Kit Ely[ edit ] Eldest of the Ely brothers. After a bronc crushed his wrist "into dust" which resulted in an arm injury Kit ultimately retired from the rodeo and comes back home in "Runaway Home. Jake is cold to his eldest brother because he is worried Kit is going to take over Three Ponies Ranch, when Jake feels like it should be him. Jake relaxes upon finding out Kit is moving to Hawaii to work on his friends ranch. Their relationship is restored after this. Wild Horse Island" series. Macquinn "Quinn" Ely[ edit ] Quinn is the only Ely brother besides Jake and Kit that plays a fairly large part in the series. He has spiky hair and is on the student council at Darton High. He enjoys playing pranks on his younger brother Jake. He has a chocolate brown Quarter Horse named Chocolate Chip, who is identical in conformation to his full sister Witch. Nathaniel "Nate" Ely[ edit ] Nate is another Ely brother. All we know about him is that he rides a horse named Digger. Brian Ely[ edit ] Yet another Ely brother. Along with Seth Ely, Brian was mentioned only once throughout the entire series. Has a long braid and wears glasses. It is Mac who asks his grandsons to remember their Shoshone heritage by doing various Indian initiation tasks. He appears in "Red Feather Filly," when Jake is asked by his grandfather to remember his heritage. Jake catches and trains a wild filly with the help of his grandfather, and Sam. Jake gets his "mustang eyes" from his grandfather. Wears baggy clothes and has a bad-boy reputation, but proves that he cares about animals when he rescues Fluffy, a fighting rooster, in "Wild Honey". Also in "The Renegade", Darrel is shown to be patiently looking after his younger relative when they are at a rodeo, showing that he has a softer side despite his rough exterior. Sam gets annoyed with him the way Jake gets annoyed with Jen. Calliope "Callie" Thurston[ edit ] Callie has bright blonde hair with a pierced nose, though she often dyes her hair many other colors in the series. Callie goes to Darton High the same school as Sam and Jen. Callie lives by herself in an apartment with a back yard surrounded by barbed wire. Jen thinks that Callie is weird. In "Desert Dancer" Callie adopts a tiger-striped dun mare who turns out to be the Phantoms lead mare. She names the mare Queen and they have a special bond that Sam notices instantly. Lives in San Francisco, California. Sam lived with her for two years after her accident resulting in a brief coma. The series begins as Sam is coming back from living with Sue. Sue is the closest Sam will get to remembering her mother. Like Sam, she loves movies. Sue is a teacher. Louise died in a car accident when Sam was five years old. She swerved to miss a herd of antelope, and her car rolled into a ditch and filled with water, causing her to drown. Heck Ballard, the sheriff, was the first to tell Sam how her mom really died. Wyatt and Gram have told her more and more about her mother as the series progresses and Sam ages. They mentioned how she used to come out and sit by La Charla at night to soothe Sam to sleep when she was pregnant with her, and again when Sam was an infant. Gram insists that she will teach Sam how to make it one day, just like her mother. Louise had long red hair and blue eyes. She was described as a bubbly, happy, and enthusiastic woman. Wyatt even called her some sort of a hippie in one of the books. She is the same age as Gram and has black hair and blue eyes. Allen lived like a hermit for a long time, until Sam opened her eyes to see that she still loved mustangs. In the 23rd book, she meets Phineas Preston, a retired policeman with salt-and-pepper hair and light blue eyes. At the end of the book they are engaged. Alyson "Ally" McClintock[ edit ] A thin, pale girl with wispy brown hair. She leads the "Cherubs" at their church, a choir for young children. Ally befriends Sam in "Blue Wings. Later in the series, her father is convicted of cockfighting. We meet her and Dr. After "Dawn Runner" Pam and Dr. Gabriel "Gabe" Allen[ edit ] Mrs. He is temporarily paralyzed, with one of his legs in a cast and the other severely bruised and damaged. His grandmother brings him to her place to spend a week with the horses and away from his friends and other things that make him feel sorry for himself. Gabe develops a close bond with Pirate, whom he renames Firefly. He eventually adopts the colt and takes him home. Gabe is also a little hot headed, cranky and has a temper. As a colt he lived with humans and was solid black hence the name Blackie. His original owner was Samantha Anne Forster, but an accident separated them forever and freed The Phantom into the wild. His dam was a sorrel purebred Quarter Horse mare named Princess Kitty, and his sire was Smoke, a purebred wild Mustang stallion. Now, wild and free, The Phantom still shares a firm bond with Sam. Unfortunately, The Phantom is hunted by Linc Slocum a multi-millionaire and a cowboy wannabe , thankfully, The Phantom has the wits to outsmart Linc Slocum, but not without a few scars for life. The Phantom, in the wild, has to not only dodge humans, but cougars, coyotes, and other mustang stallions looking for mares. He was given to Sam as a welcome home present by Wyatt, which was a huge surprise to Jake. Then Smoke became a great cattle horse. Blue Wings Blue [ edit ] A blue roan paint gelding with "wing" markings on his withers. Blue is a Spanish mustang given to Wyatt as a gift from Brynna. Once they got him home, Wyatt tries to "break" rather than "gentle" the gelding, hoping to have him ready for work sooner. He works with the gelding in the same way that Jake did with Star Shower, following him when he walks away and stopping when he stops. After a time, Blue begins to trust Wyatt and accepts him as a rider. Queen[ edit ] A Red dun mare with "zebra stripes" on her legs and a dorsal stripe along her spine. The BLM took her off the range after she suffered a split hoof. She is adopted by Callie Calliope , and the two seem to share an almost mystical bond. While the Phantom is recovering from an injury on Mrs. Teddy Bear Teddy [ edit ] Mr. His half-Bashkir heritage gives him his curly hair. Martinez rode Teddy in the desensitization course organized by Trudy Allen and Mr. Banjo[ edit ] A saddle horse gelding from River Bend. Amigo is brought out of retirement sometimes when they need a good quiet cow-horse. Tank[ edit ] Tank is a towering bald-faced bay gelding who lives as a saddle horse on River Bend Ranch. He spends half of his time at another home. Pepper usually rides him. Wyatt was riding him when the dog pack attacked and caused Jeep to fall, giving Wyatt a sore back for a several days. Formerly wild, the little horse is a very hard worker. Her previous owners gentled her well enough, but then she developed a habit of rearing. To fix this, they trusted an unsavory trainer to stop her rearing by bowling her completely over backward whenever she attempted it. Penny hit her head many times, and suffered severe nerve damage, making her go blind. He barks at unfamiliar cars and usually sleeps in the bunkhouse with the ranch-hands. He, later in the series, starts leaving the house at night, and it is revealed in the book "Gypsy Gold" that he has a coyote mate which is unfortunately shot by Linc Slocum. When she is almost full grown Sam returns Buddy to one of the River Bend herds. In later books, Sam sees Buddy as a yearling and an adult, traveling with the herds out on the range. Daisy[ edit ] Sam later saves the life of a small yellow calf named Daisy. Sam had her for only a few books, when a River Bend heifer who had a stillborn calf adopts her. He was a gift from Jake in "The Challenger," and named for the adolescent cougar that attacked Sam while riding Strawberry earlier in the book. He is most often seen racing Sam down the stairs in her ranch home or snuggling deep into her covers on cold nights. The cat enjoys the outdoors, but Sam worries a coyote could kill him. He pleads with Sam to keep the rooster at her home, in order to save him from a bloody death in illegal cock fights.

Can they find their way back to one another after he broke her heart, or is Sam too changed to forgive him? Hey guys, Sorry it took me so long. My apologies for any and all mistakes concerning spelling and grammar as well as factualness of the original stories. One of my other stories recently got a long review about all the supposed errors as far as plot lines go in keeping with the facts about the original stories. But not to worry. Much love my cherubs. For hours Sam laid in bed, wide awake as she listened to the hammering of rain and hail on the roof. The motel room was dark, the TV turned off. But neither Samantha Forster nor Jake Ely slept. She burned to have him touch her. And the fact that he was still awake told her that he was burning too. It seemed they truly would go insane because both were too stubborn to change their minds right now. She knew she was still teasing him with the idea that she laid just centimetres from him wearing nothing more than underwear. Sam smirked as an idea struck her. The only thing missing was the actual proposal and the ring on her finger. She supposed that since Jake asked their permission they probably suspected. Taking a deep breath Sam smiled as she rolled towards Jake in the bed and reached out her hand, letting it glide over his exposed stomach and chest to rest over his heart. Even that simple touch sped up his heart rate. Shuffling closer, Sam wriggled until she could lay her head in the hollow of his shoulder. The grinding of teeth stopped and Sam knew Jake was holding his breath either in dread or anticipation of what Sam intended to do next. Especially when her hand on him began drawing those little love hearts again. Sam fought not to giggle as she shifted so that her leg laid across him as well, draped across his hips and Jake went rigid all over. Jake sighed explosively, irritated that Sam was having such fun tormenting him. In response Sam levered herself up until she was sitting straddle on his hips. Beneath her Jake moved and Sam realised his hand had shot out to find the light switch by his head when the room lit up again, making her blink at the brightness after such prolonged staring in the dark. Jake was pinned beneath her and he stared at her with those wild brown eyes, so hot that it almost burned her. For just a moment Sam admired the handsome view Jake made. His long black hair was in a mess against the pillows, a stark contrast to the white of the pillow cases. His sharp high cheekbones and strong jaw made him handsome and those wild eyes stole her heart. Jake clenched his jaw when he realised that Sam was straddling him, her spread legs allowing the centre of her body full contact with the centre of his, but for a few layers of clothing. Even as he fought to keep from reacting to having her sit there like that, Jake realised that he loved this view. The view of her in her underwear, her long wavy auburn hair hanging forward around her face and tickling his stomach and chest as she grinned that wicked grin that had always spelled mischief while she straddled him. He just raised his eyebrows at her. Sam rolled her eyes at his clear confusion and obvious, if nonverbal, question. Besides I have a baby brother. So what happens now? She could see Jake was fighting for control as his eyes tried to roll back from the feel of her wiggling on top of his groin. And when his hands moved to her bare thighs and rested there warmly, Sam sighed happily. The only thing missing is you getting down on one knee and putting the ring on my finger. Unless you intend to change your mind? She could feel the hardness of him beneath her and she loved the way Jake seemed to be fighting the urge to groan in pleasure. Especially when his hands began to slide up and down her thighs in time with her wiggling. Or maybe you want to tell your folks how you nearly ditched college to propose to a fifteen year old me and loved me ever since. Sam stared at him in shock. Sam had worked out a few months before they got together that she liked him a whole awful lot more than just a crush. And she had loved him a lot as her friend. Jake watched her for a moment, contemplating telling her the whole truth about how long he had loved her. Taking a deep breath and wishing he had his hat to hide under Jake answered her honestly. Sam raised her eyebrows at him wondering why. If my monster horse could make room for you on her back, figured there was probably already a piece of your turf in my heart, my horse just had to point it out for me to realise it. Allen to adopt fourteen unadoptable mustangs to save their lives from mean old Norman White and his numbers. Surely he was dreaming, Jake thought. In the real world, she would shout at him for even thinking that being engaged at nineteen was something she would do. Sam looked slightly shocked at her request, but after a moment she smiled widely. Sam squeaked when Jake flipped them. She really meant it. She wanted to marry him with all her heart and soul. Sam had the life she wanted. She was home to watch her brothers grow up and to see Dad and Brynna and Gram every day. She had no dreams of moving away from River Bend to some place where she might someday get a phone call to say that the worst had happened. The life Sam had was more than enough for her and she had no intention of changing it. She was in love with the man who been her best friend her whole life and by some miracle he loved her back. With Sam beneath him, Jake leant into the kiss she gave him. Sweeping his tongue against hers and moving his lips as though he could never get enough of her. Replacing the shock and disbelief at hearing her ask him to marry her, was love for her so strong that Jake wanted to keep her right there beneath him forever. She drove him crazy in every possible way. She was stubborn and strong willed and pig headed and had no regard for her own safety at all when she rushed in to defend the poor innocent creatures that needed her. Even the dangerous ones like that damned cougar that could have killed her. The colt that had kicked her in the head and almost killed her. Jake groaned when he felt Sam wrap her legs around his waist and lock her ankles against the small of his back. She was trying to kill him. That was the only explanation Jake could find for her behaviour. She was trying to drive him insane with desire for her. Shoot he loved her and Jake had never felt anything so good than her pulling him down on top of her and kissing him with such passion and love that it stole his breath and had a lump of emotion forming in his throat. It was an apt description for being married to someone. Cowboy I asked you. Outright laughed at her. I dreamt about it the night I bought that ring. Dreamt that I got down on one knee in front of everyone we know and kept trying to swallow my tongue as I fought to get the words out to ask you proper. Sam beamed at him and kissed him again, wrapping her arms around his neck and tightening her legs around his waist Sam threw herself into that kiss. She was seeing stars as fireworks exploded behind her eyes from the raw passion sizzling through her from every point that she and Jake touched each other. She loved him so much. When Jake pulled back this time Sam opened her eyes slowly. Your review has been posted.
