Ohio gubernatorial election, On May 1, , Kasich filed papers to run for governor of Ohio against incumbent Democratic governor Ted Strickland. During a speech before Ashtabula County Republicans in March, Kasich talked about the need to "break the back of organized labor in the schools," according to the Ashtabula Star Beacon. On November 2, , Kasich defeated Strickland in a closely contested race to win the governorship. It was then followed by a ceremonial inauguration at the Ohio Theatre at noon on the same day. He won 86 of 88 counties. Kasich, who was elected with Tea Party support in, faced some backlash from some Tea Party activists. Zawistowski secured just three votes in his run for the chairmanship. Kasich cited the cost to taxpayers of defending the legislation in court, and the likelihood that the "Heartbeat Bill" would be struck down in federal court as reasons for vetoing the more restrictive bill. This veto won Kasich praise from environmentalist groups, and angered Republicans in the state legislature. Hagan and Nickie Antonio as adversaries of the plan. This controversial deployment prompted unsuccessful petitions to Kasich from members of the public, Cincinnati City Council members, environmentalists, and some state legislators, who asked Kasich to recall the troopers. In an audit in October, CCA was cited for 47 contractual violations, and failed a second audit later that year. In January, Kasich announced that, due to pending litigation and other issues, he was delaying all seven executions scheduled through January
