Played by Rachmaninoff himself for Edison Records in Problems playing this file? The prelude is organized into three main parts and a coda: The cadential motif repeats throughout. In the third bar, the volume changes to a piano pianissimo for the exposition of the theme. The second part is propulsive and marked Agitato agitato, beginning with highly chromatic triplets. This passionately builds to interlocking chordal triplets that descend into a climactic recapitulation of the main theme, this time in four staves to accommodate the volume of notes. Certain chords in the section are marked with quadruple sforzando. The piece closes with a brief seven-bar coda which ends quietly. In the autumn of 1892, he made a tour of Western Europe and the United States, with a program that contained the Prelude. America followed suit with other titles such as The Bells of Moscow. Finally the composer went to the management and demanded to be moved another unit. Harpo stated he was unaware at the time of how Rachmaninoff felt about the piece. He takes the harp out of the wreckage and begins to play that, instead. In 2000, the theme melody of the action strategy game Dark Legions. In the television show Arthur, the main character Arthur bluffed to his music teacher that he could play the prelude blindfolded. The Beastie Boys sampled the prelude in their song "Intergalactic". The third and fourth measures are used in the song "Face the Flames" from the album "The Antidote" by The Wiseguys. Live at Le Zenith, Paris of their Hullabaloo album. Mao Asada skated to an orchestral version of this piece during her long program at the Vancouver Olympics, earning a silver medal. Canadian progressive metal band Protest the Hero recorded a song on their third album, Scurrilous, entitled "Sex Tapes", which has melodies based on prelude. Eddie Morra Bradley Cooper plays a segment of this piece in the movie Limitless. In 2007, Jon Schmidt freely arranged the music for piano, drums, guitar and bass. The arrangement was also performed by the Royal Northern Sinfonia in a series of live performances in the United Kingdom in November of the same year. In 2011, a contemporary dance track of this piece was released.
