I believe I'm beginning to like these American Chillers. The author's style is rough around the edges and quasi-formed in a multitude of ways, but the plot of Ogres of Ohio is more cohesive and well-planned than the first book of the series, and the twists and turns of the action snap with superior energy.

He is put in a group called the "Wolf Patrol" with five other guys who which each group is assigned to a cabin and then goes out for a small patrol around the camp fire where he meets 2 girls named Leah Warner and Sandy Johnson who would be come his new friends at the camp. Later that night, Rick awakens from a nightmare with red glowing eyes peering through the cabin window, claiming to to be only a dream and it was nothing. Sandy, not paying attention, goes a few feet away from the buoys. When Rick heads to where Sandy got attacked to help her, she pops out of the water along with the "Unknown creature" being the troublemaker at the camp playing a prank on Sandy. It causes Rick to wake up and he then assumes that Sandy was getting her "vengeance", However, next morning, when Sarah dismisses she had any participation in what happened last night and claims she was asleep, Ricky starts to become horrified and wants to know if the Dark-haired kid really did see a monster or not. Rick, leaving the Mess Hall, notices the exact same claw-like footprints he found at his cabin window a few nights ago. Rumors about the monster soon started to spread throughout the entire camp, with kids saying they saw Claw-like footprints in the ground, saw something out in the cabin grounds, etc. Ricky goes to find the Dark-haired kid who may know about what he saw last night, but he is nowhere to be seen, he then investigates his cabin, and notices that 5 out of 6 of the beds were piled with gear and supplies. He asks Mr Williams where he is and he said that he left an hour ago cause he got scared as far as he knows. Sandy was thrilled that he was gone, but Rick wanted to know more like why he left. At the campfire, everyone was roasting marshmallows, telling jokes, and such, when a scream had Peirce the night skies, quieting everyone followed by crunching coming from the woods who is then revealed to be one of the counsels. Leonard rushed to him, where he, Rick, and all of the other kids gasped in horror as they saw him covered in blood, only to be found out it was only red paint from a paint bucket that fell on him. Leonard about the weird tracks and sightings him, his friends, and the campers has seen, which he replies that there is a legend at the camp about the Michigan Mega-monsters that come from the other side of the lake. No one knows where they come from, but multiple campers there have seen them, including Mr. He describes the monsters to be ugly, as tall as humans, covered in slime and seaweed, red eyes, and fangs and they will only leave the swamp at night. The councellers blocked all of the paths leading to the swamp and warned all the campers to stay away from the swamp. This starts to make Rick believe that the Mega-monsters really do exist. Rick went to find Leah and Sandy who were already up from the scratching noises and are about ready to go look for the creature as well. The group started going down a dark trail, Leah gets startled by crunching sounds and alerts the group, Rick turns on his flashlight only to see a racoon on the trail. Rick then moves the group towards the lake where the Mega-monsters like water. At the lake, the group searched for clues when Rick sees huge footprints in the sand along with seaweed on the sand. The tracks went into the woods and the group continued to follow it until the tracks were no longer visible in the woods. When the group decided to head back and try again tomorrow, they see the outline of a creature larger then them in the distance. Rick and his friends were about to run, supposing it was a Mega-monster, when it was actually Mr. He told the kids there is no such things at a Mega-monster and that they should head back to there cabins. At the Mess hall the next day, Rick, Leah, and Sandy had enough of waiting and wanted to go to the swamp to see if the Mega-monsters really did exist. They waited until free time where Rick and his friends awaited at the beach. They head along the path trail into the woods and are met with signs saying: It started to rain as well, neither that or the signs kept the group from going further. Finally, they find the swamp. There were no Mega-monsters anywhere, however the swamp was way to quiet for a swamp as there was no sounds at all. Suddenly, A strange gurgling sound came from the bottom of the swamp, then the plants and cattails in the middle of the swamp began to move. The group was frightened to see A Mega-monster appear out of the water in the middle of the swamp, and they hide in the bushes as the creature looks in there direction. Rick alerts Leah and Sandy that they need to warn Mr. Leonard and the other campers about the creatures in the swamp since they look extremely dangerous. The creature made a terrifying screech they made the group jump, and causing the creature to look directly at the bushes Rick and his friends were hiding in. The creature looked away, to the relief of Rick, but unbeknownst to him, Sandy was holding in a sneeze, which she no longer can hold any longer. When she did sneeze, it was so loud that the Mega-monster spotted them and began to charge directly towards them. The group began to run away from the creature, but then another Mega-monster that was larger than the one at the swamp, blocked off the trail back to the camp. Rick tells his friends to go through the woods to escape, it worked and they managed to escape from the two Mega-monsters, but it cost them several scratches all over themselves from running through the tree limbs. The group started to head back to the camp, which it started to rain, which slowly started to form into a storm. The group slowly was becoming lost in the woods and found an entirely different lake with a huge castle on it with jagged bolts of lightning on top of the castle pierced through the thunder storm clouds. Leah suggest that maybe someone is living there and that they would know how to get back to Camp Willow. The group finds a canoe with two with two paddles beside it. The group uses it to get to the castle, but half way there, sandy screams as a Mega-monster appeared out of the water only a few feet away from there canoe. The group, terrified, started to paddle like madness to get away from the Mega-monster as it was swimming towards there canoe. The group manages to hit land,leaves there canoe, and is faced with another problem, there was a huge stony wall surrounding the castle with no entrance. The Mega-monster had reached the shore and was making his way towards the group. Rick, Leah, and Sandy tried to climb the wall but was too slippery to get a grasp on the rocks of the wall. They got over the wall and escaped the Mega-monster, and a shocked Rick started to ask her how she can fly, which Sandy says that she will tell him later.

November Learn how and when to remove this template message American Chillers and Michigan Chillers are a series of horror novels for children written by author Johnathan Rand. The series started in February as a Michigan-only series and expanded to a national focus in December with Michigan Mega-Monsters. According to the author, the American Chillers book series will continue through all fifty states. A pair of kids at a camp find a giant sea monster. A brother and a sister find magical artifacts and must keep them safe from ogres who will use them to destroy the world. Three children must escape a cloud of fog, and the phantoms within it, or they will become trapped in it forever. A magical mask must be protected by three friends, or else the world will be destroyed by a group of ghost ninjas. Farm equipment comes to life and attempts to destroy a boy and his cousin on a farm. A group of friends discover werewolves are real with the help of a librarian. Aliens take control of mannequins to take over the world, and they have already taken over the Mall of America , trapping two friends inside. An angry toy maker wants revenge on a rival by framing him for the destruction of Indiana by an army of robotic locusts. Three kids who step into a supposedly haunted house late at night may never come out thanks to a boy who died years and years ago. The doll that belonged to a ghostly child may help her dead spirit have revenge on an innocent young girl. Unless two young video game addicts can stop them, an army of vampires from a video game could escape into reality. When a condor attacks two kids in the Californian woods, they have no idea what they are in for. Three friends meet a man who is attempting to make corn grow faster and get bigger. The problem is nightcrawlers have eaten it and grow as long as buses, posing a threat to human lives. Aliens disguised as normal people are going to conquer the Earth if two friends do not get in the way. A boy places a toy similar to Sea Monkeys in water mixed with fertilizer. The toy grows to be a very large, very aggressive, semi aquatic monster. A group of robbers will take thousands of dollars in artwork if three kids on a field trip do not stop them in time. Note that although the events in the previous book were never mentioned, the main character was a side character in South Carolina Sea Creatures. A group of friends have to stop dragons from conquering a fantasy world, as well as ours. A brother and sister on a camping trip in the Montana wilderness soon discover a herd of aggressive subterranean mammoths that evolved after the ice age. Three friends must help a toy maker whose experimentation with a new type of battery turned his toys into monsters. After a kid sees a UFO over a resort, giant, mutant, laser-shooting jellyfish destroy a water park. Note that although the events in the last book are never mentioned, the main character was a character in Terrifying Toys of Tennessee. They find themselves going back in time after he completes a time travel invention experiment. The experiment works, but brings back three unwanted guests. After moving into a new house, a girl is plagued by visions that only she can see, and who can also see her. Three friends go boating on a freshwater lake, but this particular lake is the hunting ground of a 60 ft long prehistoric shark. A school becomes the scene of an outbreak of cooties, vicious insects whose bite turns people into zombies, and there is no cure. While hiking, two siblings discover that Komodo dragons are loose in the forest, and they are extremely vicious. A silly curse from an old witch becomes reality. Two friends who are training to become divers are called to rescue a chemical barrel from a sunken submarine, but they discover that the chemical makes marine life far more aggressive than usual. Robotic vacuum cleaners come to life. A novel comes to life. Two friends wander away from a ski resort to search for a mythical bigfoot creature, but when the creature starts hunting them, things get out of control. Mosquitoes grow to enormous sizes and attack Maine. Two friends who are both dinosaur lovers get a chance to visit a new dinosaur theme-park, complete with mechanical lifelike dinosaurs. The problem is, the dinosaurs are acting a little too lifelike. When a ship containing a race of violent aliens crash-lands on Earth , three friends find themselves fighting for their lives. Three fossil-hunters stumble on a frightening secret. A sinister world lies beneath the new waterpark , spelling danger for its patrons 39 Angry Army Ants Ambush Alabama March 15, The swamp hides an insect threat. Sasha and her friend Trey, are aware of the old legends of giant snakes that live in the ice and snow. Danielle Reed and her family have just moved to Sandusky, Ohio. When she finds a boarded-up door in one of the upstairs bedrooms, she wonders why it is there. Soon, she finds that the door has been hidden for a reason. Because what lies beyond is a place far from her wildest imaginations. A place of mystery and wonder. A place where ogres are taking over. The ogres have bigger plans. When Danielle and her parents pull up in front of the long-abandoned house they live in now, Danielle is less sure than ever about the move. Before Danielle can fully consider the situation, she and her brother Derek have been transported to a land unlike anything found in the great state of Ohio. Huge valleys and high hills are the least of what makes this place different from the Ohio they know: Danielle is greatly confused, as we are, by all that has so suddenly happened. By passing through a boarded-up door in their new house, the two siblings have introduced a volatile element to an ongoing war between the gnomes and ogres: Do they stand a chance of fending off the enemy and restoring order to an earthly dimension still blissfully unaware of the crisis that threatens its future? The unconventional punctuation is again present throughout, as well as nonstandard grammar, usage, and more copyediting mistakes than most professional quality books, but I had no problem shrugging all that off and enjoying the story. The writing is well-paced and immersive, and that was plenty to keep me interested. Danielle and Derek Reed are likable yet realistic protagonists, and I appreciate the way the conclusion of the narrative transitions directly into the third American Chillers volume, Florida Fog Phantoms, just as The Michigan Mega-Monsters led seamlessly into this book. I would probably give Ogres of Ohio one and a half stars, and if the writing continues its rise in quality, my esteem for the series will only grow. The door leads them to this world with ogres and little creatures who help them. The ogres are trying to get the buckeyes which are these magical orbs, the magical orbs make you invisible and the ogres are trying to get to Sandusky so they can rule the city. The book Ogres Of Ohio was a great book and a knock you out of your seat book. I recommend this book to everyone who likes mysteries and American Chillers.
