Weigand, traveled by cover wagon from Mt. He quickly subleased desk space in a retail storeroom at N. Market and his lifelong love affair with Wichita began. Wichita was newly established in , just 32 years after its rough and wild beginning. The population had grown to 25, and it was the largest city within miles, covering seven square miles. This made the distance between home and employment a prime consideration when purchasing a home. By , the local population had rapidly reached 55, and the Wichita real estate market was booming! Weigand expanded his business by leasing a one-room office in the new four story Bitting Building located at N. Market in Downtown Wichita. During this period J. He had no office staff and kept track of all of his transactions on a multitude of scrap pieces of paper in his suit pockets. Weigand firm to two. In the following year the name of the firm was changed to J. To an increasing number of Wichitans, the name Weigand came to define real estate. Wichita is the Indianapolis of the Southwest. The greatest commercial and financial center of its size in the world. Population now 45,; will soon have , The following year Nestor Sr. Weigand passed away in the comfort of his home. Despite the fact that he had never driven an automobile, he had nevertheless made hundreds of real estate deals by walking the streets of Wichita. The editorial page of the Wichita paper featured the following editorial: For 48 years the late J. Weigand sold Wichita real estate on the basis of an unabiding faith in the future of the City, a faith which was founded upon a thorough knowledge of what constitutes real values, present and future. For the nearly 50 years of his activity he saw property values advance surely and steadily, based upon the growth of the city and its importance as a business center. Surely, a vindication of the faith he had in the future of Wichita. No man had a more complete knowledge of Wichita real estate. It could almost be said that he carried a plat of the city in his head, so thoroughly was he informed upon the subject. He was of that remarkable generation which, casting their lot with the City at the beginning of its growth, lived to see the fulfillment of his predictions. He will be greatly missed from the scene he knew so well. Within the company he served the dual role of residential sales manager and salesman. In , Michael C. Weigand returned from service in the army and became associated with the firm. In , Nestor, Jr. Continuing his involvement in local, national and international real estate, Nestor Weigand, Jr. March 7, , Michael C. The very first Rand McNally map, created using a new cost-saving wax engraving method, appeared in the December edition of its Railroad Guide. Rand McNally became an incorporated business in 1896, with Rand as its president and McNally as vice president. The Business Atlas, containing maps and data pertinent to business planning, was first published in 1900. Rand McNally began publishing educational maps in 1901 with its first line of maps, globes, and geography textbooks, soon followed by a world atlas. Hammond, who later started his own map company, C. In 1902, the company acquired the line of Photo-Auto Guides from G. Chapin, which provided photographs of routes and intersections with directions. Rand McNally was the first major map publisher to embrace a system of numbered highways. One of its cartographers, John Brink, invented a system that was first published in 1903 on a map of Peoria, Illinois. In addition to creating maps with numbered roads, Rand McNally also erected many of the actual roadside highway signs. This system was subsequently adopted by state and federal highway authorities. The oil industry quickly developed an interest in road maps, enticing Americans to explore and consume more gasoline. In 1907, Rand McNally began publishing road maps for the Gulf Oil Company, to be freely distributed at its service stations. The first full-color edition was published in 1911. It became fully digitized in 1995. Paul Goode's book, published in 1912, became a standard text for high school and college geography curricula. In the 1920s it was turned into a chain with 29 locations, but by all had been closed as a cost-saving measure. The company opened its Versailles, Kentucky, book publishing plant in 1923, with 28,000 square feet, 23 employees. In 1924, the plant was the first to implement a new Kodak computer-to-plate printing system. In 1926, because the company was not satisfied with the ability of existing map projections to create intuitive depictions of the entire world, they commissioned Dr. Robinson to develop what became known as the Robinson projection, which became very popular and was used extensively for constructing maps of the entire world. The McNally family was the majority owner for nearly 70 years, from until 1996, at which time the family decided to divest its majority stake. However, the company fell behind the technology curve of upstarts such as MapQuest and fell further into debt. The building was sold to Ida Crown Jewish Academy. Facilities Rand McNally had been headquartered in Chicago since its inception. By the 1990s its Chicago area workforce had grown to over 1,000 employees and larger facilities were needed. Over the ensuing decades, however, printing and distribution operations were relocated, eventually resulting in the underutilization of its aging Skokie building. Maps in 1996 were closed in [19]. The company was incorporated in 1997 with Rand as the first president and McNally vice-president. When Rand retired in 1998, Andrew McNally assumed the role of president until his death in 2001. Andrew McNally II took over in 2002. Apatoff former head of Allstate marketing [27] [28] " Dave Muscatel Acquisitions Rand McNally has made many acquisitions over the years to consolidate the crowded map publishing industry or to extend its capabilities in new markets. All Champion Map products had disappeared, but in 2003 Rand began using the brand on street maps for selected small markets. Was sold off as part of Rand McNally Canada in 2004. Bing Crosby used to tell of a fishing spot so secret that Rand would not tell McNally. It tells the story of a man who gets into trouble all over the world and draws maps to, "remember never to go back to that place again.
