Women as well as men. Okay! In the spring, nearly everyone is thinking about remodeling something. Even people who have just remodeled. Even people who thought they were so over remodeling. You wake up to the sound of power tools, and the smell of sawdust fills the air. Hope, like a leaky roof, springs eternal. Some homeowners are looking for the Wal-Mart remodel OK quality at the lowest possible price, whatever the social, political and ethical ramifications. I prefer to work with people I like and trust. But whether or not you agree, your renovation relationship will be more successful if you hook up with people who understand the unique challenges of working on older homes. He regularly installs windows for San Diego Sash. He designs and manufactures field tiles, trim and decorative borders, landscape tiles and Moresque tiles. Plumleigh is located in Encinitas, offers tours of his studio, is a native Californian and surfer, and his tile is infused with a spirit of present-day California as well as the past. Raymond Shaw Landscape Design There are people who you hire to put plants in the ground. Then there are people who you hire to decide where the plants go, where the garden structures go such as fences, gates, gazebos, paths, bricks and walls, as well as how the hardscape and plants can work together, in perfect harmony, with you and your house. Those people are landscape designers and Raymond Shaw is one. He lives in North Park, has a background in graphic design and teaching, draws colorful, detailed plans that are suitable for framing and is up-to-date on the latest in low-water gardens. Schuette does both exterior and interior work. Steve rode up the street on a white stallion okay, it was a service truck and dug around in the mud at my curb until well after dark. He also gave me a nice key fob in the shape of a heart. San Diego Sash Wood windows can last virtually forever provided you maintain the paint, finish and putty. Proprietor Shawn Woolery can build authentic replicas of your wood windows, as well as replicate wood trim and doors, from his modern shop while using vintage equipment. Van Dusen Millworking What makes a Craftsman bungalow unique? People will tell you how these architectural elements are irreplaceable, and to a degree they are, but if you are serious about it, you can get replicas built and installed that will fool everyone but the experts. William Van Dusen has been restoring old houses and garden structures for decades. Van Dusen will help you figure out what your missing bookcase doors looked like and build new replicas to the same specifications. Lisa at Verre Designs was trained in Europe, has a nice personal esthetic sense, and can replicate broken or missing art glass as well as design something completely unique for your remodeling project.

Old House Resources for historic home lovers and old house real estate seekers by www.enganchecubano.com

Happy Earth Day, old house lovers! We thought it would be fitting to introduce a new voice to this blog on this particular day. The Old House Web is excited to welcome our new contributing blogger, green renovation guru and founder of Greenovation. TV , Matt Grocoff. In honor of National Preservation Month, which kicks off on Saturday, The Old House Web will be partnering with Matt Grocoff to bring you tips and advice on making your old house greener. What more could a couple ask for? In fact, your home uses far more energy than your car. Old homes use even more than their fair share of the energy pie. When we first inspected our attic we found that the only insulation was a single layer of newspaper dated and it was covered in a layer of coal soot. There are 58 million homes like ours in the U. There are million existing homes in the U. When buying new was the only option, we looked for recycled content. Only the solar panels on the roof will give away our secret that this is no ordinary historic home. TV Kelly and I want our home to be a restorative part of our community. Once we add solar to our ultra-efficient home, we will produce more energy than we consume and become the oldest house in America to achieve net zero energy. We want prove that, even on a limited budget, you can have a home of unparalleled comfort and style while spending less on utilities than your neighbors who live in less comfortable homes. Efficiency is the cheapest power plant in the world. Once you reduce your load as much as possible, then you can look for sustainable renewable resources to produce what is needed for the remaining. As owners of great old homes we all need to make a promise to ourselves, our neighboring communities and to generations that follow that we will eliminate any negative impact our old homes have on the environment. Our Take-Make-Waste economy is not viable. Every decision we make in our houses must be guided by this compelling, realistic vision. Mission Zero begins at home. Saving our old homes and civilization is not a spectator sport. Then do something else. Undoubtedly, your actions will then become an example in your community. We hope that our new website www. TV will inspire and empower you to make your old house more comfortable and affordable. Remember that, in the end, we all share the same home. Matt Grocoff is an attorney-turned-producer and founder of www. TV. He and his wife Kelly are renovating an old Folk-Victorian which will soon produce more energy than it uses.
