The performance today of "My Heart in a Suitcase" was very powerful and extremely well done. My students were able to make connections to events that we've been studying in class such as Kristallnacht and the Kindertransport.

The role of Hannah will also be performed by Mackenzie Kruyf not pictured on different nights of the play, which has a five-performance run at Lindsay Little Theatre until May. Silva, this award-winning British play sports strong performances in an emotionally charged show. Tickets are available in person or by phone at the Academy Theatre box office 2 Lindsay St. Containing a multitude of various subjects, including PTSD, depression, illness, fear, and class conflict, the play earned McIntyre the most promising playwright award from The London Evening Standard and quickly became a fixture of feminist literature. As Hannah embraces life, Chris wallows in self-pity and fear, which manifests in the form of two figures in her own mind: Silva, a product of her mental and emotional trauma. Playwright Clare McIntyre died from multiple sclerosis at the age of 57 in 1994, 24 years after she was first diagnosed with the disease. Meanwhile, the girls encounter another pair of intruders in their ill-fated weekend getaway: Forever searching for an answer to their place in the world, the girls seek solace in an uncompromising world where, ultimately, their only sense of peace is based on their frame of mind. But through the talents of the performers on stage, the problematic script is well executed. Angry, depressed, and self-isolated, Chris is captive to her emotional fears as well as her crippling cynicism. CBC Anwen manages to bring something likeable and sympathetic to her hostile and toxic character. This is partially due to her inner conversations with Luggage and Pest, but mainly because of the conviction in her performance. Ilan makes every sentence count with her unusually quiet and understated tone that steals every scene. The two sisters have a natural patter with one another, with Ilan getting the cute moments. Silva as the horrifying Pest, a subconscious product of her emotional trauma, in some of the most disturbing and tense moments of the show. Katisha Shaw plays the maternal Luggage with passion and kindness, bringing heart to an often-harsh script, while Vasco J. Silva gives an unnerving performance as Pest in some of the most disturbing and tense moments of the show. In his stage debut, Andre Canivet creates the pathetic figure of a sad and hopeless man in Elliot, who proves that having money will not bring you happiness. He also has a disturbing chemistry with Ilan, whose on-stage fear of the strange man brings forth a very real sense of potential danger. Deliciously blunt in her delivery, Tori creates tension on the stage that can be both funny and hostile. Paired with Ilan, the two create the highlight of the show with their painfully awkward conversation as one woman who is unsatisfied despite having everything and another woman who is happy despite having nothing. These intrusions and the lack of safe spaces send a powerful, albeit understated, message that the women are not in control of the world around them. Filled with emotion, the play will mean different things to different people.
