

1: Map of New South Wales | New South Wales - Australia's Guide

Book digitized by Google from the library of the New York Public Library and uploaded to the Internet Archive by user tpb.

This particular case resulted in tragic circumstances and highlights the critical nature of observations being completed as prescribed within an acute mental health setting. It also demonstrates the importance of both accurate observation and documentation. The complaint was related to the death of a young patient who had taken his life whilst admitted as a voluntary patient at a Mental Health Inpatient Unit at a hospital. The patient had presented to the hospital, following three months of worsening depressive symptoms, the development of suicidal thoughts and had a history of hospitalisation. The consulting psychiatrist had prescribed close observation due to the high suicide risk. Specifically, the complaint alleged that three nursing staff had not attended observations at the minute intervals prescribed by the psychiatrist. The morning nurse implemented an incorrect observation regime throughout the day. Furthermore, it was claimed that the nurses each falsified medical records to indicate the completion of observations which did not occur. The nurses signed the observation sheet although they had not completed the observation. The nurses were reprimanded, conditions were imposed and educative orders made. These were published on the public register. By extension, it also revealed endemic failures of clinical practice, procedure and culture within the hospital at that time. Practice points Observations must be conducted as ordered by the consulting practitioner. If you think a differing level of observation care is appropriate, discuss this with your manager and the consulting practitioner and make a note in the patient records that this has occurred and the outcome of the consultation. Do not make any alterations unless the consultant has altered the care plan. If there are concerns about staffing resources available for carrying out the observations these should be notified in writing and discussed with the appropriate nursing supervisor. Record sheets must be completed accurately. Do not sign entries you are uncertain to have been completed. Do not back sign earlier observations that have not occurred. If observations are missed because of nursing care priorities, ensure you consider the risks and provide an explanation for the missed observation and record the correct time the next observation was made. If you notice entries are missing and the level of care is below the standard prescribed, discuss with your manager immediately. If the patient is asleep and on frequent observations you must continue to conduct the observations as prescribed and according to protocol. Mental health intensive care, similar to other forms of intensive care nursing, requires vigilance to protect the safety of patients.

2: Pittwater Online News

Excerpt from Rambles and Observations in New South Wales: With Sketches of Men and Manners, Notices of the Aborigines, Glimpses of Scenery, and Some Hints to Emigrants Mount sorel; or, the heiress OF the DE veres.

A practical route was needed to Jervis Bay, the nearest potential port. Work begun after 70 men and implements were transported to Jervis Bay in the coasting vessel the Isabella. This pass was completed towards the end of the same month. Accounts stated, that work on the road had progressed to such an extent that drays laden with wool, would soon be passing daily. No township existed when the announcement was made of the proposed road between Nerriga and Jervis bay, it became necessary to take steps to lay one out. Accordingly the Surveyor-General was requested to give necessary instructions for laying out a township at Jervis Bay. On examination of the land acting Surveyor-General Captain Perry pointed to the south side of Mooney Mooney Creek, which he considered to be without comparison the most favourable for the laying out of streets and the construction of wharves. The first township subdivision to be advertised in the Sydney Newspapers was the subdivision of E. The very place Perry originally selected for a town. Excitement grew for the towns prospects as newspaper reports were released. The township started to grow. A wool store owned by Mr. The wharf at South Huskisson is now about being completed, and every facility is offered for storing and shipping wool from that port. His Excellency the Governor announced that South Huskisson was permitted to sell wine and fermented liquors but not spirits at places so declared, in quantities not less than two gallons. One can imagine the noise from the many bullock drays, the bullock bell, the rattle of the billy hanging from the dray, teams backed up waiting to load their wool onto waiting ships, Hotels bustling with work hardened, thirsty bullockies, ship captains and their salty crews, the truth stretched yarns, it must have been an amazing time. The paddle steamer the Sophia Jane was doing monthly trips from Sydney to South Huskisson, the road to Nerriga was considerably improved and several dray loads of wool weighing lbs. The dray men all spoke favourably of the road and the facilities it offered to the settlers for moving goods back and fourth between the Bay and Sydney. The new township faced mounting opposition. Hell bent on keeping the commerce in Sydney and boost their profits, they lobbied the government to extend the train line from Sydney to Goulburn. The bubble had burst â€” The extension of the railway was the final straw: The Goulburn Herald and Chronicle January The wool road had fallen into disrepair and was almost impassable. A few years later the great hope of Jervis Bay, South Huskisson, had reverted back to the wild bush it had been carved from, only a few soil mounds and one large Norfolk Pine tree gave any indication that there had once been something there.

3: Aboriginal Family History Research | Australian History Research

Note: Citations are based on reference standards. However, formatting rules can vary widely between applications and fields of interest or study. The specific requirements or preferences of your reviewing publisher, classroom teacher, institution or organization should be applied.

An example from a Newspaper as a source for Aboriginal Family History: Frank Stewart was the recipient of the usual Shire address and a presentation from the Bay to honor [sic] him as a returned Australian soldier. The occasion was rather unique, in as much as the ceremony took place during the interval of a picture show. The presentation was made by Mr D F Mackay and was received by much acclamation and to the accompaniment of the indispensable leaf strains of music from the darkies [sic]. The information that Tindale gathered during these visits was included in his Collection of genealogical information. Ronald Briggs War records Servicemen Enlistment and Service Records contain great information on your family members can be obtained for their enlistment records. Copies of war service records are also available to download. The Australian National Archives have scanned over individual Aboriginal service records from WWI are a great source for Aboriginal genealogy as many include additional papers. They are available from http: Each subdistrict is allocated a number or letter and is arranged chronologically within the census district. Many of the subdistricts include a map and a brief description of the area boundaries; all identify the collector responsible for the area. The books also list separately how many of the residents are Chinese or Aboriginal. Additional information may include the type of dwelling. The Collectors books are available on Microfiche at various repositories, some Family History Groups and Historical societies and author collection. Electoral Rolls Are always worth checking, results will vary from region to region. Please note that wording in some of the records can offend Aboriginal people such as: All sources will have their strength and weaknesses for family history research, depending on location and time period and type of source inline with the information being sought. The mountains call me back: Chittick, Lee and Fox, Terry. Budawang Aborigines featured in church records, the author, Milton, The native tribes of south-east Australia, Macmillan, London, Reprinted , Aboriginal Studies Press, Canberra. The Aboriginal people of the Monaro. Briggs, Ron and Jackson, Melissa. Black routes through the library, a guide to Aboriginal family and local history resources relating to NSW. Coastal Custodians Newsletters also available online Mathews, R. Ethnological notes on the aboriginal tribes of New South Wales and Victoria.

4: A visit to Central New South Wales: images and observations

Rambles and observations in New South Wales: with sketches of men and manners, notices of the aborigines, glimpses of scenery, and some hints to emigrants / by Joseph Phipps Townsend Chapman and Hall London

John Yeomans resided in Wilberforce and in - and held a spirit license there. Richard died in and was buried in the Glebe Cemetery. A number of bachelors of Maitland had invited their friends to the occasion. The rooms had been elegantly arranged with evergreens and flowers and a sumptuous supper was laid out by Mr. Cohen of the Rose Inn. His planned journey to Paterson was cancelled due to the flooded river so luncheon was provided for him at the Northumberland the following day also. The Association was established and a code of laws framed by the ten gentlemen attending the meeting. Carmichael , and Mr. At dawn the steamer is abreast of Newcastle, a free port, and the head quarters of the coal district. Having landed passengers there, we enter the river Hunter; and, passing many pretty farms on its banks, land at Morpeth at seven in the morning. On the banks of this river and of its tributaries are many thriving settlers, who send their produce to Sydney by the steamers, and these vessels also take down the wool and tallow of the "Liverpool Plains" and "New England" squatting districts. East and West Maitland form a long straggling town, containing about four thousand inhabitants, which owes its prosperity chiefly to the traffic carried on through it between the squatting districts and Sydney. Here, eggs, fried ham, and every thing that is savoury and delicious, are paraded on the breakfasttable in an almost wasteful extravagance, which speaks the cheapness and plenty of the good things of this life. Having strengthened and refreshed ourself and our horse, we wend on our way, premising that those who delight in beer may put the coping-stone on their felicity by indulging in a refreshing draught of Maitland ale. The road along which we travel is supposed to be traversed, in the course of the year, by 28, passengers. During the latter portion of the fifties it was under the management of that old identity the late Mr. Henry Hewitt, alias "the beautiful boy. His last venture in that line was the Royal Hotel at Singleton, which he took possession of in But like many others, his speculations in brick and mortar left him a poor man. During the fifties the Northumberland Hotel went under the sign of the old Rose Inn, but subsequently the former sign was adopted. An article published in the Maitland Mercury in indicates that the premises of the Northumberland Hotel were used as a Police Barracks at that time.

5: Rambles and Observations in New South Wales - Livros na Amazon Brasil-

Book digitized by Google from the library of University of California and uploaded to the Internet Archive by user tpb.

6: Observations are critical in patient safety | Nursing and Midwifery Council of New South Wales

Rambles and observations in New South Wales By Joseph Phipps. Townsend. Abstract. Mode of access: Internet Publisher: London, Chapman and Hall, Year: OAI.

7: Rambles and observations in New South Wales - CORE

Rambles and observations in New South Wales by Joseph Phipps Townsend ().

8: Papers [manuscript]. - Version details - Trove

Rambles and Observations in New South Wales: With Sketches of Men and Manners, Notices of the Aborigines, Glimpses of Scenery, and Some Hints to Emigrants.

9: Lady Denman Museum: The Rise and Fall of South Huskisson

RAMBLES AND OBSERVATIONS IN NEW SOUTH WALES . pdf

TOWNSEND, Joseph Phipps. Rambles and observations in New South Wales with skethes of men and manners, notices of the Aborigines, glimpses of scenery, and some hints to emigrants.

Introduction to graph databases Families of adults with autism Notation of Western music A Thunder at Dawn 3. Health communication campaigns exemplar The Idea of Principle in Leibniz and the Evolution of Deductive Theory Communicating Politics Change The Picture State open government law and practice in a post-9/11 world Alexander, R. J. Impact of the Sino-Soviet split on Latin-American Communism. Employment law for the paralegal Mighty Change, Tall Within: Black Identity in the Hudson Valley Theosophist Magazine April 1923-June 1923 Earths Changing Coasts (Morris, Neil, Landscapes and People.) The lengthened shadow Improving Ireland? Chronicles of the great rebellion. Guildbook Puppeteers and Pardoners (Guildbook Series) Fitness for the aging adult with visual impairment Appendix: where to go from here Cognitive growth outside of the home In Praise of the Whip Rolling contact bearing design Box and whisker plot worksheet grade 6 Code of banking practice australia Part I: Life is song : the quest for music and meaning The Upstart guide to owning and managing a desktop publishing service Advanced strength of materials and applied elasticity South Carolinas golden years My sister the vampire book 2 Animal rights/human rights Lost books of the old testament Canoe building in glass reinforced plastic Frederic schuller lecture notes Permission-based E-mail marketing that works! Taltos (Vlad Taltos) Opening, the use, and the future of our domain on this continent. Essays in medieval culture Empty Lovers Yoga Dspl Endodontics principles and practice 5th edition