1: Special Report: FY16 Budget

The President's budget also proposes to transfer $ million of discretionary funding from the Department of Defense to support the Compact Review Agreement with Palau, increasing Interior's total request to $ billion.

Too often, we see a budget that benefits special interests at the expense of ordinary people. And more than half of discretionary spending is reserved for the Pentagon, war, and related costs. Meanwhile, proposals that would benefit Americans, like free community college, receive little or no consideration by our current Congress. However, it also calls for continued windfalls for the Pentagon that will benefit for-profit contractors without adding to our security. Here are highlights of what the new budget proposal contains: Mandatory spending would increase by more than five percent over , with the biggest increases in Social Security, transportation, and Medicare. These two categories total nearly 61 percent of the total discretionary budget. The remaining 39 percent would fund education, housing and community programs, science, the environment, and more. Economic Inequality and Opportunity The budget includes proposals that would explicitly create economic opportunity, or help to ameliorate the effects of growing inequality, including: Nineteen states have chosen not to expand Medicaid coverage under the Affordable Care Act. Education A strong education system is a clear prerequisite to a fair economy with equal opportunity for all. Americans consistently say that more investment in education is among their top priorities for our government. Pentagon and Related Spending The budget maintains the status quo, with more than half of discretionary funding reserved for the Pentagon and spending on nuclear weapons and related items. There are often effective alternatives to war, but we too often do not employ them. The budget also proposes certain reforms to the Medicare program that would extend the solvency of Medicare Part A - the Hospital Insurance trust fund - by an additional 15 years. The program is currently fully funded until For example, it would: These reforms would make taxation on the wealthy more in line with the taxation of income earned by lower- and middle-income Americans. The president also proposed measures to require corporations to pay their fair share. Requiring companies to pay taxes on income earned abroad, which would prevent U. It would increase the size of the credit and provide the credit to more workers based on income and age. As a share of the economy, the deficit is projected to be 2. The president proposes to limit deficits to less than 3 percent of the economy over the next ten years, which is on par with recent history: Federal law requires that the president submit a budget proposal to Congress every February, which serves as a starting point for negotiations in Congress. The proposal begins the annual federal budget process that creates the budget for the coming fiscal year, which begins on Oct. For more on who decides the federal budget, see Federal Budget It also serves as a benchmark against which all subsequent spending legislation will be measured.
