Roz Lewis Why Glasgow? It is a vibrant, happening city and also my hometown. I grew up in Dennistoun, and lived in Glasgow until I was 15, so it represents my roots. I still have relatives who live there so I visit often. They are a tough audience. Anything special I should pack? What do you miss most when you are away? Glaswegians have big hearts. It may take a while for you to get to know them but they are the warmest people I know. They really are very friendly and helpful. The red and blonde sandstone makes me feel like I am home. Hotel du Vin ; hotelduvin. It is a lovely boutique Georgian hotel where every room is individually styled and the food is wonderful. Where would you meet friends for a drink? The Finnieston Bar ; thefinniestonbar. It specialises in Scottish seafood and has a great atmosphere. Good for gin if you are a fan. Where is the best place for lunch? It is well placed for Finnieston, and somewhere to drop by after visiting the Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum. Rogano ; rogano glasgow. The Ubiquitous Chip ; ubiquitouschip. Where would you send a first-time visitor? If you can, go to a Celtic or Rangers match. Football is as important as religion in Glasgow. What should I avoid? Fried Mars bars â€” you might find yourself incapacitated and unable to continue with your holiday. Public transport or taxi? I usually drive or take taxis, so I can confidently say that the taxis are cheap and you will have a fantastic insight into the area with the driver. I gather that the buses and the underground are also great. In my day, they used to have trams in Glasgow â€” and I do miss them whenever I go back to the city. Handbag or money belt? What should I bring home? The local food is amazing. Try square sausages and potato scones as part of a fry up. If you have a sweet tooth, and Glaswegians are famous for theirs, try tablet, which is a very sugary type of fudge. Most places have something positive to experience. She will also headline a special celebration gig in Glasgow for the Commonwealth Games on Wednesday.
