Making a Name for Ourselves Lyrics: Yeah, yeah, me and my man Common Sense / Rallying troops like Joseph Stalin / Where you at, yo? / I'm about to make the name Common Sense a name you fear / Y.

It is natural, when living in the flesh, for people to want to make a name for themselves. Christianity, however, teaches just the opposite. Making a Name for Ourselves Theme: Whose name are we trying to promote: As parents, we desire this for our children as well. The people of men are taught to become children of God. Masters of slaves were taught to serve their master in heaven. If you want to be greatest exalted in the kingdom, you must become the least humbled. In this lesson we shall see: The downfall of men who desire to make a name for themselves. When we strive to glorify the Name above all names, how our names shall be glorified forever. Started their worldly history through the lineage of Ham. From came the Canaanites: What the people did that was arrogant, full of pride, and in rebellion against God. The first few things are seemingly innocent: Next is somewhat questionable: What they did on a humanistic level seemed good and right in their own eyes. The totality of this passage reveals that there was a complete disregard for Jehovah. Such disregard reared its ugly head since the beginning of time and continues today. A person who desires to magnify the name of our God. Abraham was the first person revealed to be calling on His name. Those who follow after the example of Abraham do the same in worshiping the Name above all names. This is a person who is humble and lowly, easily walking in the footsteps of His Master. He seeks not his own glory because in the great scheme of things, he has none to boast of. Instead, he seeks to glory in the Creator, the Redeemer, the Savior of mankind. In the end, God will exalt his lowly servant as He exalted His own Son. Humble yourself and God will exalt you in due time. God opposes the proud arrogant, like those who try to make a name for themselves, but gives grace to the humble. Think soberly on your goals and deeds in life: Humble yourself, be a servant and may God fulfill His promise to exalt your name in due time.

Babel: Let Us Make A Name for Ourselves. Genesis James R. Davis. A few months ago I visited a graveyard where the remains of my parents, grandparents and other relatives are buried.

The object of the builders was twofold: There was probably some one able and ambitious mind at the bottom of this purpose, and doubtless it had very many advantages: Pulpit Commentary Verse 4. Being impelled by their success in making bricks for their dwellings Lange , though the resolution to be mentioned may have been the cause of their brick-making Bush. Go to, let us build us a city. Not as a distinct erection, but as forming a part, as it were the Acre-polls, of the city Bochart. Whose top may reach unto heaven. Literally, and his head in the heavens, a hyperbolical expression for a tower of great height, as in Deuteronomy 1: This tower is commonly identified with the temple of Belus, which Herodotus describes 1. Partially destroyed by Xerxes B. It is, however, prima facie, unlikely that either Babil or Birs-Nimrod is the exact site of Babel. The original building was never finished, and may not have attained any great dimensions. Perhaps the most that can be said is that these existing mounds enable us to picture what sort of erection the tower of Babel was to be. This was the first impelling motive to the erection of the city and tower. The offspring of ambition, it was designed to spread abroad their fame usque ad ultimos terrarum fines Calvin. According to Philo, each man wrote his name upon a brick before he built it in. The second was to establish a rallying point that might serve to maintain their unity. Lest we be scattered abroad. What the builders dreaded was not the recurrence of a flood Josephus, Lyra , but the execution of the Divine purpose intimated in Genesis 9: Upon the face of the whole earth. Over the entire surface of the globe, and not simply over the land of Shiner Inglis , or over the immediate region in which they dwelt Clericus,. Dathe, et alii, ut supra. Matthew Henry Commentary Though the desolations of the deluge were before their eyes, though they sprang from the stock of righteous Noah, yet even during his life-time, wickedness increases exceedingly. Nothing but the sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit can remove the sinful lusts of the human will, and the depravity of the human heart. In contempt of the Divine will, and against the counsel of Noah, the bulk of mankind united to build a city and a tower to prevent their separating. Idolatry was begun, and Babel became one of its chief seats. They made one another more daring and resolute. Let us learn to provoke one another to love and to good works, as sinners stir up and encourage one another to wicked works.

3: grammar - When to use 'ourselves' vs. 'our self' - English Language & Usage Stack Exchange

Genesis A Name for Ourselves. The Rev. Dr. James D. Kegel. GLORY TO THE FATHER AND TO THE SON AND TO THE HOLY SPIRIT, AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING, IS NOW.

I myself will challenge the winner. I gave myself a good rubdown. She asked me for a picture of myself. My wife and myself fully agree. She wanted John and myself to take charge. The originators of the plan were my partner and myself. He knows as much about the matter as myself. After a few days of rest, I expect to be myself again. Questions are raised, however, when the -self forms are used instead of the personal pronouns I, me, etc. Myself occurs only rarely as a single subject in place of I: Myself was the one who called. The recorded instances of such use are mainly poetic or literary. It is also uncommon as a simple object in place of me: Since the letter was addressed to myself, I opened it. As part of a compound subject, object, or complement, myself and to a lesser extent the other -self forms are common in informal speech and personal writing, somewhat less common in more formal speech and writing: The manager and myself completed the arrangements. Many came to welcome my husband and myself back to Washington. Myself and other -self forms are also used, alone or with other nouns or pronouns, in constructions after as, than, or but in all varieties of speech and writing: The captain has far more experience than myself in such matters. Orders have arrived for everyone but the orderlies and yourself. There is ample precedent, going as far back as Chaucer and running through the whole range of British and American literature and other serious formal writing, for all these uses. Many usage guides, however, state that to use myself in any construction in which I or me could be used instead as My daughter and myself play the flute instead of My daughter and I, or a gift for my husband and myself instead of for my husband and me is characteristic only of informal speech and that such use ought not to occur in writing.

There will be major decisions to be made from a political perspective. Do we go with God? How may we make a difference? We would do good to take a lesson from history. The early church was in its early stages of development, by having to fight the political religious character Acts 4: Yes, if we, as His people, will turn to him He will heal our land. Notice, however, God has left this promise rather open ended. And if this be the case, what should we expect? The scripture gives many examples of this, starting with the major disobedience of them all, that has effected mankind forever. That being the fall of man in the Garden of Eden. This defiance against God continued at the tower of Babel, in which God stop their building plan by confusing their language Genesis That of leaving God out of our plans. It would surely be OK, if our intention was to give God the glory for our accomplishments. However, by leaving God out of our preparation, as was the case at Babel, we as a country are treading on a rotten foundation. And what about those Israelites, having to wonder in the desert for forty years, due to their disobedience. When God is left out of any preparation, Romans 1: Happenings such as a presumptive a path of lawlessness, civil disobedience, political corruption, economy woes, and increased natural disasters You see, we serve a Holy God and He cannot go against His written word. Neither can He tolerate evil. How do we face the rightful decision?. Do we give support to evil trends? And if so, does that make us sinners as well? Or, if we resist these trends, are we not being good citizens? Pray that the Lord will speak to you through this scripture and through the ministry of His Holy Spirit. Confess if you need too. Ask for his help to obey if you need to. Be open to encouragement and or correction from these believer. And above all, ask them to remember you in prayer. Be a doer of the Word, not a hearer only James 1: You may find it very hard to do what God wants you to do. Be assured, however, God will provide the strength you need if you depend on him. In other words, we as Christians should love the sinner but hate the sin. We should be bold in the sinners presence by retaining our Christian witness, but never give in to the sinful dictates of the sinner. Charles Stanley has a very good interview on YouTube, entitled " turning the tide" Please take time to watch the video. It is about 15 minutes. And for those of you who have not seen the video, it is a very good message, as to where we may be headed, based on scripture Blessing to all, just keep the faith, God is still on the throne.

Davis A few months ago I visited a graveyard where the remains of my parents, grandparents and other relatives are buried. I went around reading the tombstones noticing who had died since I had last visited. I noticed a very, very large tombstone, it was the largest tombstone in the cemetery, and it was a new tombstone with the name etched across it in very big bold letters. I knew the name and the people; they were actually distant relatives. As a child we often visited them. The amazing thing was that their tombstone was so big. They had the tombstone erected before they died. I was surprised to see such a large tombstone. They lived relatively simple lives and lived in a very modest house. I always thought of them as all but recluses. The tragedy was not her loss of job. She learned that she needed lung surgery and the outcome might not be good. She decided to pose so that the world would remember her. There is something about walking across the stage of life only once and knowing that we will never return this way again that makes us feel very insecure. I guess we all have a tendency to fear anonymity and this gives us an inclination to erect something that at least says that we were here. Much of what we say and do is directed toward building a self-image. By that I mean that we endeavor to project an image for others to see and remember us by. We buy certain brand name clothes for ourselves because these clothes project an image of success. It is ironic that the first clothes made by man were to cover his shame, now we use them to build a name for ourselves. What was originally a curse we turn into our glory in an effort to build a name for ourselves. We buy a car because of what it says about the one who is driving it. How much of our finances go into building an image for our selves. How much of our energies go into building monuments to ourselves? The people in the land of Shinar or Babylon seek to become famous by building a magnificent city and tower. Their ambitions consume them. Notice their hortatory statements beginning with "Let us": Let us make bricks and burn them thoroughly vs. In the outset of chapter 11 we see the people of the earth coming together to erect a tower in order to make a name for themselves. In the beginning of chapter 12 we see God calling Abram and promising to make his name great. There is nothing sinful in and of its self in building a city and a tower. The real sin is the self-centered attitude of the heart that often motivates such activity: Let us make a name for ourselves. Many worldly-minded individuals have been driven to long and hard work and to impressive achievements by the desire to become famous. Much of our efforts and accomplishments are directed toward building monuments to our insecurities. Robert Deffinbaugh wrote, "Behind the facade of achievement, accomplishment, bravado and self-assurance is the haunting spectra of leaving this life with no certainty of what is to follow. That in my estimation, is the real reason for the building of the city of Babel and its tower. The people of that day were willing to make nearly any sacrifice to have some hope of immortality. As men moved eastward, they found a plain in Shinar and settled there. Then they said, "Come, let us build ourselves a city, with a tower that reaches to the heavens, so that we may make a name for ourselves and not be scattered over the face of the whole earth. It seems as though Moses stresses the insignificance of the tower. God had to descend to scrutinize the city that was being built. This is portrayed by God having to come down and observe what man was doing. You are looking to see the top and it seems to pierce the sky. But imagine seeing it from the Space Shuttle as you orbit earth. It seems mighty insignificant from the heavens. What a mighty feat man accomplished in building it but it is as insignificant as an anthill in the scheme of things. Then he rebukes them in his anger and terrifies them in his wrath, saying, "I have installed my King on Zion, my holy hill. Cemeteries have always fascinated me. I guess that it is the realization of knowing that is where I am going to eventually end up that makes them so fascinating. Several years ago I visited an old cemetery that I used to play in as a child. I noticed the tombstones that were placed there since I was a child. There was a particularly prominent family in that town where I lived. Some of them of them had died since my childhood. Their gravesites were more elaborate than the rest. Huge slabs of granite were placed over their graves. Yet I noticed that the roots of a giant oak tree had already begun to push the huge slabs aside. It was another reminder to me that however elaborate the monuments we build to ourselves, they will eventually become monuments to our shame. As for you, be fruitful and increase in number; multiply on the earth and increase upon it. But the people chose to rebel. We just took a vacation and while traveling I noticed a large building that was partially built. The building looked big enough to be a huge warehouse or even a large department store. But there was evidence that construction had stopped on it a long time ago. I was amazed at how much had been built before the construction stopped. Trees and bushes were growing up all around it and the blocks were very weather beaten. The tower in Genesis that was intended to be a monument to their ingenuity and industry turned out to be a monument to their plans thwarted by the hand of God. As long as the remains of that tower stood, it reminded them of their failure to make a name for themselves. We tend to think that the work of our hands will assure us of some kind of immortality beyond the grave. I watched an interview of one of the older country western singers who had recently been inducted to the Country Music Hall of Fame. He was asked how he felt about this honor; he said, "They have immortalized me through this recognition of my work. This tower is sort of an architectural symbol, a means for them to assert their greatness. If men were allowed to build this city, despite the many obstacles, then men would erroneously conclude that they could do anything they set their minds to. A bit of that mentality was evidenced when man first set foot on the moon. If you recall what was said, "One small step for man, one giant step for mankind. In our time we are just a bit more sophisticated. We trust in transistors, integrated circuits, and technology. We feel that if we can put a man on the moon and play with mobile probes on Mars, nothing can keep us from solving any problems. It is always true, wherever God is deposed some substitute has to be created to bind men together in some fashion or other. God was no longer the center of gravity for their lives. They sought another cohesive force and so they turned to the superficial. They began to look at the work of their hands as the cure rather than the curse. Governments are good at creating the superficial in an effort to pull people together. Perhaps, you start a war in order to divert attention from internal political dissension and thus create a new solidarity by making people feel that they are facing a common threat. Or you can use propaganda in order to generate the feeling of community and you can cause the people to want what you want. What is amazing about the first few chapters of Genesis is that God is teaching us that He is not replaceable. There is no replacement for God. If He is not the center, then you will have no center. Noah accepted God as the center of his world and he survived. It was God that gave him something to stay afloat. They were told to multiply and fill the earth and replenish it. The LORD said, "If as one people speaking the same language they have begun to do this, then nothing they plan to do will be impossible for them. Come, let us go down and confuse their language so they will not understand each other. From there the LORD scattered them over the face of the whole earth. God does not fear man as a formidable rival. God knew that if they succeeded, an attitude of arrogant self-confidence would follow. They would become even more self-centered and eventually they would destroy themselves. So God prevented their success. The same thing took place when God drove man from Eden. He must not be allowed to reach out his hand and take also from the tree of life and eat, and live forever. After he drove the man out, he placed on the east side of the Garden of Eden cherubim and a flaming sword flashing back and forth to guard the way to the tree of life.

6: LET US MAKE A NAME FOR OURSELVES

make a name for (oneself) To establish oneself in a particular field or area; to become well-known. It took a long time and a bunch of supporting roles, but I've finally made.

The Tower of Babel: Come, let us go down and confuse their language so they will not understand each other. From there the LORD scattered them over the face of the whole earth. Bricks that flake, chip, and crumble. When God had Solomon build His temple all the stone blocks were hammered into shape at the quarry and then transported to the temple site so that the noise of the sculpting of the stones would not have to be heard. Here on earth God allows us to be hammered into shape by the people He surrounds us with. All the noise from the chipping and sculpting is happening now, down here, in the quarry that we call life on earth. This was a trap for them, and is for you and for me as well. God lead us away from both of these. But the LORD came down to see the city and the tower the people were building. Speaking the same language enables mankind to accomplish amazing things. But along with that capability comes a cost. I have several friends who would never buy a pornographic magazine yet their lives have been damaged by pornography on the internet. Like me, you probably know of someone, or several someones, whose marriage has ended because of a relationship that started on the internet. Imposed limitation usually carries with it a negative connotation but if you think it through, limitations are often positive. I thank God for that. Who is God talking to? I believe this to be another reference to the Trinity. So the LORD scattered them from there over all the earth, and they stopped building the city. This was made possible by the disciples seeking and receiving the Holy Spirit. As I have loved you, so you must love one another. By this everyone will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another.
