Not sure where to get started? Human attention spans are shorter than ever: Bad puns aside, you need something to hook your audiences and reel them into the valuable message that you have to share. Delight your audiences with the unexpected with these five tips. You need a cohesive theme What to do instead: But this approach may put your audiences to sleep. Dane put this idea to the test at a recent conference where he spoke. He found that the most engagement came from slides that looked out of place but paradoxically, served a fundamental purpose in delivering his message. Your slides need to be perfect What to do instead: Think about how your presentation can extend beyond the presentation. Customize your presentations with elements of the unexpected. Most importantly, have fun. Follow a proven template What to do instead: Instead, craft a story. Use case studies to supplement your tips. Interject yourself into your narrative. Pull your audiences into your experiences, anecdotes, and perspectives. Who needs templates when you can chart your own path forward? Be blunt What to do instead: Use subtle cues Oftentimes, presenters rely on text, glaring images, or blunt takeaways to move ideas forward. This approach, however, will often lose people in the weeds of an idea. Instead, use more subtle cues, through interactive elements, to move ideas forward. Oommen, marketing manager at hardware distributor McGregor Thompson. Replace blunt messages with subtle cues, and empower your audiences to think for themselves. Break rules What to do instead: Use your best UX judgment An earlier part of this blog post encouraged presenters to break rules and try new things. There is one caveat to this point: If the text has a lot of elegant curlicues or is in a color that blends in with the background, your audience will have a hard time following along. A rule that you should never, ever break is the importance of keeping things readable. Make sure that there is enough contrast between the text and the background behind it. For digital slides, you should also ensure that the text is large enough that even people in the back of the room will be able to read it. This overarching presentation design tip will always win. Do not underestimate its power. Though he uses it often we almost never see the tin. Anthony DiNozzo makes several attempts to find out who taught Gibbs the rules, though he has not yet met with any success. On one occasion, during the Season 1 episode, Missing episode DiNozzo quoted Rule Nine as a rule that "they teach you in the Marine Corps", but the Marine in question was unaware of what he was referring to. On another occasion, during Heartland episode , Tony asked Jackson Gibbs if he had taught the rules to his son, but the older man denied any involvement. On the other hand, during the Season 2 episode, Forced Entry episode when Rule Twenty-Three was once referred to during a case, a nearby MP quoted the rule correctly. Rules At the beginning of her tenure with NCIS , during the Season 3 episode, Switch episode Gibbs informed Ziva David that there were approximately fifty rules that were his job to teach her. Some years later, Gibbs added the "51" Rule to the tin he kept the rules in while according to Tony, seven of the rules directly concern lawyers, and that the eighth rule was inspired by a lawyer as revealed during the Season 6 episode, Collateral Damage episode. Rule forty and above are not rules necessary for everyday life, they are for emergencies. The Rules Rule 1: McGee also mentioned to Abigail Borin in Ships in the Night episode that rule number one has been taken twice, showing that he knows that there are two number one rules. The rule was shown in Rule Fifty-One episode in the background when Gibbs opens the box. Keep it to yourself. Tell one other person - if you must. There is no third best. DiNozzo notes the connection in Hiatus Part 1 episode. They both were quarterback of their southern California college football team, both went into acting. This is continuously told to Tony, Ziva and Tim through a smack to the back of their heads. Rule 51 is written on the back of the card containing Rule 13 in "Rule Fifty-One". First way, they never notice you. Second way, they only notice you. It is unknown if his coworkers are aware of this rule. Unnumbered Rules "Never date a woman that eats more than you do. The Unspoken Rule-as revealed by Franks: You do what you have to do for family - revealed in Spider and the Fly episode. If you want to find something, you follow it. The only one currently known is her Rule 1: McGee has formed his own set of rules. Only 2 are known: Never lie to Gibbs. Keep digging till you hit bottom. Never underestimate your opponent- revealed in Hiatus Part 2 episode. Abby also has her own rules. Do not lie to Abby - revealed during Toxic episode. Always keep a spare - revealed during Jeopardy episode. Jimmy Palmer once had a rule. Pipettes can never be too clean. One example is Rule 3. When Gibbs does not wish to be reached, he has been known to leave his cell phone behind. Also, on the anniversary of his last marriage, he unplugged his home phone and dropped his cell phone in paint thinner after his ex-wife began harassing him with phone calls. Gibbs also admits that rule number 10 is the one that he has had the most "trouble with" in "Obsession". Gibbs broke Rule 1 Never let suspects stay together in "Ships in the Night" in order to get a confession. This also occurred in Caught on Tape episode but the suspects turned out to be innocent. Additionally, Gibbs broke the rule in A Man Walks into a Bar episode but the suspects were only guilty of covering up suicide, not murder. Gibbs contact Allison Hart, a lawyer, to represent her. Although, since the relationship ended badly, some people suspect that this rule was created because of this relationship. Another exception that Gibbs sometimes makes concerns Rule 6. Though Gibbs constantly tells people around him to never apologize, that it is a sign of weakness, he himself has apologized on at least seven occasions:
