John also had a fishing story: I have known Bill and his wife, Sandy, for over two decades. They lived just down the street from my mother- and father-in-law. They even lived briefly in Cotter a few blocks from me while their home on a bluff overlooking Rim Shoals was being built. Bill wanted him to fish with me the first time to build his confidence in his ability to catch trout on a fly rod and in general get him enthusiastic about fly-fishing. I was eager to do it. We were to begin at noon and the forecast was for a sunny day with a high temperature of degrees. I feared it would be too hot for the lad, but I was clearly mistaken. It was apparent to me rather quickly that Alex was a natural. I decided to get the boat in the water and concentrate on fishing. They were running a bit of water around 1, cfs, or about half a generator. This is a good level to fish. I explained to Alex what he was doing wrong and how to correct the error. On the next drift he landed a fat inch rainbow. We began catching fish at will. From time to time we would lose one and I would explain what went wrong. Alex quickly made the correction and we began to catch even more trout. We were fishing at the catch-and-release section at Rim Shoals. The fish there are a bit larger. All of the trout we caught were in the 10 inch slot. They averaged about 16 inches. Alex was having the time of his life. Bill and William were sitting at a picnic table in the shade near the ramp watching us fish. They were pleased with our progress. We had landed 20 trout. I invited them to join us, but they declined. I was amazed at how well we were doing despite the heat. A bit of cloud cover and a light wind helped a lot. We caught five more and then it was time to call it a day. Bill was very pleased. The next two days Bill and Alex canoed together and fished. Alex fished well both days and was enthusiastic about bringing his college buddies at Texas Christian University up to fish with him and his grand dad. Water is clear of debris and sitting around the new normal of feet msl. Surface temp has cooled off with the recent rains. The cooler temperatures have brought the lake way down from the 91 degrees experienced a couple of weeks ago. Bass have become very active feeding in shallower water. Gotta agree with many other reviewers, QC is awful. Crooked guides, glue all over the guides. Also the flip rod is very tip heavy. Got to agree with the last comment on workmanship. The rest of the guides were about 12 o'clock but not perfectly uniform. Returned to the company and Ty personally sent me a 2nd rod. This rod all guides look align BUT if you hold the reel and reel seat flat level they all line up to the left. Though all are uniform in alignment. Surprised at these problems of the build. The positives I like the balance for throwing spinnerbaits and feel of the grips. So little disappointed overall in craftsmanship. I have had 3 of them and they all have quality control issues. I will send them back and order different rods I bought a Hammer Rod back in the spring and fished with it all summer and fell in love with the lightness and feel of the rod with the Winn grips. I will for sure be purchasing many more in the near future and have several on my Christmas list already! The price is hard to beat for the quality of rod you get! Plus they are made in the USA! They are by far the most sensitive, lightweight rods that I have used yet they have enough backbone to drive the hook home. I am very rough on my equipment as I fish a tournament nearly every weekend and these rods can withstand the beating. The unique parabolic bend of these rods allows for a lot less lost fish especially for those deep fish. The rods are very forgiving because the bend allows for you to still get a good hook even when you mess up such as a little slack in your line or things of that nature. Another plus of these rods is that they are American made in every aspect, and you are personally dealing with the family that owns the company rather than some big company. Try a couple of these rods and I can assure you that you will not be disappointed. Have had this rod for 6 months now and really like it. Excellent build quality and attention to detail. Yes, they are softer than what is considered industry standard H fishes like MH, etc. So when ordering just order one power up for your intended use. Like others have mention this rod is light, ultra sensitive and is probably the most comfortable rod you will ever buy. No fatigue at all when fishing it all day and very balanced on a Daiwa Tatula Type R. On top of all of this they are very versatile and you could fish A LOT of different baits on them. Also USA made which is always a plus. The feel is very light for a heavy rod, almost like a MH. Grips are a nice added touch. I felt like I could fish with this rod all day. Like others have mentioned, you may want to step up to the next weight size since they run soo light. Best part, made right here in the US of A! Good sensitive rod but not strong. I bought the 7ft heavy and I have med-hvy rods that are stronger than this heavy. I have been using these rods for a little under a year. The thing that got me the most is the amount of fish lost with the rod. Most people look at hooks or line, which are all a factor, but these rods have a parabolic bend causing less slack thrown to the fish when they jump. The power is great and the grips are a plus too! Customer service is awesome. I was in the market for a new cranking rod and prefer all American made. I have been a big Quantum and Shimano fan for many years because the price was right. The Hammer cranks are absolutely fantastic rods. Excellent grips, light weight, cartable, and great fighting action. I am done with the broom stick behemoth rods I was using in the past and will be switching my cranking arsenal over to the Hammer cranks. Much easier for a day of cranking and every bit as powerful. Very reasonably priced given the quality. I can feel fish breathe on my lure with these rods. Not owning a cranking rod of this length before I had nothing to compare this rod to, so I decided to buy a versatile rod to compare it to other companies. I have had G Loomis, Powell, Megabass, and others and this is by far my favorite. Nothing against all the other companies, but just bragging on the hammer. These rods are light, sensitive, and the Wynn grips are a game changer for me. I switched over to these rods. They have a great tip with good backbone. You will love the Winn grips! Highly recommend trying one! They are the lightest, most sensitive I have found. From flipping sticks to spinning rods, Hammer has you covered. Picked up a Hammer rod with Winn Grips about 2 years ago and I have swapped over to them exclusively now. Awesome rod for an even better price. Thanks for stocking these TW From: I love the grips. We all know that spinnerbaits dont require a bone jarring hook set. To me, this rod is flawless for this technique and I couldnt be happier. The rod is light and balanced and just overall great. The success with that rod is what has drawn me to be a fan of the moderate blanks. These are so sensitive and light. The Winn grips really help when setting the hook and with wet hands. Customer service is second to NONE! Definitely rated lighter than what most would consider typical, so if you are looking for a medium heavy, step up to the heavy. These rods are beasts! Very lightweight, awesome grips, wide variety to benefit anglers and various techniques of fishing. Enough backbone to reel in large fish! These rods sell themselves. Once you get your hands on one you will become a firm believer! And of course - Made here in the USA!
