Nation Aug 27, 9: Photo by Tom Kennedy. The Republican National Convention gets underway Monday but the session will be over almost as soon as it begins after officials decided to delay the start of the nominating festivities due to looming Tropical Storm Isaac. The major order of business: The survey found the GOP hopeful leading the Democratic incumbent 47 percent to 46 percent among registered voters, well within the plus-or-minus 4 percentage point margin of sampling error of the poll. The findings continue a months-long pattern, with neither the incumbent nor the challenger able to sustain clear momentum, despite airing hundreds of millions of dollars in television ads — most of them negative — and exchanging some of the harshest early rhetoric seen in a modern presidential campaign. Another poll released Friday by CNN-ORC International gave the president a 49 percent to 47 percent edge among likely voters, but a 52 percent to 43 percent lead among registered voters. The next two weeks will give both candidates an opportunity to promote their strengths, address their weaknesses and make the case to the American people why they should occupy the White House for the next four years — and your NewsHour political crew will be with you every step of the way in Tampa and Charlotte, N. Reports and photos from Texas Republican Rep. And keep an eye on our Flickr feed. Senior correspondent Jeffrey Brown was on the convention floor during a technical rehearsal Sunday. Watch his report here or below. Mark Shields and David Brooks gave their take Friday night on the state of the race, what Romney needs to do this week, and how the Rep. Todd Akin abortion dustup will affect the campaign. Watch that conversation here. Watch to the end and see Morning Line co-pilot Terence Burling present the guys with a special gift. Watch here or below. Where do you fit? Ifill hosted a Washington Week town hall meeting in St. Petersburg on Friday night. Check out the highlights. Stu Rothenberg notes the latest unemployment figures will be out 12 hours after the president concludes his nomination speech in Charlotte and wonders if that will affect any bounce coming out of the convention. The Republicans have been scrambling the last few days to adjust, then readjust, the convention schedule. What was a four-day event, is now a three-day event and there are rumblings, though unconfirmed by the RNC and the Romney campaign, of the party stretching to Friday. Rand Paul, South Carolina Gov. Mike Huckabee and headliner Ann Romney. Each of those speakers has been moved and will be in a prime time slot later in the week. The most up-to-date schedule for the convention is here. Watch our livestream below. And tune into the NewsHour at 6 p. ET with special live coverage of the convention beginning at 7 p. Alex Bruns contributed to this report.
