The most common causes of sickness, and sometimes death, for neonatal puppies are hypothermia, dehydration, and hypoglycemia.. Hypothermia. Neonates cannot control their body temperature well during the first 4 weeks of life and are dependent upon staying close to the dam, huddling with littermates or an environmental heat for warmth.

Be Sociable Thinkstock Puppies are without a doubt some of the most adorable things on the planet. Parenting a new puppy, however, is no walk in the park. When the time comes to finally bring your new puppy home for the first time, you can pretty much count on three things: Establishing good and healthy habits in those first few sleep-deprived weeks will lay the foundation for many dog-years of happiness for you and your puppy. Find a Good Vet The first place you and your new puppy should go together is, you guessed it, straight to the vet for a checkup. This visit will not only help ensure that your puppy is healthy and free of serious health issues, birth defects, etc. If you got your dog from a shelter, ask their advice as they may have veterinarians they swear by. Local dog walkers and groomers are also a great source of ideas. Make the Most of Your First Vet Visit Ask your vet which puppy foods he or she recommends, how often to feed, and what portion size to give your pup. Set up a vaccination plan with your vet. Discuss safe options for controlling parasites, both external and internal. Ask about when you should spay or neuter your dog. Small and medium-sized breeds can make the leap to adult dog food between 9 and 12 months of age. Large breed dogs should stick with puppy kibbles until they reach 2-years-old. Make sure your puppy has fresh and abundant water available at all times. Feed multiple times a day: Age weeks " 4 meals per day Age months " 3 meals per day Age months " 2 meals per day 4. According to the experts, your most potent allies in the quest to housetrain your puppy are patience, planning, and plenty of positive reinforcement. This helps reduce the spread of viruses and disease. Make sure to give lots of positive reinforcement whenever your puppy manages to potty outside and, almost equally important, refrain from punishing her when she has accidents indoors. Knowing when to take your puppy out is almost as important as giving her praise whenever she does eliminate outdoors. When you wake up. Immediately after your puppy eats or drinks a lot of water. When your puppy wakes up from a nap. During and after physical activity. Watch For Early Signs of Illness For the first few months, puppies are more susceptible to sudden bouts of illnesses that can be serious if not caught in the early stages.
