In parliamentary systems, government functions along the following lines: The ability to vote down legislative proposals of the government. Control over or ability to vote down fiscal measures and the budget or supply ; a government is powerless without control of the state finances. In a bicameral system, it is often the so-called lower house , e. Appointment In many countries, the Head of government is commissioned by the Head of state to form a government, on the basis of the strength of party support in the lower house, in some other states directly elected by parliament. Many parliamentary systems require ministers to serve in parliament, while others ban ministers from sitting in parliament; they must resign on becoming ministers. Removal Heads of government are typically removed from power in a parliamentary system by Resignation, following: Defeat in a general election. Defeat in a leadership vote at their party caucus , to be replaced by another member of the same party. Defeat in a parliamentary vote on a major issue, e. In such cases, a head of government may seek a parliamentary dissolution from the Head of state and attempt to regain support by popular vote. First among equals or dominating the cabinet? Constitutions differ in the range and scope of powers granted to the head of government. Some constitutions make a Prime Minister primus inter pares first among equals and that remains the practical reality for the Prime Minister of Belgium and the Prime Minister of Finland. It is alleged that the increased personalisation of leadership in a number of states has led to heads of government becoming themselves "semi-presidential" figures, due in part to media coverage of politics that focuses on the leader and his or her mandate, rather than on parliament; and to the increasing centralisation of power in the hands of the head of government. Official residence This section needs additional citations for verification. Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. January Learn how and when to remove this template message The Head of government is often provided with an official residence , often in the same fashion as heads of state often are.

Prior to , care and construction of highways were primarily the responsibility of local governments. In the Territorial Legislature provided for road maintenance by requiring the Board of County Commissioners in each county to divide their county into road districts and appoint a road supervisor to oversee each district S. In , the road supervisor was required to maintain a list of all male residents eligible for two days of road labor annually. The road supervisor could summon road laborers to work on district roads for the two days of service between April and December of each year. The Territorial Legislature also provided a means for road builders to gain right-of-way for roads. Legislation in , , and empowered Boards of County Commissioners to build roads through improved fields for the sake of public convenience, provided landowners filed documents consenting to road construction on their properties. In , legislation reorganizing township government required townships to designate a road supervisor to manage roads and bridges and to establish road districts. The road supervisor appointed an overseer of highways for each road district in the township to care for roads on the district level. Upon petition by the required number of property owners, roads could be built or discontinued provided the township or county advised the public. The purpose of the Good Road Experimental Station was to determine the most economical method of highway construction in North Dakota. Using convict labor from the State Penitentiary, the Good Road Experimental Station was authorized to construct a road from the Capitol grounds to Fort Lincoln, located south of Bismarck. The office of the County Superintendent of Highways was created in S. Appointed by the Board of County Commissioners, the County Superintendent of Highways superseded the County Road Supervisor and township road supervisors and road overseers. The care of county highways by the County Superintendent of Highways has continued relatively unchanged to this day. Legislation in allowed for the creation of a Board of Highway Improvements within each county in the state. The Board of Highway Improvements consisted of one member from each road district in the county and the chairmen of the boards of supervisors in the district. Meeting only once each year in February or March, the Board of Highway Improvements was required "to formulate plans and methods for the uniform working and establishing of highways within their county Many other state laws enacted during this period allowed for local taxation to fund road maintenance. The duties of the State Highway Commission were limited to highway planning, supervision of State Highway Commission highway projects, consultation with local governments on highway development, preparation of highway maps, and issuance of bulletins concerning highway construction laws. The State Highway Commission was reorganized in S. In addition to the statutory obligations, the reorganized State Highway Commission had responsibility for statewide road and bridge inspection and providing state aid for construction and maintenance of public roads and bridges. In , the State Highway Commission assumed the responsibility of registering and licensing motor vehicles with creation of the Motor Vehicle Registration Department S. Registration of motor vehicles was eventually removed from the Highway Department by creation of an independent Motor Vehicle Department in Another reorganization of the State Highway Commission occurred in S. The Department of State Highways was under the control of the State Highway Commission, which consisted of the Governor as chairman and two gubernatorial appointees serving four-year terms. The same bill also established a "State Highway System" which was prohibited from exceeding 7, miles in length. The State Highway Commission was reorganized again in S. One of the Commission members was appointed Chief Highway Commissioner and served as chairman of the Commission and administrative head of the Department of State Highways. The State Highway Commission was repealed in S. By the s, the State Highway Department was responsible for planning, construction, and maintenance of the state highway system; bridge inspection; regulation of truck sizes and weights; collection of registration and other highway users fees; prescription of uniform traffic signs;

October 15, Protestors outside a fundraiser for Gov. Wolf say the mail policy is devastating family connections. He filed a grievance asking for the mail to be reprinted, but it was rejected. He said digital delivery was deemed superior to other ideas the department had contemplated, such as limiting mail to postcards only. The Department first alluded to the plan in an Aug. That month, he said, 1 percent of random drug tests came back positive. But what if it was just in their heads? Wetzel acknowledged that there had been delays in mail delivery, and said he had met with the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts to seek special accommodations for those who may have missed legal deadlines. Numerous studies have shown that incarcerated people who maintain supportive family relationships fare better after they return home from prison. At the meeting, many comments from the crowd, submitted on index cards, spoke to the impact of the mail policy. A photo is a visit from a loved one faraway," one read. She can spend hours at a Rite Aid or a CVS reading cards and picking out the best card for any occasion. It has to be the perfect card. She underlines and adds words to it, or cute little drawings. How personal do you think a scanned copy of that card is? And it may not arrive on his birthday, as she has done for 22 years. Wolf at Yards Brewery in North Philadelphia, Oneida Taylor, 53, said she thought that the process had effectively cut off communication with a friend at Phoenix state prison: Wolf over the new prison restrictions. Angela Baker, 50, who married a lifer named Eric Jolson just two days before postal mail was terminated, said she mailed her husband their marriage license; it came through in a double-sided photocopy. Yvonne Queen, 62, agreed: Since Ocampo is serving a life sentence at Smithfield state prison " a four-hour drive from Philadelphia " she would normally visit for several hours at a time. But the permanent elimination of mail service feels like a lasting blow. October 15, -
