Nina won't tell is an excellent book from the series Making Out, all written by Katherine Applegate. It deals with 2 separate topics that Nina won't talk about.

It makes sense from an intellectual standpoint. From an early age women learn to cultivate close, intimate relationships and they learn what makes them feel cared for and understood. But then when you give it to him, it feels amazing. He feels appreciated and loved, and he comes to love you even more. And with that, here are the top five things guys secretly love and want from you, but will seldom ask for. When you ask for his advice You know how amazing it feels when your man cherishes and adores you and showers you with love? Well he gets the same feeling when you ask for his advice. Men have an overwhelming need to feel useful, to feel like they have something of value to offer. This is true in all areas of his life and especially so in relationships. He wants to feel like he is adding to your life in a meaningful way, and you can help him feel this way by soliciting his advice and opinions. When I get relationship questions from readers I love sharing them with my husband just to get his take and insights. And he absolutely lights up when given the chance to offer his input. Men in general are very solution-oriented and thrive when there is something to be solved. And if your guy does this, try not to get angry at him, just kindly tell him you appreciate his advice, but right now you just want his emotional support. A huge turn-on for a man is seeing how turned on his woman is by him! How to Turn a Man On 4. When you tell him what you want in a way that makes him feel good Men want to make the woman they are with happy; this is actually one of the biggest driving forces for a man in a relationship. The right way does not include nagging, guilt, lecturing, or shaming. It entails lovingly telling him what you like and what you want in a way that makes him feel good. He also feels like a little kid being scolded by mommy for misbehaving. When you tell him what you want in a way that makes him feel good, he feels good about doing it and good about himself because he knows how to make you happy. Support One of the greatest feelings to a man in a relationship is feeling like he has a woman in his corner, someone who believes in him no matter what and sees him for the great man he is and the amazing man he could be. There is comfort in knowing that you will be there for him even if he fails, especially since failure is the hardest thing for men to deal with. When you support him and believe in him, and it comes from a true and genuine place, he feels on top of the world, like he can do anything. All the five things listed actually fall under the umbrella of the number one thing all men want but will never tell you and that is appreciation. As I mentioned, men are starved for your approval and they need to feel like winners. The worst thing you can do is to expect certain things from him or act entitled. Show appreciation for his good qualities, his values, his ambitions, his life choices. Find those things you love about him and show him you appreciate them. This is probably the most powerful and transformative relationship skill that you can ever master. Got something else to add? Share it in comments! Other Must-See Related Posts:
