That too, in the exam situation of extreme high pressure for good performance because the exam is as important as a matter of life and death for many students. How to Memorize "Moment of Inertia" This is one of the most difficult and most important topics in Physics. Look at the diagram above and close your eyes. Try to recall the main shape of the diagram which is roughly like this: Now identify the main connections from the center. To right, it connects to DISC, which has 5 more connections: In this way, you can remember the main frame of the diagram. What is described above is just one method. You can develop your own method to remember the Memory Maps. Now let me tell you about Revision: We may guess that we remember less and less as time passes. But there is a surprise. We remember better at about 10 minutes after the learning finishes. The reason for this strange memory phenomenon is simple: It needs a few minutes to store, organize, integrate the last items. The memory decreases sharply after initial learning. This is a very important fact for you to remember. So, you must revise in a systematic way to get the maximum benefit from your hard work. The Memory Maps for Physics make it possible for you to revise many many times because they are designed for revision and not for learning Physics for the first time. Now, let me tell you "How Was this Course Developed? This course has benefited thousands of students over the years. You can find link to this course at the end of this letter. One of the important techniques in the course was called "Memory Maps". How can I create the most useful course in Physics that can dramatically increase the success potential of students? First, I wanted to base the course on my experience of how I got 69 marks of 70 in Chemistry, which was the highest in Rajasthan High-School Board and helped me to get 5th rank. Strangely, Chemistry was not my favorite subject. In fact, I did not even like it. We had a great teacher who used a text book with less number of pages than other available text books. I studied like everybody else and did okay in the tests and the half yearly exam, but nothing special. After the half-yearly exam, one day, it just occurred to me that if I could memorize all equations and all the diagrams in Chemistry, I could easily master it. This way, I could get all objective types questions correct. And, if I knew all formulae and diagrams well, answering descriptive-type questions would also be easy. I started revising the all formulae and diagrams in the Chemistry book in about 3 hours once in every 3 days. This repeated revision rewired my brain and I simply memorized these things, ready for the exams. Second, I decided to use the concept of Memory Maps, to make it easy to revise many many times and master Physics. With the above two important ideas, my goal became to create a really powerful course that students could revise in a few hours, and get results similar to what I was able to get.
