This can seem a little overwhelming as no doubt you would love the first room your baby lives in to be just perfect and really make it a calming and happy place for your baby to wake up to. There are many different styles you can paint your babies room in. You can choose to have it traditionally colour themed to their gender or create a paint scheme that is gender neutral. And as well as colour you could use setting themes like a beach theme with blues and sandy yellows, a jungle theme with greens and splashes of bright colour. Baby Nursery Color Palettes When painting your babies nursery the first thing is to choose your colours. A colour palette is a range of colours that mix in well together and that combined help to get across the theme that you are trying to create. Starting with choosing your colour palette first is the best way to go as it is something you can always refer back to when deciding what colour to paint what. So if you start by putting together a string colour palette then you will be able to always come back to that to make your decisions easier and ensure the theme is carried smoothly through out the room and that it looks well put together not just a mish mash of colours you may like.

The Princess Room The Princess room is painted with delicate colours, shades of pink and purple and even touches of gold. The furniture in the typical princess room is often white or pearl and in more dainty designs. Having a floral designed room can be perfect for those who prefer a splash more of colour. With a big feature wall you can really have some fun. Use bolder violets and splashed orange and fuchsia. Or stick to softer colours of mauve and cornflower blue to brighten the walls. If you choose to have just one feature wall you can still extend the theme around the rest of the room by using the same colours to paint photo frames on the planer walls and even stick up some beautiful big paper flowers for a more 3D effect that will be sure to give your baby something to look at.

The Feminine Adventurer Tipis and arrow designs are right on trend at the moment, and for good reason they are simply adorable and kids love letting their wild side out. Mostly this would seem like a boys theme but you can also soften your colours and create a cute girly theme perfect for your little wild angel. You can stick with a more neutral palette for this one or get a little bolder with the colours using bright pinks, reds, light greens and sunny yellows. Arrow motifs on the walls in gold and pink and matching paper or fabric bunting strung up above the crib adds an extra level of cuteness.

The Intergalactic Room Boys often have a deep interest in space so why not starting him off young and fill his room with planets and aliens? A great starting palette for a space room is your deep greys, bright reds, primary blues and some alien green thrown in for good measure. If you want to get fully creative you can always do a full feature wall with planets and rocket ships blasting through the universe and then keep the rest of the room colours neutral with hints of the brightness from your feature wall. Of you can opt for the round room idea and use wall art stickers of your own stenciling to paint on your planets aliens and space ships around the whole room.

The Cowboys and Indians Room A tougher version of the girls wild child nursery, adding a tipi with bold stripes and bunting featuring vintage drawings of westerns and bold patterns can be a fun addition to this style of room. You can choose to have bold colours for one or more of the walls, mustards maroons and blues look great together in this kind of room. Use Chevron zig zags to really spice things up.

The Nautical Room If you are after some a little more traditional and softer try a nautical theme for your baby boy. Using traditional soft baby blues on the walls either painted in a block or mixed with large blue and white stripes. This room is a little less themed and a bit more soothing but still has a big cute factor. Decorate with pictures of anchors, sail boats and Lighthouses and if you are wanting a few more splashes of colour try some navy blue and red trimmings to give the room a little more depth. By mixing and matching colours a little more and staying away from traditional blues and pinks you can create a gorgeous baby room no matter the gender. Try painting the crib in a soft grey for something a little different and decorate with yellow pillows and use different shades of grey to give the room more dimension.

The Polka Party Room For a very cheerful and alive looking room try to put up some polka dots on the walls. You could do this using a stencil in a full wall even dot design or go for a more freestyle pattern and put them randomly around the room. This looks great using your bring primary colours and is a fun room to accessorize with. You are only limited by your imagination. There will be plenty of options at your local hardware store so be sure to talk to the paint expert about which paints contain the least amount of chemicals. If you can, try to get away with not using a primer as they can often add more chemicals into your paint. But before you get too excited about that splash of fuchsia or soft blue, look up first! The ceiling should be the first thing to be painted. As ceilings are mostly a light neutral colour it makes more sense that that colour goes on first, that way if you end up with any accidental paint on the walls you are able to easily paint over it. Simple Steps for DIY Nursery wall Painting A few simple steps for painting your nursery walls may seem obvious but they are always good to keep in mind. Even with the most non toxic paint the fumes can still be very overwhelming. This is a must, a tarpaulin or thick canvas sheet is the best. Clear the whole room and spread it out over the floor to ensure you get no nasty spills. This will give your room a more professional and neater finish. Cut out your corners and tape lines with a smaller brush taking your time and coming out a few brush widths so your roller won't have to splatter paint into the edges. Using your roller may seem simple but you should still take care. There are commercial stencils you can buy with just about every pattern or picture, or if you are crafty you can make your own using this cardboard. So try using a neutral colour for your walls and then apply the wall art, this way it is easy to change the room theme and freshen things up without having to do a huge redecorate. Using tape to define lines is great if you want to do large wall stripes or geometric patterns. They may be hand me down chairs or changing tables from your last child or a friend or you may have gotten them new but they are not quite the right colour and you want to give them a fresh lick of paint so they fit right in. This way if you feel like changing things up it will be one thing less to worry about re painting! Start by taking apart the crib, this may seem time consuming but it will save you a lot more hassle in the long run because you won't have to waste time trying to get into those tricky hard to reach spaces. Make sure you have some old bricks or boxes you can use to prop the crib sides up to make it easier to paint and always wait the recommended time before putting on your next coat. Make sure you take time to enjoy this special part of life and stay excited in the process of making your little cherubs room a magical place for them and you to enjoy!

Decorating a nursery for the arrival of a baby takes a lot of consideration, planning, and expense. From wallpaper to floor coverings and everything in between, decorating options are truly endless, and the prices are endless as well. Not everyone can afford to spend even hundreds of dollars decorating a nursery. You can do it yourself! After deciding on a spending limit, begin a running list of ideas and expenses to better organize your thoughts as well as your resources. Stencils are very affordable and very easy to use, even for a beginner. Practice stenciling on scraps of drywall or poster board before stenciling nursery walls. All it takes are a few supplies, a little practice, and the desire to create fun and colorful designs. Get Inspired by Color Many people choose pastel colors for painting nursery walls. Pastel yellow, blue, pink, and green have been popular colors for decades. But, consider taking a courageous step and choose colors that are bold, bright, and fun. Paint is an inexpensive alternative to decorating with wallpaper, and those on a budget can change the entire look of a room without spending a small fortune. There are fantastic shades of orange, gray, brown, and green that are modern and still relevant to decor for young children. These colors can be complimented and enhanced by the more traditional variety. Unleash your creativity, and paint one or two walls a shade or two lighter than the rest of the room. Or, try painting opposite walls in contrasting colors. Brown and pink are a stylish combination for girls, and gray and denim blue are a great combination for boys. Peel and stick wall decals come in all subjects and sizes, and there are decals to match about every theme as well as every budget. They come off just as easily as they go on. Shelves are practical as well as decorative, and decorating with shelves is a great way to make the most of available space while sticking to a budget. Install adjustable shelves and brackets within easy reach of adults so they are functional as well as decorative. Place folded clothes, baby blankets and other necessities on every other shelf, and place stuffed animals and decorative items in between. Throw rugs are functional as well as decorative, and a few strategically placed can make worn-out flooring look like new. Throw rugs allow you to change the look of the room without a great deal of expense or difficulty. There are ways to create expensive looking window treatments without breaking your budget. Begin by purchasing curtain panels of your choice, lengths of colored ribbon or lace, and two small cup hooks for each window. After hanging the panels, cut the ribbon or lace to the appropriate lengths, and tie a small loop at both ends of each section. Wrap them around the panels to find the best level before attaching the cup hooks. Wrap the tiebacks around the closed panels, and attach the loops to the hooks.
