Reinventing Your Rainbow will help you seek and accept God's forgiveness for past mistakes. You will learn how to truly forgive yourself while you begin an incredible personal journey to discover the awesome and vibrant colors that God wants to pour into your heart.

This is the second post in a series about Rainbow , an advanced serialization library for Sitecore. Part 1, dealing with improving the serialization file format, can be found here. Introducing Serialization File System Rainbow supports the idea of a data store, which is an abstraction of the necessary components to store and retrieve Sitecore items. A data store need not be serialized: Serialization File System, or SFS for short, is a pattern for organizing files on disk to represent a Sitecore item tree. This means that you can use whatever format you want, without having to reimplement the whole organizational structure. Why do we need SFS? So we can map the two together pretty easily, right? The Win32 filesystem APIs on the other hand, have a maximum path length of characters. So now we run into a problem where you can have a path in Sitecore that is unrepresentable on the filesystem, because the content path is too long. They take the item path and apply a trivial hash algorithm to it, then put the item at the root of the serialization tree in a folder named that hash. For example slightly simplified: The hash is not a standard algorithm; there is no obvious way to see what it means without reading the. It also makes merging very unintuitive if the short-pathed items are changed because the file path tells you nearly nothing. What happens if you create an item name that is so long that it alone becomes too long to fit in the Windows filesystem path limits? Imagine an item with a character name. Unicorn 2 fails because it uses the Sitecore APIs. Pretty sure TDS does too, but I could be wrong. On the Windows filesystem the file name is a unique key. But this is the basis upon which the Sitecore standard serialization hierarchy is built: But they made the right choice. Do you want to merge conflicts in items named by ID on disk? But this means we have a problem to solve: When an item is serialized the parent paths are evaluated for items of the same name, and if one exists then the item path has the parent ID appended to it. These methods are all static, and thus the only way to change their behavior is by decompiling them and using your own fixed copy of them. Tired of hearing me rant about bugs? Me too, how about we talk about solving these problems instead! How does SFS work The SFS data store is capable of storing practically infinite item path depths, as long of an item name as you please, handling duplicate filenames in all cases, and writing to any path you please. It also means that you can browse to the items with fewer clicks in Windows Explorer. In the above case the c: The loopback paths are also named by the item ID of the parent of the items in the loopback. So if we add loopchild under parent, c: For example, suppose you had two items of the same name and then added different children to each. SFS will actually resolve the path by evaluating down the filesystem paths until it finds the matching path regardless of parentage - and it returns all matches instead of whichever one it feels like. The case of writing items at different times is also handled; SFS checks existing same named items for any with the same ID and reuses the name. So you never get renames for no reason or corrupted trees. This may sound like a lot of file reading. Long Item Name Handling Obscenely long item names are handled by simply truncating them before putting them on the filesystem. A setting controls the maximum name length. Parent items are properly disambiguated using ID suffixes if two differently named items truncate to the same short name. So many duplicate names then! Hey, what about an index file to speed up querying? In fact Rainbow was originally designed to be a general purpose data store, where you could directly query an item by ID, path, template ID, or parent ID. It had in memory indexes that it would maintain, backed variously by a single global index file, and reading the headers of each serialized file. The indexes worked pretty well, in fact. But they had several major problems that caused me to scrap them: A centralized index file precludes the possibility of easily copying items between trees because the index entries would have to go with it A filesystem logically organized for a computer and index, where items are stored by ID-based filenames, is nearly unintelligible to a human and merging becomes hairy, and commit errors due to not being able to see the item path easily would be possible Can I have it yet? Why yes, yes you can. For a fresh install it should be as simple as installing the Unicorn package - unless you want to hack around the Rainbow APIs, in which case Unicorn is not required. It no doubt has some bugs. The bugs may be more than minor.

You may also email Sheila Mangum with any questions or to book an event. I would love to talk with you about bringing this conference to your church! Books signings can also be scheduled around the weekend agendas. Goals of this conference: These words describe how most women feel as a result of stress being an epidemic in our society. This is a great opportunity to pamper your women, physically and spiritually, and send them home refreshed and re-energized to live a life with less stress. Themes and Decorating Suggestions: Event planners are welcome to come up with their own themes if desired; these are just suggestions 1. The Trip of a Lifetime: Focus your conference around the theme of taking a cruise. Use photos of beautiful beaches, the tropics and serene beach sunsets for promotional materials. Have large poster created of a peaceful beach scene to use as a backdrop for the speaker and musicians. This Is The Life: Focus your conference around the theme of a day at the spa. Use photos of peaceful places lakes, rivers, beaches, front porches, rocking chairs, etc. Use decorating items based on water themes, waterfalls, lush forests, spas. Gift bags could include decorate soaps, lotions, nail polish, or other spa items. Color Me New; Divinely Designed: This retreat will result in changed hearts and changed lives as women discover a spiritual freedom like never before and see first hand how God really can use all things to His glory. Taking Off The Masks 2. This retreat encourages women to see how God has been painting a rainbow in their lives through all of their good and bad experiences. Women will experience healing and forgiveness, and be inspired to begin living a transparent life, through gaining confidence and courage to be real with themselves, with God, and with others. Women will leave with an increased understanding of how God can use all things to His glory, and how He can turn our past into our purpose if we are willing to trust Him, step out in faith and answer His call. Praise and Worship Songs: Women will have the opportunity to embrace a new sense of identity, as they recognize that their value lies in who they are in Christ and they are a treasure to Him. Use their collages as a discussion point for turning to God with our insecurities. Have craft supplies available for mask making; have women create the invisible mask that they may have been wearing, either in a serious or comical fashion. This weekend encourages women to see themselves as ordinary people, in the hands of an extraordinary God, and brings humor and fun by pulling in comparisons from fairy tale princesses. Women will leave with a renewed sense of their identity in Christ, and a new perspective on who they are, and where their personal worth comes from. Attendees will also experience a new perspective on how to hear from God in their life, and how to live a life that is intimately connected with Him. Empowered By A Whisper 3. This retreat gives women an opportunity to purify their hearts, minds and souls by getting real with God, themselves and others. Women will leave inspired to live an authentic life for Christ and allow Christ to work through them to do extraordinary things. Upon truly realizing that we are continually being molded and built into the woman God created us to be, women embrace the opportunity to live a life that glorifies Christ and draws others to His love. This retreat puts a fun spin on the sweet, savory goodness that Christ brings into our life when we make Him a priority and foster an intimate friendship with Him. Women will learn how to hear from God in the unique ways that He chooses to speak, and be inspired to take a leap of faith in serving Him, allowing Him to do extraordinary things with us ordinary people. Candy themed decorations and giveaways; Candyland items; Fondue fountains; Old-timey candy store appearance; Valentines theme; Centerpiece Ideas: Colorful candy items and balloons; small boxes of various sizes put under a table cloth, and a mountain of candy built in the center of the table; bowls of chocolate kisses or over sized large chocolate kiss candies; different colors and sizes of heart decorations. This retreat is focused on helping women understand the importance and necessity for spending time with God and building an intimate relationship with Him. They will be encouraged to deepen their walk with Him through daily reflection and prayer. Women will feel a new hunger and thirst for being passionate about serving God and others with their life.

The stress that comes with making all the decisions, from picking a date and overall theme, to the speaker, decorations, music and group activities, can often seem overwhelming. Keep in mind that these are simply suggestions, to give you some ideas, but that Tracie will be glad to work with you to customize an event that meets all of your expectations and the spiritual needs of your attendees. Retreats can include two, three or four topics please see the Topics tab for full session descriptions. You will notice that some retreat sessions have been re-titled to reflect a suggested retreat theme, but the standard session title will be noted in parentheses. In addition to the suggested songs, she could also sing a song of your choice, either traditional or contemporary, if given enough time in advance to prepare. This is completely optional, just a special offer for those who are interested or in need of a soloist. This retreat encourages women to see how God has been painting a rainbow in their lives through all of their good and bad experiences. Women will experience healing and forgiveness, and be inspired to begin living a transparent life, through gaining confidence and courage to be real with themselves, with God, and with others. Women will leave with an increased understanding of how God can use all things to His glory, and how He can turn our past into our purpose if we are willing to step out in faith and answer His call. The Revelation Song Speaker Solo: It will help women to release feelings of shame and guilt, and realize how much Christ loves them despite their mistakes or shortcomings. Women will have the opportunity to embrace a new sense of identity, as they recognize that their value lies in who they are in Christ, not in the eyes of the world. Who Am I Session Titles: Taking Off The Masks 2. This retreat is focused on helping women discover that they can hear from God and strengthen their walk with Him as they learn to build an intimate relationship with Him through focus and prayer. They will leave with a greater understanding of how we truly are a new creation in Christ. Fly Away Session Titles: Empowered By A Whisper 2. Taking Off The Masks 3. At this retreat, hearts will be healed and spirits restored as women realize that the key to true joy in life, is living a life sold out for Christ. They will be encouraged to step out in faith and allow God to use them for great things, as they step out of their comfort zones and into the faith zone. This retreat inspires women to take an inward look at their heart, and their attitude, and examine if their thoughts and actions are God-honoring. It will encourage them to embrace the opportunity for a joy-filled life, even amid difficult circumstances and hardships. Women will gain a renewed sense of self worth and identity as they recognize that their value comes from Christ alone and that He has selected them as His priceless possession. Forever A Princess 3. This retreat helps women grasp the reality that they can hear from God on daily basis as they embark on a new journey of walking more intimately with Him. They will be reminded of how our attitude not only affects our life, but also our faith walk. They will walk away understanding that Jesus sincerely understands how they are feeling in the situations they are facing, and that He is the only source of true and lasting stress relief. It is a weekend that can be focused on the importance of friendships in our life, and with Jesus. Women will walk away encouraged to deepen their relationship with Jesus, be attentive to how He speaks to their spirits, and to embrace the joy found in a passionate pursuit of Christ. The Real Me Session Titles: This weekend encourages women to see themselves as ordinary people, in the hands of an extraordinary God. Women will leave with a renewed sense of their identity in Christ, and a new perspective on who they are, and where their personal worth comes from. Attendees will also experience a new perspective on how to hear from God in their life, and how to live a life that is intimately connected with Him. Women will walk away feeling royal and empowered to be all God created them to be and to live a life that exudes His power within them. Empowered By A Whisper 3. This retreat gives women an opportunity to purify their hearts, minds and souls and get right with God. It is a reminder that our joy comes from Christ, not from circumstances, and that we can do all things through Him who strengthens us, and that He is our safe place of refuge. Food For the Heart Absolute Devotion 2. This retreat will inspire women to keep their priorities straight and their hearts focused on Jesus as they kick off the busyness and chaos of the holiday season. It will remind them how to keep Christ in the holiday celebrations, to celebrate the gifts that God has promised us, and to focus on remembering that our lives are meant to be a reflection of Him not only at Christmas, but all year round. Mary Did You Know? A Cup of Christmas C. This retreat focuses on helping women realize that God is in control, even when life seems out of control, and that He calls us to get out of our boats and trust Him. This is a great retreat to encourage women to get involved in local ministries within the church, or missions opportunities. Teaching The Called Goal: Cultivating A Heart for Servant Leadership 4. Burning Out vs Fueling The Fire 5. Before you even begin thinking about planning your retreat, spend some time in prayer, and ask God to give you clarity about every decision you will be making. Also, make sure you know the needs of your group before choosing a speaker, or a retreat theme. It is so important to be in touch with the women being served, and keep in mind the issues they are facing, the concerns that they may have expressed recently, or common difficulties that many are dealing with in their relationships, work, community or faith walk.

We would like to show you a description here but the site won't allow us.

The song is lighter and fresher than the earthy stylings of Telluric, inspired by his newborn son and the bliss surrounding them at their secluded Northern NSW property of Rainbow Valley. It was here, in the lush rainforest-like backyard, where Corby filmed a live music video for All Fired Up with just a piano and his heavenly voice. It was here, under the stars, where Corby fused art and his synaesthesia-invoking music with a time-lapsed video involving light projections. Rainbow Valley is a bubbling caldron of psychedelic soul, fused with old-school hip-hop production and smatterings of whimsical yet defiant introspection. Rainbow Valley is so textured and complex in its production. Where do you start with an album like this? We just go one instrument at a time. We never really set out to do anything in particular apart from trying to write the best feeling songs. How long did it take you to master them all? Well, not crazy but you know what I mean! Do you consciously try to reinvent your sound with each release or has it just happened naturally? All of that ends up coming together; you find ways to make it all work. I sing in specific ways that are somewhat different to other people. Do you try to experiment with the vocals just as much as the instruments? I definitely was using my falsetto differently this time and tried to push the tones of my voice into new territories. That album in particular really helped me with the sound palette for this album. Photo by Matt Johnson. What keeps driving you to maintain your independence and not conform to what labels or other higher influences might want you to do? Labels, in particular, they want to control the content as much as possible. Do you feel responsible to your label, team or even fans to constantly be creating within set time frames? I definitely never try to push it. I am really meticulous when it comes to orchestrating songs and writing melodies, I always want to try and do something different. Are you able to manipulate those states to create specific sounds at specific times? When we were writing melodies for this record, we would make two tracks a day and build them to a point where they were ready to write melodies on and then just put them away for a couple of hours, have dinner and come back, and I would have forgotten the first thing. It creates things that are slightly more individual. So many of the songs on Rainbow Valley, like Miracle Love and All Fired Up, are very vocal heavy and really push the lyrics to the forefront. How do you get to a place of being so comfortable and open on an album, knowing full well people all over the world are going to hear these intimate parts of your life? Is that spiritual nature something you find in your personal life that has now transferred into your music? I would say that I do think deeply about a lot of things, sometimes to my detriment. I try and apply it to every part of the orchestration or composition of the song. What was it like working with Dann Hume so closely for Rainbow Valley? There are a few songs already that are kicking around that are pretty cool. I like just keeping a constant flow of work, getting into my little home studio as much as possible, making little instrumentals, and writing little melodies.
