Welcome to the Ockenden Ranch Owners Association. This information is for homeowners and members of the association to view. If you have questions please call our office and discuss them with us. This information is provided as a courtesy and in some cases has not been finalized or approved by the Board of Directors. We will provide the information once it has been approved, so check back frequently for any new information. We will include information that is generally available for all homeowners to view. If you see an area that would be of interest to include, please let us know. Some time after his arrival Mr. Ockenden settled in the town of Academy, near the present day Highway a few miles east of Clovis. There he founded and operated a general store. At that time Academy was a way station stop and cattle ranching area adjacent to Tollhouse Road, a wagon and stage coach road serving the foothill and mountain areas of north eastern Fresno County No doubt seeking to expand his business opportunities he then opened a second store in Tollhouse. At that time Tollhouse was a bustling community of persons with a livery, 3 hotels, and reportedly, and equal number of saloons a combination that was no doubt popular with local cattlemen. Opening his second store in Tollhouse placed Mr. Ockenden in direct competition with the areas first, and previously sole, innkeeper and general store proprietor, Mr. Always seeking to further expand his opportunities, nor afraid to take on ever increasing debt to do so, and probably facing stiff competition from Mr. Yancey, a year or so later, Tom Ockenden went into business with his older brother, William. Trying to locate the exact site of the original Ockenden Ranch can be best described as "difficult". Several sources make general reference to it. One on-line source even provides GPS coordinates. Unfortunately the references and coordinates are sufficiently vague as to leave its precise location elusive. Ockenden immediately foresaw the recreational and leisure time opportunities presented by the area, the same attributes we appreciate today. At its peak, the Ockenden Ranch had a large hotel, cabins, tents on platforms, a dance hall, a general store and a livery. In a United States Post Office was established further solidifying the business. It was also the only establishment on "the mountain" that served alcohol, no doubt popular with local loggers and mill workers who would otherwise have faced "dry" weekends as liquor was not allowed in local lumber camps. And ever the shrewd marketer, the menu at Ockenden Ranch always included a low cost meal of chicken or beef tailored to local lumbermen who typically continued their evenings festivities drinking beer and spirits. Consumption that was no doubt enhanced by Mr. Ockenden providing "gunny sacks" so lumbermen could take a few bottles back to camp with them. Beyond the business of Ockenden Ranch, Mr. Ockenden also entered a cattle enterprise, established a slaughter house serving his lower elevations stores and kept a butcher shop on site to serve the needs of his visitors, guests and local businesses. He also "grub staked" the start up of a number of smaller sawmills saying he always got his money back. For unknown reasons it was never rebuilt. Ockenden, on being advised of the loss while at his winter home in Fresno, responded, "a lot of good whiskey had been needlessly destroyed". From that point until his passing in Fresno on December 20, 19 39 the remaining facilities continued to be open every year drawing travelers and valley residents as it had for decades before. Ockenden continued, for a few years, to operate what remained of the original Ockenden Ranch. Unfortunately, the exact date, even the year, of its final closing, like its precise location, remains shrouded in mystery to this day. Included in those master plans were equestrian riding trails, a golf course and other features. OR currently encompasses 7 phases with completed lots, of which have been developed, and many features unique to the greater Shaver Lake area. OR also features easy access to Highway , County water and sewer service, centralized garbage collection, an ongoing fire hazard reduction program and a strong home owners association maintaining a friendly family atmosphere and the property values within the subdivision with the lowest Home Owners Association dues in the greater Shaver Lake area. All of which are testaments to the vision, philosophy and history of Tom Ockenden and the original Ockenden Ranch.
