1: New minor forcing explained

New Minor Forcing (NMF), is a contract bridge bidding convention used to find a or major suit fit after a specific sequence of bids in which opener has rebid one notrump.

New Minor Forcing What are the problems? Does partner has a minimum or a maximum 1NT rebid and does she have 3-card support for our major. More complex problems Invite or force game in hearts when responder has five spades and four or more hearts. Decide between 3 NT or 5-of-minor. What is the best game with three possibilities? The game, slam, and grand slam decision. These ideas apply to third-suit and fourth-suit forcing auctions. The flavors of new-minor forcing: Opener makes the most natural bid at the two level with a minimum and the most natural bid at the three level with a maximum. To help the defenders, proponents show four hearts before spade support. There are two or three bids available with a minimum, and exactly one bid with a maximum. Opener bids 2NT or jump raises with a maximum. There is no "new" in this definition. Most often to show an invitational hand in the major. In all flavors, a minimum continuation allows a stop at 2NT. If opener shows 3-card support at the two-level, responder can pass. Continuations above 2NT are forcing, and often suggest slam. I think all of his examples can be solved with seat-of-the-pants bidding after the first four bids. I am going to poll the group and present the new-minor style that people prefer. Votes for the natural style will be ignored. In this draft I assume the Walsh style wins. New-Minor Forcing Walsh Style.
