

1: Radio Spirits - Old Time Radio Shows

After reading Jack Kerouac's ON THE ROAD, I'm struck by two major impressions. #1- Kerouac had only two true loves in his life, those being the incredible, vast road trips he continually took, and his undying devotion to Neal Cassady (aka: Dean Moriarty) #2- Neal Cassady was an impossibly active, motorhead of a man, relentless and utterly driven.

Source Music on Supernatural From the get-go, the stage is set for the genre of music featured on Supernatural. Series creator and executive producer for the first six seasons, Eric Kripke, has commented on the music selection on multiple occasions. Defending his music taste and that of the show, he remarked pre-production, "And you can take your anemic alternative pop and shove it up your ass. Dean plays bass thumping, pile driving Zeppelin, and he plays it loud. Some other featured and fitting music of these two icons include: Another "Road So Far" recap in season 3. This is also featured in a "Road So Far" recap in the opener of season 5. This is fittingly played at the end of a season 9 episode in which Dorothy and Charlie enter into Oz. Bob Seger - Beautiful Loser: This is played during his "new" life recap Bob Seger - Katmandu: Yet another "Road So Far" piece played in the middle of season 8. This song is the epitome of classic rock. The first song Carry on my Wayward Son by Kansas is an emotional masterpiece for any Supernatural fan. This hit is played during the recap of every finale starting at season 1. When asked the meaning of life, Dean replies "everything is dust in the wind" referencing the Kansas song Dust in the Wind, released in The second iconic moment is the season 3 episode, "Mystery Spot" when Sam repeatedly wakes up on Tuesday and Dean continues to die day after day. The episode only shows a portion of Jensen Ackles performance; however, the full, unscripted, version has been seen by millions. While flying in "Phantom Traveler" he hums this to ease his fears. Listed below are several of the popular more well-known Supernatural tracks from season 1 through season 9. It is just the beginning to your classic rock playlist.
