Pathways to Unknown Worlds: Cornell Avenue Chicago , this unique exhibition showcases a diverse, brilliant, provocative and by-and-large never seen range of materials related to pianist, bandleader, mystic, philosopher and Afro-Futurist Sun Ra. Among the most beautiful industrial objects in the exhibition are linoleum block plates and a few rubber stamps used for this purpose, as well as hand-painted color separations for silkscreen images; the exhibition will include several complete sets of transparencies designed for album covers. Along with these materials are a stunning collection of cover designs that were never used, including a number of colored charcoal drawings by an artist named Claude Dangerfield. Graphically brilliant, with a charming array of space and futuristic themes, these include: Until recently, only one such mimeographed sheet was known to exist – the one that Ra gave saxophonist John Coltrane in Also unveiled are a group of newly discovered broadsheets from the mids, typewritten and many of them hand annotated by Sun Ra. Along with enriching our understanding of Sun Ra, his work and vision, this exhibition will demonstrate a number of more fundamental things about Sun Ra and the incipient grass-roots Afro-Futurist movement in Chicago. These ideas will be of immediate interest and quite accessible to the Ra scholar and the layperson alike. But the fun aspect of the images and sounds belies something profound. The exhibition reframes the development of Sun Ra as a much more substantive proposition than the mere creation of a colorful eccentric cult celebrity and his costumed band. Thus, the do-it-yourself aspect of south-side creative life is brought vividly to light in the form of a matrix of artists, musicians, business people, writers and thinkers – a genuine organic intellectual community in the heart of black postwar Chicago. This exhibition examines how Ra and his dynamic, continually-evolving ensemble, the Philadelphia-based Arkestra, crafted both their otherworldly image and fiercely independent approach to self-production. Until recently, only one such broadsheet was known to exist – the one that Ra gave saxophonist John Coltrane in In addition to these documents, the film Spaceways, by Edward English, will be on view. The Arkestra continues to perform under the leadership of Marshall Allen, who still resides at the Germantown house. This exhibition is accompanied by a catalogue. 4: Pathways to Unknown Worlds/Friendly Love - Sun Ra | Songs, Reviews, Credits | AllMusic

Pathways to Unknown Worlds was the final album in a trio of works to have been mixed in quadraphonic sound. While the three free jazz instrumental improvisations are in many respects quite similar to the laissez-faire sonic free for alls that had become synonymous with Ra's concurrent Arkestra, there are quite a few discernible distinctions.
