In addition, the bride had eight bridesmaids, all of whom were unmarried daughters of British Dukes and Earls: Lady Diana Beauclerk, daughter of the Duke of St. Her veil, trimmed with the same lace as her gown, featured English roses, Irish shamrocks and Scottish thistles, and was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms and myrtle atop her head. She wore a pearl necklace, earrings and brooch given to her by The Prince of Wales, an opal and diamond bracelet from Queen Victoria, another opal and diamond bracelet from the Ladies of Manchester, and a diamond bracelet from the Ladies of Leeds. She carried a bouquet of orange blossoms, white rosebuds, lily of the valley, orchids and myrtle. The stem features a band of emeralds and diamonds with a jeweled coronet; the foot is formed of a ball of crystal with rubies and diamonds. By turning the ball, the foot springs open into four supports, in each of which is a plume and cipher. Attached to the holder is a chain of gold and pearls, and a hoop ring of eight pearls. The Ceremony painting by William Frith, c This would be the first of many royal weddings at St. Guests began to arrive at the Chapel at The Diplomatic Corps were the last to take their seats before the royal processions began. Carriage processions began from Windsor Castle at The last procession was the bride. The Queen, still in mourning, made her way privately to the chapel, and did not take part in the carriage procession. Just before noon, Queen Victoria, escorted by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, made her way to the Catherine of Aragon Closet, a room with an oriel window overlooking the left side of the altar. She can be seen in the upper right of the picture above At They too stopped to bow to The Queen, who had now stood and come to the front of the balcony to receive their homage. Last to process was the bride, accompanied by her father and the Duke of Cambridge both in full uniform and decorations. After she reached the altar and curtsied to The Queen, the choir sang a chant which had been written by The Prince Consort. Overcome with emotion, The Queen was seen to cry and step back, out of view from those gathered below. The ceremony was conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury. It began with the couple taking their vows, followed by a brief service of readings, prayers and an homily from the Archbishop. Following the benediction, the couple joined hands, turned to bow and curtsy to The Queen and began their procession out of the chapel. At this point, The Queen made her way quietly back to the castle. The Witnesses As is traditional at British royal weddings, many of the royal guests served as witnesses for the marriage register. Other signers included the Danish Minister, church dignitaries, the Lord Chancellor and other ministers of the Crown. Irish Independent Following the wedding, the bride and groom, and their royal guests, processed back to Windsor Castle by carriage, arriving at the Grand Entrance where Edward and Alexandra were met by Queen Victoria. They made their way to the Green Drawing Room and then the White Drawing Room, where the marriage register was signed. Lunch was then served in the State Dining Room for the royal guests, and in St. There were two wedding cakes, one in each venue. The cake in the State Dining Room was octagonal, featuring a square altar at the center, and a Cupid on each angle holding a piece of wedding cake. The cake in St. It was octagonal in shape, and displayed the arms of the Prince of Wales, the new Princess of Wales, Great Britain and Denmark alternately on each side. It was decorated with orange blossoms and jasmine, and surmounted by a vase filled with a jasmine bouquet. At 4pm, the newly married couple took leave of their guests, and traveled by open carriage, accompanied by a guard of honor from the Coldstream Guards, to Paddington Station where they boarded a train which took them to Osborne House on the Isle of Wight for their honeymoon.

Marriages of the Prince of Wales have been fairly rare events in English history: that of Prince Charles is only the sixth since the creation of the title. The last one was that of his great-great-grandfather, later King Edward VII, in

It was the first marriage of a reigning English Queen for years. The three tiered wedding cake weighed pounds and had decorations including busts of the couple on the top tier. This was the happiest day of my life! The cake was elaborately iced and is decorated with flowers. Princess Louise, who was the fourth daughter of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, became an unofficial secretary to her mother before meeting Campbell. She only agreed to her marrying Prince Henry of Battenberg if the couple would promise to stay living with her â€” which they did. They were married at St. The cake created for their wedding day was 10 feet high. On the first tier were reproductions of Windsor Castle and St. Other details included cupids ringing tiny silver wedding bells on ladders leading to the top of the cake. After their wedding reception, the cake was put on display in Reading, where members of the public queued around the block for a glimpse. It produced 2, slices for guests and hundreds more were sent on to charities and organizations. Each tier of the cake was carefully shaped in the form of a hexagon. The cake was 5 feet tall and weighed pounds. His Royal Highness was touring a small exhibition of societies and organizations associated with the welsh village, where Etta is from. The cake was a eight-tiered traditional fruit cake which stood at 3 feet tall. A further 17 sugar flowers, that had special meaning to the couple, were added, including sweet William and myrtle, which symbolizes love and marriage. You seem to be logged out. With a s platinum setting, it is composed of a square-cut central diamond flanked by six diamond baguettes. In fact, the marriage of a divorced person whose ex-spouse is still living has been possible in the Church of England, at the discretion of the member of clergy conducting the ceremony, since Remarriage of divorcees is less controversial in the Church of Scotland, and the sovereign has no constitutional role in the governance of the Church. Questioning a royal civil wedding[edit] The Prince was the first member of the royal family to marry in a civil ceremony in England. Stephen Cretney, a Fellow at All Souls College, Oxford , questioned whether Charles and Camilla could marry in a civil ceremony, as the Royal Family was specifically excluded from the law which instituted civil marriages in England Marriage Act Civil marriages were introduced in England, by the Marriage Act Section 45 said that the Act " But the provisions on civil marriage in the Act were repealed by the Marriage Act All remaining parts of the Act, including Section 45, were repealed by the Registration Service Act No part of the Act therefore remains on the statute book. We are aware that different views have been taken in the past; but we consider that these were overcautious, and we are clear that the interpretation I have set out in this Statement is correct. We also note that the Human Rights Act has since required legislation to be interpreted wherever possible in a way that is compatible with the right to marry Article 12 and with the right to enjoy that right without discrimination Article This, in our view, puts the modern meaning of the Act beyond doubt. On 22 February, Buckingham Palace announced that the Queen would not attend the wedding ceremony, but would attend the church blessing and host the reception afterwards. On 4 April, it was announced that the wedding would be postponed 24 hours until 9 April, so that the Prince of Wales could attend the funeral of Pope John Paul II as the representative of the Queen. The postponement also allowed some of the dignitaries who were invited to the funeral to attend the wedding. In keeping with tradition, the Prince of Wales spent the night apart from his bride-to-be at Highgrove House , his country mansion in Gloucestershire , with his sons Princes William and Harry. Crowds had gathered on the streets since dawn ahead of the service. The ceremony was attended by senior members of the royal family apart from the Queen and Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh. The tradition of using Clogau Gold within the wedding rings of the Royal Family dates back to The prince wears his on the small finger of his left hand. We acknowledge and bewail our manifold sins and wickedness, Which we, from time to time, most grievously have committed, by thought, word and deed, Against thy Divine Majesty, Provoking most justly thy wrath and indignation against us. For the Service of Prayer and Dedication afterward, she wore a floor-length embroidered pale blue and gold coat over a matching chiffon gown and a dramatic spray of golden feathers in her hair. For the wedding day, the theme park Alton Towers changed the name of their rollercoaster "Rita: Queen of Speed" to "Camilla: Television commercials and signs around the park were all updated to reflect this change. The BBC had around thirty cameras at the event and shared footage with broadcasters throughout the world.

St John tells us how Jesus shared in such an occasion at Cana, and gave there a sign of new beginnings as he turned water into wine. Marriage is intended by God to be a creative relationship, as his blessing enables husband and wife to love and support each other in good times and in bad, and to share in the care and upbringing of children. For Christians, marriage is also an invitation to share life together in the spirit of Jesus Christ. It is based upon a solemn, public and life-long covenant between a man and a woman, declared and celebrated in the presence of God and before witnesses. You are witnesses of the marriage, and express your support by your presence and your prayers. Your support does not end today: Prince Harry and Meghan Markle: The Opus Dei, or daily round of prayer, is offered by the members of the College who live in the precincts of the Chapel and whose duty it is to pray morning and evening for the Sovereign and the Companions of the Order of the Garter. There are twenty-three services each week, all of which are open to members of the public. Most of the coloured bosses on the roof of the Chapel bear the badges and arms of King Henry VII and those of his servants who helped to build part of the Chapel, finished in 1519. The great coloured glass West Window is one of the finest in England and is said to be the third largest in the country; in seventy-five lights, the vast majority of which date from between 1519 and 1525, it depicts a host of warrior saints, archbishops and kings and, in the bottom right hand corner, with hammer in hand the likeness of William Vertue the mason and architect responsible for the building of the Nave and Quire Vault. Each stall is a work of art and a triumph of craftsmanship, each unique in its detail. The Lady Companions do not bear arms. On the back of the stalls are nearly plates which commemorate Knights of the Garter past and present. Also displayed are three gilt dishes of very great size, elaborately embossed; one was intended to have been the gift of Mary of Orange, sister of King Charles II, while the other two smaller dishes are the gift of Anne Hyde, Duchess of York, wife of the future King James II. It has frequently been used as a Royal Pew or watching chamber and it was from this vantage point that Queen Victoria watched the wedding in the Chapel below of her son, the Prince of Wales, to Princess Alexandra of Denmark on 10 March. It was at this same wedding that the fine East Window, created by Messrs Clayton and Bell in commemoration of the late Prince Albert, was first seen. Prayer send your blessing upon Harry and Meghan, and all who are joined in marriage, that, rejoicing in your will and continuing under your protection, they may both live and grow in your love all their days, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen Who is doing what? For the Procession of the Bride, they are joined by: The State Trumpeters of the Household Cavalry.
