The enlisted personnel, numbering one hundred and fifty in all, was composed of men of all walks of life. Hailing from almost every state in the Union, they had finally met at Kelly Field, Texas, for assignment. The majority had been at Kelly for as long as two months learning the squad movements, something about military courtesy and a lot about "fatigue". Many were still in civilian clothing that looked the worse for wear, and only a few were wearing a military uniform. Several of the men been sent to the Base Hospital at Fort Sam Houston , Texas, sick with measles and the congested quarters then occupied by the Squadron made the spread of this and other diseases difficult to prevent. Naturally there was disappointment. It had been learned that the th was designated as a Service Flying Squadron and the anticipation of foreign service had grown very strong. In the Quarantine Camp there were the usual camp duties. Men had the opportunity to get acquainted and they began to feel more as members of an organization than as a lot of men temporarily brought together. At Waco there were the usual camp duties. The camp into which the organization went was constructed for the organization of Air Service units. Drills, fatigue and guard duty made up the daily schedule. Due to lingering sicknesses, the Squadron was quarantined for the first ten days after reaching Rich Field. Remaining in Waco for about five weeks, the squadron continued its indoctrination into the Army, performing frequent hikes to various parts of the surrounding country, as well as learning flag semaphore signaling. The squadron traveled to Hicks by rail. On 1 May one hundred five men were put on special duty in the hangars, the shops and the Quartermaster Department. Equipped with blue denim uniforms, the men set to work learning skills they would need in the war zone. The mechanics frequently went up in the Curtiss JN-4 training planes and on two or three occasions got involved in crashes. Unfortunately two squadron members were killed, and several were injured and had to be left behind at the end of training. At this time, the th consisted of three officers and one hundred fifty-four men. The train arrived in Garden City early on 14 July. There the squadron awaited further orders, and on the 24th the order was received that no one could leave the camp. However, the squadron was delayed until 16 August when the squadron was moved to the Port of Entry, Hoboken, New Jersey , where it was boarded on the USS Von Steuben , a sized German liner that was impressed into service as a troop ship. The trans-Atlantic crossing to France was uneventful, the squadron arriving at the port of Brest, France on 25 August After five days, orders arrived sending the squadron to the Air Service Replacement Concentration Center at the large St. A very uncomfortable French troop train was used to transport the squadron. The Squadron arrived at St. Maixent at about 9. The distance up to the station from the railroad station was about two miles, and the squadron marched to the barracks, although some delays meant it was midnight until all were in their bunks. Maixent were for the purpose of getting equipped to go into the fighting zone. Besides being issued extra clothing, rifles, gas masks, etc. However, while there, Spanish Flu was prevalent and while there, about one-third of the th suffered from the disease. It was not until 19 September that the men had recovered enough to be transferred to the 1st Air Depot at Colombey-les-Belles Airdrome. There the distant booming of guns was convincing evidence that the "Zone of Advance" Western Front had been entered. For the next two weeks the men of the Squadron were billeted on either side of the main road leading into the town from the front, where frequently the big guns came rumbling back for repairs and where trucks and ambulances were constantly going to and fro. At Colombey-les-Belles, the men got acquainted with the V Liberty aircraft engine that would power the airplanes issued to the th, the Dayton-Wright DH There, it was determined that the th would be a Corps Observation squadron, and on the 30th, the squadron was transferred to Autreville Airdrome. Instead of a pig and a puddle at the entrance to the office, there was a nicely constructed cinder pathway with a rustic fence on either side. The majority of the men who had been left at St. Maixent, sick in the camp hospital, rejoined the Squadron at Autreville. The th was the Headquarters Squadron and hence had the responsibility of keeping the Post in good condition. Towards the middle of the month several pilots and observers joined the Squadron and on the 21st seven DH-4s were ferried over from Colombey. The transportation equipment had already arrived and as everything was ready for a move to the front, the Squadron left Autreville for the Saizerais Aerodrome at No time was lost in getting to work. On the day following its arrival, several pilots and observers were transferred from the 8th, which had been on the Post for some time. Along with the pilots, seven DH-4s were also transferred from the 8th, which had more than was required. The portion of the sector assigned to the th extended from Villier-sous-Perry to Eply. The squadron performed artillery adjustments for the th, th, th and st Field Artillery Regiments, also there were infantry liaison maneuvers with the d Brigade of the 92d Division. The number of planes, pilots and observers was increased and on 6 November, eighteen pilots were assigned, along with fifteen observers. The number of patrols scheduled to fly across the line varied from day to day, according to the movements of the enemy. An average of ten sorties were scheduled daily. There were forty-seven officers, many of whom had considerable training. The enlisted personnel had been brought up to men and the mechanics on the field were fully familiar with the DH-4s. During the time the squadron was in combat, no planes were lost and no casualties were suffered. After the Armistice, proficiency flights were flown and gunnery practice was taken, however, no flights were permitted over German-held territory. In addition, the squadron was able to perform test flights on surrendered German aircraft. Flights of the Fokker D. VII , Pfalz D. XII , Halberstadts and Rumpler aircraft were made and evaluations were made. There, the men of the th Aero Squadron were demobilized and returned to civilian life. Signal Corps Attached to:

The world and everything in it is said to alternate between periods of activity manvantaras and periods of passivity pralayas. Each manvantara lasts many millions of years and consists of a number of Yugas , in accordance with Hindu cosmology. Blavatsky attempted to demonstrate that the discoveries of "materialist" science had been anticipated in the writings of ancient sages and that materialism would be proven wrong. Items of cosmogony[ edit ] In this recapitulation of The Secret Doctrine, Blavatsky gave a summary of the central points of her system of cosmogony. Here Blavatsky says of this principle that it is "the One homogeneous divine Substance-Principle, the one radical cause. It is the omnipresent Reality: Its impersonality is the fundamental conception of the System. It is latent in every atom in the Universe, and is the Universe itself. This item presents the idea that the One unconditioned and absolute principle is covered over by its veil, Mulaprakriti, that the spiritual essence is forever covered by the material essence. The fourth item is the common eastern idea of Maya. Blavatsky states that the entire universe is called illusion because everything in it is temporary, i. The fifth item reiterates the third fundamental proposition see above , stating that everything in the universe is conscious, in its own way and on its own plane of perception. Because of this, the Occult Philosophy states that there are no unconscious or blind laws of Nature, that all is governed by consciousness and consciousnesses. The sixth item gives a core idea of theosophical philosophy, that "as above, so below". This is known as the "law of correspondences", its basic premise being that everything in the universe is worked and manifested from within outwards, or from the higher to the lower, and that thus the lower, the microcosm, is the copy of the higher, the macrocosm. Just as a human being experiences every action as preceded by an internal impulse of thought, emotion or will, so too the manifested universe is preceded by impulses from divine thought, feeling and will. This item gives rise to the notion of an "almost endless series of hierarchies of sentient beings", which itself becomes a central idea of many theosophists. The law of correspondences also becomes central to the methodology of many theosophists, as they look for analogous correspondence between various aspects of reality, for instance: Volume two Anthropogenesis [ edit ] The second half of the book describes the origins of humanity through an account of "Root Races" said to date back millions of years. The first root race was, according to her, "ethereal"; the second root had more physical bodies and lived in Hyperborea. The third root race, the first to be truly human, is said to have existed on the lost continent of Lemuria and the fourth root race is said to have developed in Atlantis. According to Blavatsky, the fifth root race is approximately one million years old, overlapping the fourth root race and the very first beginnings of the fifth root race were approximately in the middle of the fourth root race. She began with three fundamental propositions, of which she said: Before the reader proceeds â€¦ it is absolutely necessary that he should be made acquainted with the few fundamental conceptions which underlie and pervade the entire system of thought to which his attention is invited. These basic ideas are few in number, and on their clear apprehension depends the understanding of all that followsâ€¦ [3] The first proposition is that there is one underlying, unconditioned, indivisible Truth, variously called "the Absolute", "the Unknown Root", "the One Reality", etc. It is causeless and timeless, and therefore unknowable and non-describable: Everything in the universe is informed by the potentialities present in the "Unknown Root," and manifest with different degrees of Life or energy , Consciousness, and Matter. Accordingly, manifest existence is an eternally re-occurring event on a "boundless plane": These Monads undergo a process of evolution where consciousness unfolds and matter develops. This evolution is not random, but informed by intelligence and with a purpose. Evolution follows distinct paths in accord with certain immutable laws, aspects of which are perceivable on the physical level. One such law is the law of periodicity and cyclicity; another is the law of karma or cause and effect. The steps in this evolution are called rootraces, seven in all. Earlier rootraces exhibited completely different characteristics: Some detractors have emphasized passages and footnotes that claim some peoples to be less fully human or spiritual than the "Aryans". For example, "Mankind is obviously divided into god-informed men and lower human creatures. The intellectual difference between the Aryan and other civilized nations and such savages as the South Sea Islanders , is inexplicable on any other grounds. No amount of culture, nor generations of training amid civilization, could raise such human specimens as the Bushmen , the Veddhas of Ceylon , and some African Tribes , to the same intellectual level as the Aryans, the Semites , and the Turanians so called. We are the hot-house, artificially quickened plants in nature, having in us a spark, which in them is latent" The Secret Doctrine, Vol. When discussing "sterility between two human races" as observed by Darwin , Blavatsky notes: They were the last descendants in a direct line of the semi-animal latter-day Lemurians referred to. There are, however, considerable numbers of the mixed Lemuro- Atlantean peoples produced by various crossings with such semi-human stocks " e. Blavatsky also asserts that "the occult doctrine admits of no such divisions as the Aryan and the Semite , accepting even the Turanian with ample reservations. Semites, especially the Arabs , are later Aryans " degenerate in spirituality and perfected in materiality" The Secret Doctrine, Vol. She also connects physical race with spiritual attributes constantly throughout her works: She also prophesies of the destruction of the racial "failures of nature" as the "higher race" ascends: Climates will, and have already begun, to change, each tropical year after the other dropping one sub-race, but only to beget another higher race on the ascending cycle; while a series of other less favoured groups " the failures of nature " will, like some individual men, vanish from the human family without even leaving a trace behind" The Secret Doctrine, Vol. In The Secret Doctrine, Blavatsky states: The Secret Doctrine, Vol. Reading the SD page by page as one reads any other book she says will only end us in confusion. Follow that up by study of the Recapitulation " the numbered items in the Summing Up to Vol. Then take the Preliminary Notes Vol. II and the Conclusion Vol. None of my books would have been possible had I not at one time made a very close study of The Secret Doctrine. Fritze has written that The Secret Doctrine presents a "series of far-fetched ideas unsupported by any reliable historical or scientific research. She claimed to have received her information during trances in which the Masters of Mahatmas of Tibet communicated with her and allowed her to read from the ancient Book of Dzyan. The Book of Dzyan was supposedly composed in Atlantis using the lost language of Senzar but the difficulty is that no scholar of ancient languages in the s or since has encountered the slightest passing reference to the Book of Dzyan or the Senzar language. Historian Hannah Newman has noted that the book "denigrates the Jewish faith as harmful to human spirituality".

English-language words and phrases used by contemporary accounts to characterise the event include "massacres", "atrocities", "annihilation", "holocaust", "the murder of a nation", "race extermination" and "a crime against humanity". It happened to the Armenians, then after the Armenians Hitler took action. Concerned that Westerners would come to regard the "extermination of the Armenians" as "a black stain on the history of Islam, which the ages will not efface", El-Ghusein also observes that many Armenian converts were put to death. Armenians in the Ottoman Empire and Ottoman Armenian population Armenians under Ottoman rule The western portion of historical Armenia, known as Western Armenia , had come under Ottoman jurisdiction by the Peace of Amasya and was permanently divided from Eastern Armenia by the Treaty of Zuhab Armenians were mainly concentrated in the eastern provinces of the Ottoman Empire, although large communities were also found in the western provinces, as well as in the capital, Constantinople. The Armenian community was made up of three religious denominations: Under the millet system, the Armenian community was allowed to rule itself under its own system of governance with fairly little interference from the Ottoman government. The dhimmi system in the Ottoman Empire was largely based upon the Pact of Umar. The client status established the rights of the non-Muslims to property, livelihood and freedom of worship, but they were in essence treated as second-class citizens in the empire and referred to in Turkish as gavours , a pejorative word meaning " infidel " or "unbeliever". The clause of the Pact of Umar which prohibited non-Muslims from building new places of worship was historically imposed on some communities of the Ottoman Empire and ignored in other cases, at the discretion of local authorities. Although there were no laws mandating religious ghettos, this led to non-Muslim communities being clustered around existing houses of worship. Testimony against Muslims by Christians and Jews was inadmissible in courts of law wherein a Muslim could be punished; this meant that their testimony could only be considered in commercial cases. They were forbidden to carry weapons or ride atop horses and camels. Their houses could not overlook those of Muslims; and their religious practices were severely circumscribed, e. Armenians are labeled in blue. From to the declaration of a constitution in , the Ottoman government instituted the Tanzimat , a series of reforms designed to improve the status of minorities. By the late s, the Greeks , along with several other Christian nations in the Balkans , frustrated with their conditions, had, often with the help of the Entente powers , broken free of Ottoman rule. Led by intellectuals educated at European universities or American missionary schools in Turkey, Armenians began to question their second-class status and press for better treatment from their government. In one such instance, after amassing the signatures of peasants from Western Armenia, the Armenian Communal Council petitioned the Ottoman government to redress their principal grievances: The Ottoman government considered these grievances and promised to punish those responsible, but no meaningful steps to do so were ever taken. At the same time, the Armenian patriarch of Constantinople, Nerses II, forwarded Armenian complaints of widespread "forced land seizure In the wake of these events, Patriarch Nerses and his emissaries made repeated approaches to Russian leaders to urge the inclusion of a clause granting local self-government to the Armenians in the forthcoming Treaty of San Stefano , which was signed on 3 March The Russians were receptive and drew up the clause, but the Ottomans flatly rejected it during negotiations. On receiving a copy of the treaty, Britain promptly objected to it and particularly Article 16, which it saw as ceding too much influence to Russia. It immediately pushed for a congress of the great powers to be convened to discuss and revise the treaty, leading to the Congress of Berlin in Juneâ€”July Confined to the periphery, the delegation did its best to contact the representatives of the powers and argue the case for Armenian administrative autonomy within the Ottoman Empire, but to little effect. Following an understanding reached with Ottoman representatives, Britain drew up an emasculated version of Article 16 to replace the original, a clause that retained the call for reforms, but omitted any reference to the Russian occupation, thereby dispensing with the principal guarantee of their implementation. Despite an ambiguous reference to Great Power supervision, the clause failed to offset the removal of the Russian guarantee with any tangible equivalent, thus leaving the timing and fate of the reforms to the discretion of the Sublime Porte. Armenian national liberation movement Main article: Armenian national liberation movement Prospects for reforms faded rapidly following the signing of the Berlin treaty, as security conditions in the Armenian provinces went from bad to worse and abuses proliferated. Upset with this turn of events, a number of disillusioned Armenian intellectuals living in Europe and Russia decided to form political parties and societies dedicated to the betterment of their compatriots in the Ottoman Empire. In the last quarter of the 19th century, this movement came to be dominated by three parties: Ideological differences aside, all the parties had the common goal of achieving better social conditions for the Armenians of the Ottoman Empire through self-defense [53] and advocating increased European pressure on the Ottoman government to implement the promised reforms. Hamidian massacres, " Main article: Hamidian massacres Corpses of massacred Armenians in Erzurum in In , Abdul Hamid created a paramilitary outfit known as the Hamidiye , which was mostly made up of Kurdish irregulars tasked to "deal with the Armenians as they wished". In some instances, Armenians successfully fought off the regiments and in brought the excesses to the attention of the Great Powers, who subsequently condemned the Porte. On 1 October , 2, Armenians assembled in Constantinople to petition for the implementation of the reforms, but Ottoman police units violently broke the rally up. Estimates differ on how many Armenians were killed, but European documentation of the pogroms , which became known as the Hamidian massacres , placed the figures at between , and , This incident brought further sympathy for Armenians in Europe and was lauded by the European and American press, which vilified Hamid and painted him as the "great assassin", "bloody Sultan", and " Abdul the Damned ". We would like to thank you on our latest purchase. We really love the comfort and homey feel of this one. A special thanks to Erica, as confusing as all those papers were, you are such a big help! Thanks to the Service Department for answering all our operating questions. Camp-Land is a great place to do business with. Thank you all so much. We have camped in it every weekend since we got it. Everything is working great!!! Also I want to let you and Camp-Land know that I could not be happier with the great service we have received from Camp-Land. We just had one issue with the piece on the camper and Camp-Land ordered it for us and I am going to pick it up this week. I will definitely let others know about Camp-Land. Thank you again for everything!!! Rose and Carlos March 27, Wanted to pass along our thanks to you and your team. As you know, we picked up our Coleman Trailer today. Everyone was very helpful and made the experience a pleasant one. Mike, was helpful and patient during our January visit. It was very, very cold and he showed us numerous trailers and had answers to all of our questions. Once there today, Wade was very informative and patient as he explained the camper from one end to the other. Chelso was helpful as well and convinced us to purchase the automatic tongue jack. It was immediately installed which was convenient for sure. He too was able to answer all of our questions. Eva assisted with things she thought we would need to get us started from the store. Finally, Kelly assisted very well with the mountain of paperwork. Please pass along our thanks to the entire team. Tim has always been a pleasure to work with, going the extra mile to ensure a good "purchase experience" ,and that we are satisfied customers. We had purchased a brand new RV at a different dealership. When we ran into problems with it the first week, the dealership was not willing to work with us. We called Camp-Land and talked to Roy, and he went out of his way to accommodate us. The technicians, Ed and Dennis were very thorough and worked quickly. We were very satisfied when we left Camp Land. A week later when we experienced a different problem with our RV, We knew right away that we wanted to work with Camp Land again. We were moving that same day, so of course Roy and his team worked quickly to get us in and out. The technician, Fred, went above and beyond to solve our problems! I would highly recommend Camp Land RV! Thanks again for such great service and a friendly atmosphere! Since I broke down with my boat trailer, on Saturday, Roy, Chelso and yourself have all gone the extra mile to help me out. These days, that kind of service means a lot. Thanks again and please pass my appreciation on to the guys. It is so important that the first contact be a good one and this was a good one!! We were handed over to Tim Kennedy who listened to what we were looking for and then showed us several trailers. He was intent on us making up our own minds as to which trailer was wanted. The demo of our new trailer was fun and informative, Larry in the service Department and Chelso were great!! Erica worked her magic on the bank loan and closing the deal with her went without a hitch. People are what make a business thrive or fail and here they have a winning bunch of folks! I would highly recommend this dealership to anyone. Even the orientation went smoothly and was conducted by Kenny. We immediately went camping after we purchased the camper so we could get acquainted with the new aspects of the camper. We were experienced campers, but with the new camper, things were somewhat different and took us some time to get acclimated. We did have a couple of questions after our camping trip, and were quickly answered by the staff upon our return. We bought a good product and very good people to deal with. You "all" went beyond what can ever be expected. Your hospitality will not be forgotten. A special thank you, to our great mechanic, for getting us back on the road. We logged eight trips this year and have finally been able to experience fall camping. The heated bed mats and furnace made all the difference the last few trips. We finally had to winterize it this past weekend. We happened to see the Camp-Land sign as we drove by on the interstate and decided to stop to ask about replacing a shelf for the refrigerator in our Fleetwood Tioga. While the person at the Parts Desk was helping us with the shelf, she looked up our model number and discovered that there was a recall for our refrigerator. I have been carrying around the recall notice for sometime, worried about the issue, but unable to find an opportunity to schedule a maintenance visit. I was totally surprised when they were able to do the recall work while we waited. I feel this was incredible service. Thank you to all of your staff that worked with us last weekend. We immediately called your service department and spoke with Roy Allison. He set us up for Thursday morning service because we had a reservation to go camping on Sunday September He was the most courteous and all around nice person we have ever dealt with. Because of this experience, we are very glad we bought our camper at Camp-Land. Everybody that we have dealt with from Big Dave in sales to Pam in Finance and Deb in parts, have been absolutely wonderful. Thank you Camp-Land for making our purchase a great experience. Thank you Randy and Janet We are thoroughly enjoying our new Jayco pop-up camper. Thanks to all the Camp-Land staff who were so patient with us as we wrung our hands with first-time buyer" jitters. We sell FUN here! We purchased our used travel trailer sight unseen, over the telephone based on what Randy had told us. The delivery process was easy and "Uncle Larry" did a great job with the walk thru. From the 1st phonecall to Tim to the last of directions from Larry. Everone is so professional but we had a good time also. Friendly people are what it is all about. Really, I feel as if there has got to be something wrong with people like us who end up enjoying going into debt not bad , just because the shopping, and explanations, and education given by Mik, and Pam, and all the other members of a truly great staff were top notch. Kudos Camp Land, Dianna L. The R-Pod was fantastic! Used air AND heat We are still novices, but we have had a good time. My new pup is doing quite well. I can tell you the heater works as in April we woke to 11 inches of snow on ground. By the way, we love the camper and we think you have a great staff. You guys pulled out all the stops, and repaired our 5th wheel in a few hours on a day you were not even open for service! Thank you very much. It was great meeting you and all the Camp-Land staff".

Losing my religion Notes: The conversations are HELL! M inspired the title! Chapter Text The two months left before Daniels freedom took their sweet, sweet time. Daniel had gotten sick of room so much that he barely opened his eyes to stare at it, only staring out the window for hours on end until David arrived for his daily visit. Truthfully, Daniel relished the thirty minutes David visited and looked forward to some sort of relief from the room that was slowly turning him insane. Other than the short-lived company, not much happened that was worth Daniels interest. Doctors came in to swap out IVs and give him disgusting food, which Daniel left untouched most of the time. There was, at one point, some grapes on his styrofoam tray that he greedily engulfed in mere seconds, leaving the doctors rather shocked, but they never took the hint and seemed insistent that he ate their selected diet. Because of his behavior, his health was actually declining, and the doctors resorted to giving him nutrients through IVs. At one point they threatened to extend his stay at the hospital, and in a panicked frenzy, Daniel broke and did what they asked just so he could get out as quickly as possible. As he continued his stay, however, a certain mentality changed inside of him. Corruption by food seemed like less and less of a threat as he ate the hospital food, and he actually enjoyed some of the variety it brought. Eventually, that idea become faint in his mind, and he selfishly ate whatever they brought him, just so that he could have something to do. He clung to the thought that everything would be fine after he got back home. Finally, after what seemed like an eternity, David appeared with his usual jubilant face, doctors tailing behind him. His awestruck face betrayed excitement, which David picked up on immediately. As the doctors shuffled over to unlatch all those leeches they called IVs and clean up the various medical supplies they had lying around, David pulled his phone out of his pocket and dialed up a number. Hearing their beeps slowly fade out made him shiver. After a few minutes, he was freed, holding his arms and rubbing them as the doctors rolled a few machines out of the room. With curious eyes, Daniel watched as David entered the room with something folded in his hands. White, smooth it was his old uniform! Some doctors are going to wait outside for you while I get the car ready! He skipped out of the room with a smile. Daniel wasted no time ditching the hospital gown and putting on his white clothes. Feeling their soft cotton fibers comforted him beyond belief as he dressed up in familiar wear. After a few quick minutes, Daniel was back in his prized uniform, feeling quite refreshed as he rolled up the cuffs of his sleeves. His equally bright shoes complimented his mono color shirt and pants, and once the set was complete, he put his hands on his hips and sighed. It was good to be back. Careful not to disturb any of the supplies on the floor that had been left by the doctors, Daniel walked over to the door and opened it up, watching as it revealed an unfamiliar world to him. Tan walls, white tile floors and the smell of bleach assaulted his senses and he pushed the door open and entered the hallway. There were no pictures in these bland halls, only windows and doors leading to other rooms, probably hosting other patients. He was only a few steps out of his room before a stone-faced doctor approached him. She held no papers or documents, just an empty clipboard. The blonde man just nodded, walking to her side and holding his hands behind his back in a rather formal manner. The woman was clearly agitated by his presence, but she remained silent as they rode the elevator to the bottom level. As soon as the doors spread open, Daniel spotted David sitting on a bench, fiddling with his car keys. The redheads eyes shot up and met Daniels with giddy excitement, and David got up and smiled as the pair approached him. The lady left the two as soon as David reached them, leaving just Daniel and David. Ready to get going? Daniel put on a smile and held up a thumbs-up. David took this as his cue and pressed a button on his car keys, causing a small SUV to turn on its lights. Both of the boys left the building in anticipation, but for different reasons. David was excited to help Daniel become a better person- possibly to prove that he could make someone care. Daniel, on the other hand, was already darting his eyes back and forth, searching for escape routes that he could use in the future. Daniel decided to try his luck in the front passengers seat, and he sat in the car in silence, careful not to slam the door. Escape plan number one- steal the car. Ok, so I knock David out and take over driving. Do I kick him out or leave him here? Maybe I could take him home to mother and father. I could just dump him out onto the street.

But I have no idea where I am. I could do that. Oh, yes, of course. The driver droned on about all the wonderful things about Camp Campbell, but Daniel resumed thinking about escape. What if David manages to fight me off or stop me? My only chance would be over. Too many variables, too many ways it could go wrong. Daniel, after quite a few minutes of thinking, decided not to do anything. The only music in the hospital was the beeping of machines, and it was incredibly annoying after the first few minutes of hearing those metal boxes continue their patterns. He was too busy enjoying the music. He was happy he got to hear some music and enjoy an environment other than the hospital. Not after what the man did for him. He wondered if David liked Kool-aid.

Camp host Lou Kandel gives the new comers, mostly women, the rundown of the place; first, he introduces the waiters, mostly college men. Enter Teddy Stern, a young woman soon to be wed to a stuffy, older man: Teddy has been crying uncontrollably since her engagement, so her doctor suggested she get some rest before the wedding. Teddy then meets Itchy Flexner, the social director who does it all: He just loves to entertain "Social Director". He engages the entire camp with his talent. An announcement over the loudspeaker tells everyone to change for dinner. As she heads to her cabin, Teddy meets Pinky Harris - a dashing, womanizing fellow who takes an interest in her. After Teddy has changed for dinner, she notices Fay flirting with Harry "Muscles" Green - the new athletic director. It seems that Fay has her eye on every available man at Camp Karefree. She confesses that she just loves to flirt "Shopping Around". The scene shifts to the locker room for the waiters listlessly wipe the water glasses and reflect on what they have to do to put themselves through school "Bright College Days". Kandel enters and reminds the waiters that part of their job is to entertain the ladies - all of them, not just the pretty ones - by dancing and talking with them. Chick, a law student, is tired of being a waiter by day and gigolo by night - he wants to meet a real girl, not these eager beavers, as he calls them, at Camp Karefree. On the Social Hall Porch, the girls want to dance, but the men are playing poker. When the waiters arrive the girls rush inside excitedly to dance with them. She listens to the other girls speculate that tonight could be the night they fall in love, looks at her ring finger, and starts crying "Could Be". Chick casually enters and stands unaware of Teddy. Chick quickly convinces the reluctant Teddy to dance with him just as Kandel enters. Inside the social hall, Itchy directs everyone in a get-acquainted dance "Tripping the Light Fantastic". At the end, ready to escort her home, Chick is still with Teddy and thanks her for getting him out of a tight spot. In fact, he wants Itchy to help him survey the situation and see just how he can lure Teddy to him. Itchy agrees - on the condition Pinky get him a TV audition. Next, Muscles comes over and asks Itchy for advice on wooing a girl. Itchy is happy to oblige, until he finds out the girl is Fay who Itchy also wants! Chick thinks this is perfect. Chick has trouble with the socializing part of his job, because all of the girls he is supposed to romance want long-term contacts. Since Teddy does not, he asks her if she will spend the next two weeks with him. They dance the last dance of the evening together and go off to bed - alone "Where Did the Night Go". A week later, Muscles is exhausting everyone on the athletic field. Itchy has to cancel evening activities because everyone is too tired to show up. Meanwhile, Pinky tells Teddy he has just ordered a new formal dress in her size that is meant to be the prize for the Miss Karefree bathing beauty contest. Teddy ignores this obvious pass and goes off with Chick. Fay flirts with Muscles and Itchy gets increasingly jealous. Though they see their relationship as a friendship, everyone else sees a blossoming romance "Certain Individuals". Itchy decides that he has got to get some new social ideas that will excite the girls. He decides to have a candlelight evening in the social hall. He figures that will be so romantic that all the girls will forget Muscles and his sports events. Unfortunately, his plan backfires when the Social Hall catches fire. Kandel is so mad at Itchy that he demotes him to Boat House Boy and puts Muscles in charge of all social events. When Teddy asks what has come over him, Chick reveals that he loves Teddy. Teddy tells Chick that not only is she already engaged, she meant to get married next week. Rather than talk anymore about it, they go back to the camp. Back at the boathouse, we find Itchy has been demoted to Boat Boy. She confesses that she knew all along that Teddy was engaged and gives Teddy her ring back. The girls enter in their bathing suits - ready for the Miss Camp Karefree Contest. Gussie, one of the available girls rushes forward and shows Chick that she has no ring on her finger. He asks her out and plans on cheering for her in the contest. Teddy, hurt, decides that she too will enter the contest, in retaliation. Pinky is thrilled to have the chance to put the moves on Teddy "Summer Afternoon". Pinky naturally picks Teddy to win the contest. He shows her the gorgeous new dress. In return, she gives him a kiss, and in a jealous fit, Chick pushes Pinky into the pool. Kandel has Chick restrained and threatens to fire him. Pinky delights in watching this happen to Chick and laughs. Teddy, upset at seeing Chick humiliated, pushes Pinky into the pool. Nevertheless, Chick still leaves with Gussie and Teddy watches them go, crying. Itchy performs a rousing number that he hopes will both draw out Teddy and win Fay back "Don Jose". Unfortunately, Fay ends up kissing Muscles at the end of the song. Itchy has a jealous fight with Muscles over Fay. She breaks up the fight. Chick returns to apologize to Pinky though there still is a great deal of tension between the two of them. Fay passes drinks to around to the fighting men and tells them just to get along for tonight "Everybody Love Everybody". Swallowing his drink, he does "Wish You Were Here". Gussie quickly laps up Chick when he finishes singing and Pinky tries to get Teddy drunk and take her back to his cabin. Before anything more happens, it starts raining and everyone runs for cover. Itchy comes over to talk with Pinky and a panicked Teddy hides in the bathroom while Pinky attempts to get rid of Itchy. By the time Itchy leaves, Teddy has emerged from the bathroom with an empty glass wearing the sexy dress she won in the beauty contest. She tells him to mind his own business. He puts the ring on the night table and leaves. The next morning outside the social hall, Herman has come to bring Teddy home. No one seems to know where Teddy is, and Herman is not too happy about this. Itchy and Marvin also bemoan the fact that their girlfriends are nowhere to be found. They then realize that the girls have spent the whole night dancing to Be-Bop records in the music library. Fay and some of the other kids enter dancing like "cool cats" "Where Did the Night Go? Muscles takes the guests off to play basketball, and Teddy enters, finding Herman. It appears that even though nothing happened between Teddy and Pinky, Pinky is out accepting congratulations for his conquest. He wants to take Teddy back to New York where the two can get married. Her goes to get the car. He forgot to tie up the boats last night during the storm and they all floated away. Itchy, overhearing the conversation, chastises Teddy for not putting up a fight. Itchy wants her to go over to the big camp basketball game and make Pinky, the referee, tell the truth. Teddy is flattered that Itchy cares so much. His kind words really give her a lift. And she returns the sentiment in kind "Flattery". She agrees to go to the game. In the game, the camp team led by Muscles plays the waiter team led by Chick. Itchy arrives and disrupts the game so badly that Muscles declares the game officially over. He claims that he did no such thing; however, the rest of the camp is having a great time insinuating that Teddy is now a loose woman. Herman hears this and is relieved. Teddy gives a kiss to Chick and gets in the car and leaves with Herman. Muscles, frustrated with the interruption of his game, quits on the spot. Itchy immediately organizes everyone to dance. Suddenly, Herman re-enters with two suitcases, which he lays down. Teddy runs to Chick and falls into his arms.
