot because of the "Hypnos" implanted in his brain which allow him to hypnotise others and disguise his appearance, but also permit Spyral to monitor him always. Kathy, face disguised by hypnos, pursues Dick to Gotham and tells him to take the day to say goodbye to his friends but that he cannot leave Spyral. No Origins titles have been presented for Kate Kane; her fictional backstory is presented in Detective Comics through the use of exposition and flashbacks. In their early childhood, Katherine Rebecca "Kate" Kane and her sister Elizabeth "Beth" Kane were identical twins and were very close to each other. On their twelfth birthday their military father could not come home so Kate and Beth were taken by their mother, Gabrielle "Gabi" Kane, to an expensive restaurant for chocolate and waffles, their favorite dish. On the way to the restaurant, a group of gunmen attacked the family and took them hostage, killing their bodyguard in the process. Kate is attending the United States Military Academy, West Point, where she receives excellent grades and ranks at the top of her class. Telling the officer that she refuses to lie and violate the code of the Academy, Kate admits to being lesbian and is forced to leave the school. When she confronts her father with the news, he supports her and affirms that she upheld her honor and integrity. She then moves back to Gotham City where she attends college and pursues a wild social lifestyle, consisting of parties and tattoos. Kate is eventually pulled over for speeding by a young Renee Montoya, who was just a traffic cop at this point. While attempting to call Renee and apologize for her behavior, Kate is attacked by a mugger who wants her wallet and cell phone. Using her military training, Kate easily defeats the criminal just as Batman arrives and helps her off the ground. She is then shown fixated by the Bat Signal as Batman departs the scene. She also celebrates Hanukkah with Renee, and the two kiss shortly before Christmas. Montoya arrives too late to stop the ritual, finding Kate bound and gagged to an altar as prophet Bruno Mannheim plunges a knife through her heart. She survives her wounds after Renee stops the bleeding in time, however, and as she recuperates in her penthouse, Renee, disguised in her new alter ego as the Question, shines the Bat-Signal into her apartment and asks, "Are you ready? Batwoman also makes an appearance in the miniseries Crime Bible: The Five Lessons of Blood [47] alongside the Question. Her costume bears resemblance to the dead Fury Mad Harriet. She is also seen in Final Crisis: Revelations 3 attacking the Question after having just been infected with the Anti-Life Equation. Detective Comics lead feature[edit] Following the events of Final Crisis and Battle for the Cowl, in which Bruce Wayne has supposedly died and is replaced by Dick Grayson, Kate becomes the lead of Detective Comics from issue to In the first story, entitled "Elegy", Batwoman is seen investigating the arrival of a new leader of the Religion of Crime to Gotham. She briefly meets Batman it is intentionally left ambiguous whether or not it is Dick Grayson or Bruce Wayne [48] to discuss her findings. Batman concedes the case to her, and comments on the length of her hair though panels on the same page reveal the long red wig hides her actual hair, styled short. Her lateness and night time absences are interpreted by her girlfriend as an on the side liaison with another woman. She breaks the relationship off as she believes Kate is not ready to commit to an exclusive relationship. A past traumatic incident is also alluded to which she claims still haunts her. As she vaguely describes the experience, her face is shown superimposed on the page over a restrained girl with a bag over her head. She later tracks down the new leader of the Religion of Crime: Alice denies a connection to the Mad Hatter. While dancing with Maggie, Kate discovers that Alice has kidnapped her father and plans to destroy Gotham by spreading a deadly airborne chemical from a hijacked airplane, thus succeeding where Mannheim failed. However, Alice is accidentally thrown from the plane, only to be caught by Batwoman. With Batwoman stunned by the revelation, Alice stabs her in the wrist with a knife. Batwoman is forced to release her grip, sending Alice to her apparent demise in the river below. These scenes are depicted amongst numerous flashback sequences that comprise most of the issue. Throughout them, back story is provided from her childhood that depicts Kate, her twin sister Beth, and their mother being kidnapped. Kate is shown stalking the heroes from the rooftops after they encounter Clayface. The heroes request that Kate bring the body up to them, but she declines, telling them that she is much too busy due to a rash of criminal uprisings going on in Gotham. Firestorm is then sent to retrieve the corpse from Kate and bring it to the team, who discover that Dolores was forced into fighting by means of a mind control device. Cry for Justice 6, writer James Robinson revealed that Batwoman was initially intended to be part of his new Justice League line-up, but this plan fell apart after Cry For Justice was shortened into a miniseries rather than an ongoing title. Batwoman is kidnapped by cultists and taken to London in order for her to once again be sacrificed. She is sealed within a coffin and taken underground to the last remaining Lazarus Pit in order for the ritual to begin. As the battle takes place, the cultists who kidnapped Kate detonate explosives surrounding the Pit, causing a massive cave-in. Grayson discovers Kate, buried alive and with extensive injury to her spine and legs, and tries to help her. He eventually kidnaps Bette, but Kate tracks the killer to his lair and attacks him. Request a FREE consultation: In the Jewish religion, generally when a girl turns the age of 12 for Orthodox and Conservative and 13 for Reform there is a celebration where the girl becomes recognized as an adult woman. When I turned the age of 13, I had my own Bar Mitzvah, where my friends, family, and distant relatives I saw once upon a family reunion showed up to hear me belt out a poorly sung haftorah. The Bat the word meaning daughter Mitzvah celebration you will attend can range from something that will happen at the home with just a few friends and family to a lavish style wedding event at a country club. So, what in the world do you get the young woman on her special Bat Mitzvah day? The kid is only turning the age of 12 or 13! We also need to separate whether just your child is being invited to the event or you are being invited as an entire family. Unlike weddings, I do think it also matters how close you are to the actual child and family having the bat mitzvah. That being said, here are three ideas. The word for "life" in Hebrew is "chai. Chet is equivalent to 8 and yud is equivalent to 10. So "chai", chet and yud together, equals 18. You can look at a website such as www.chai.com. There are also ideas such as Kabbalah bracelets and other interesting necklaces that can be appropriate. You could make a special donation to a charity in the name of the person having the Bat Mitzvah as well, although not my most recommended option. Another cool idea would be to set up a small trip to an area so the young woman can start to see different parts of the country. No matter what your faith, gift giving is always one of the toughest challenges we have in making day to day smart money moves. Once you get there the damage is done one way or another, so make sure to at least get into a little Hava Nagila action and carry a leg of the chair during the joyous festivities. Of British parentage, John Sutton was born in Rawalpindi, India (now part of Pakistan), on October 22. After graduating from Wellington College, he spent a decade or so working in various British colonies, including several in Africa, as a hunter, rancher and tea plantation manager.

The eastern sky is growing bright, and I can see the fleecy clouds blush rosy red as the sun looks at them. They had been flying through the starlit forest [Pg] all night, chasing the many small insects that come out after the sun has gone down, and passing in and out of the tangled branches without ever touching one. Indeed, Mamma Bat would have been ashamed if children of hers flew against anything in the dark. She would have scolded them well, and they would have deserved it, for Bats have the most wonderful way of feeling things before they touch them, and there are no other people in the forest who can do that. There are no other people who can tell by the feeling of the air when something is near, and the Bats made much fun of their friend, the Screech Owl, once, when he flew against a tree and fell to the ground. And now the night was over and their mother had called them to go home. One of the little Bats hung back with a very cross look on his face, and twice his father had to tell him to fly faster. He was thinking how he would like to see the forest in the daytime. He had never seen the sun rise, and he wanted to do that. He had never seen any of the day-birds or the animals that awaken in the morning. He thought it was pretty mean to make poor little Bats go off to bed the minute the stars began to fade. Every morning he had to fold his wings and go to sleep in a dark crack in the rock of the cave, hanging, head downward, close to the rest of the family. Their father said that there never was a better place to sleep than in this same crack, and it certainly was easy to catch on with the hooks at the lower ends of their wings when they hung themselves up for the day. Fly away at once and let us go to sleep. He guessed he knew how to take care of himself, even in daylight. He felt sorry for his brothers who were in the cave, but he made up his mind that he would tell them all about it the next night. The eastern sky grew brighter and brighter. It hurt his eyes to look at it, and he blinked and turned away. Then the song-birds awakened and began to sing. It was very interesting, but he thought they sang too loudly. The night-birds never made such a fuss over the moon, and he guessed the moon was as good as the sun. Somebody went scampering over the grass, kicking up his heels as he ran. I wish I could see him more plainly. How warm it is! The moonbeams do not feel so. I must fly to a shady corner. Just what was the matter, he never knew. A Crow had seen him fall, and cried loudly, "Come! The Rabbits, who were feeding near by, came scampering along, making great leaps in their haste to see what was the matter. The Goldfinches, the Robins, the Orioles, the Woodpeckers, and many other birds came fluttering up. Even a Blue Jay sat on a branch above the Bat and shrieked, "Jay! And last of all, the Ground Hog appeared, coming slowly and with dignity, as a person who can remember his grandfather should do. He might have said, "What is the matter? He thought he had to use big words once in a while to show that he could. That is no bird," said a Woodpecker. He must come of a very common family. For my part, I am not interested in persons of that kind. Now the other forest people would have liked to watch the Bat longer, but after the Ground Hog had gone off in this way, they thought it would show too much curiosity if they stayed. So one after another went away, and the little Bat was left alone. He fluttered around until he reached the branch where the Blue Jay had been, and there he hung himself up to wait until night. I only wish I could see what they look like. I believe they are just as homely.

Bat-Mite idolizes Batman, and thus he has visited Batman on various occasions, often setting up strange events so that he could see his hero in action. Bat-Mite is arguably more of a nuisance than an enemy to Batman, and often leaves the hero alone when he realizes that he has angered his idol.
