"Errand of Mercy" is the twenty-sixth episode of the first season of the American science fiction television series Star Trek. Written by Gene L. Coon and directed by John Newland, it was first broadcast on March 23,

Edit Relations between the United Federation of Planets and the Klingon Empire have reached the breaking point, and recent negotiations have collapsed. The starship Enterprise has been sent to the world of Organia, a non-aligned planet near the Klingon border, to prevent the Klingons from annexing it. As the Enterprise approaches Organia, Spock briefs Kirk, calling it a primitive society. Without warning, the Enterprise is attacked by a Klingon vessel, which is quickly destroyed when the Enterprise returns fire. Upon arrival at the planet, Kirk leaves his helmsman, Lieutenant Sulu, in command of the ship with instructions to withdraw if a Klingon fleet arrives. Kirk and Spock then beam down to the planet surface and find themselves in a primitive town, with ruins in the distance. Kirk tells the Organian council what the Klingons will do if they capture the planet, but the Organians are unconcerned. Instead, the Organian leader says that the Enterprise and her crew are the only ones in danger. A Klingon fleet appears, firing on the Enterprise. Kirk orders Sulu to withdraw, which strands Kirk and Spock on the planet. The Organians disguise Kirk as one of them and have Spock pose as a Vulcan merchant of trillium. The Klingons seize control of the planet without resistance and install the ranking Klingon officer, Kor, as the military governor. Spock is taken for questioning to verify his background as a trader but resists the "mind sifter" device that the Klingons use. The Organians do nothing to resist the occupation. Kirk and Spock start guerrilla operations of their own by blowing up a munitions dump outside town. The Organians in the council strongly object to the action, while Kirk protests their lack of action. When the Klingons threaten to torture them as suspected insurgents, the Organians reveal the true identities of Kirk and Spock and allow them to be arrested. After that, if Kirk still refuses, he will undergo the mind scanning technique, leaving him a vegetable. Also, Spock will be dissected to determine how he was able to resist the mind probe. With six hours before the deadline, the Organians free the pair and hide them in the council chamber. As Federation and Klingon fleets converge on the system, Kirk and Spock raid the Klingon headquarters in hopes of rousing the population into resistance. They capture Kor and prepare to make a last stand, while the fleets are ready to clash. The Organians then reveal their true nature: They are not primitive humanoids, but are highly advanced incorporeal beings. They instantly incapacitate both sides, forcing the two sides to agree to the Organian Peace Treaty. Both sides protest, but the Organians predict the rivals will get along far better in the future. It would have been glorious! Spock tells Kirk that he and himself have no reason to be embarrassed; it took millions of years for the Organians to evolve into what they are now. Spock points out that even the gods did not come into being overnight. Spock also says that at least they beat the odds in not dying on the planet.

The remastered version of "Errand of Mercy" aired in many North American markets during the weekend of 12 May. The episode was heavy in new effects, with unique CG shots of Organia from orbit, replacing the stock footage used to represent other planets including Alfa, M, and Gothos.

My screens are up. Mister Sulu, follow your orders. Get out of here. Return if the odds are more equal. That is correct, Captain. There is no danger. Ayelborne, eight space vehicles have assumed orbit around our planet. They are activating their material transmission units. Can you verify that? Negative, Captain, but it seems a logical development. Captain, since it is too late for you to escape, perhaps we should do something about protecting you. We must be sure you are not harmed. Ayelborne, several hundred men have appeared near the citadel. They bring many weapons. How does he know that? Oh, our friend Trefayne is really quite intuitive. You can rest assured that what he says is absolutely correct. So it would seem. Not a very pleasant prospect. You have a gift for understatement, Mister Spock. Mister Spock and I are trapped on the planet Organia, which is in the process of being occupied by the forces of the Klingon Empire. The Organians have provided us with native clothing in the hopes we may be taken for Organians. Captain, our phasers are gone. Did you take them? I must ask you to return them. I cannot do that. Were you armed, you might be tempted to use violence, and that we cannot permit. You, Captain, will pass as an Organian, and Mister Spock. Mister Spock presents a problem. A Vulcan trader, perhaps. A dealer in kevas and trillium. Harmless to the Klingons. They know that Vulcan is a member of the Federation. Vulcan merchants are not uncommon, Captain. It is a practical approach. What about the rest of you? We shall continue as before. We have nothing to fear. You have a lot to learn, sir. The doors open on their own, and two Klingons march in, followed by their leader. This is the ruling council? I am Ayelborne, temporary head of the council. I bid you welcome. No doubt you do. I am Kor, military governor of Organia. He is Baronet, one of our leading citizens. And he has no tongue? I have a tongue. You will be taught how to use it. Where is your smile? The stupid, idiotic smile everyone else seems to be wearing. Do you also have a tongue? I am Spock, a dealer in kevas and trillium. You do not look like a storekeeper. Vulcans are members of the Federation. He may be a spy. Well, have we a ram among the sheep? Do you object to us taking him? Coming from an Organian, yours is practically an act of rebellion. However, it makes no difference whether you welcome me or not. I am here and will stay. You are now subjects of the Klingon Empire. They will be posted. Violation of the smallest of them will be punished by death. We shall obey your regulations, Commander. You need my approval? I need your obedience. Will I have it? You seem to be in command. I shall need a representative from among you. Liaison between the forces of the occupation and the civil population. Have I asked whether or not you want it? We Klingons have a reputation for ruthlessness. You will find that it is deserved. Should one Klingon soldier be killed, a thousand Organians will die. I will have order. Commander, I assure you our people want nothing but peace. We shall cause you no trouble. Take the Vulcan to the examination room. I will familiarise you with your new duties. He is my friend. You have a poor choice of friends. He will be examined. If he is lying, he will die. If he is telling the truth, he will find that business has taken a turn for the worse. You do not like to be pushed. You may be a man I can deal with, Baronet. From this day on, no public assemblages of more than three people. All publications to be cleared through this office. Neighbourhood controls will be established, hostages selected. A somewhat lengthy list of crimes against the state. Kor hands the proclamation to Kirk, who puts it down on the desk. You do not like them? Spock is brought in. He is what he claims to be, Commander, a Vulcanian merchant named Spock. His main concern seems to be how he would carry out his business under our occupation. A certain amount of apprehension regarding us. The mind is remarkably disciplined. I used force four, which is sufficient to break down any pretence.
