Week of Nov Instead, what has me taking a deep breath of anticipation is the thought of what could happen between Nikki and Bobby. It was a welcome change to see him interacting with a full-fledged adult other than Angelo and I smelled and spotted definite chemistry between him and Nikki. How deliciously delightful it should be to see Nikki do for Bobby what Victor once did for her. Smooth off the slightly rough exterior to reveal the valuable treasure beneath. And if in the process, Bobby falls out of infatuation with "Blondie" Hodges, oh well, such is the way of soap love. Besides, the cavalier and downright cruel manner in which Victor has been treating the alleged love of his life lately, demands that a big helping of payback be in his future. Even if nothing romantic happens between Nikki and Bobby, I shall still thoroughly enjoy watching her thumb her nose at a disapproving Victor. Her presence there is bound to bring him to annoy him enormously. Even without the romance, the business relationship between the two should provide plenty of interesting possibilities. And even on stripper nights, I can imagine Nikki bringing a touch of class and elegance there as well. She will easily have Marsino, as she affectionately calls him, eating out one hand, while Angelo and the raucous revelers gobble hungrily from the other. Taking Abby from day care and informing Brad after the fact was a bit much, but classic, uncaring Victor. How did he even know he was allowed to do that? And who told him where Abby attended day camp? Is there only one day camp in the city frequented by the well to do? On second thought, we are talking about Victor Newman here, so no matter who the father was, Victor probably would have behaved exactly the same. It was on the Newman family answering machine, for goodness sake. Since when did Ashley and Victor become a "we"? Without a word to Brad? What was her hurry? Not that I should be amazed at her constant flip-flopping. After all, the witless woman has gone above and beyond all sane boundaries in her obsession with Victor. What a blessing this empty headed, self-serving caricature of a caregiver will only be allowed to have one child. Gloria Fisher excepted, Ashley has got to be the worst example of motherhood in Genoa City history. Which brings us to Bradley Blowhard. Did he really expect to receive lifelong love and loyalty from someone classless enough to marry her ex-brother-in-law? Although his half-crazed visit to the Newman Ranch did manage to prove one thing. Brad must have arrived in between coffee breaks. Yes, he legally adopted Abby, but since Victor was an unaware father, he, of course, never relinquished his fatherly right to his stolen sperm child. And to her discerning eyes, Bradley is the real daddy with Victor playing the part of benevolent play papa. We now know Nikki was indeed the birthday girl in the video. And most likely, the skeleton is that of Joshua, the cute little black haired boy who stood happily beside her. But who was young Joshua and why in the world was he killed? This one has me on the edge of my sofa, eagerly awaiting the next tidbit of information. You almost had to feel sorry for Cameron last week. Having gone to such great lengths all for need of Sharon Newman. A fate he at one time apparently planned for Sharon. By the way, I got an enjoyable kick out of watching real-life couple Cameron and Diane converse. Too bad his days are numbered; a pairing between the two of them could have been entertaining. As Jill suspects, the man currently guiding Chancellor Industries through untroubled waters, Elliot Hampton, is surely going to prove to be exactly as untrustworthy as he already sounds and seems. Which will leave Jill with nothing but time on her hands. Way too much paper for one set of eyes to see a discrepancy. From the moment Paul informed Chris and the rest of us eagerly watching fans his days at his current business address were dwindling, many predicted immediately where his next office would be. Both destinations were predicted to be one and the same. The esteemed law offices of Counselor Baldwin, where the heavy caseload has been single handedly lugged about by one overworked barrister and his loyal staff of one. Speaking of exaggeration somehow brings to my warped mind one Gloria Fisher. Her air conditioner broke? Oh well, whatever works. As for me, the relatively low opinion I already had of Gloria dropped even lower after watching her antics with Kevin and Daniel. Even for Gloria, flashing a year old boy in front of her own son, was nearly as low as one could go. Obviously, he has no burning desire to tighten the
