Stones In The River Lyrics: Four years old at his front door / Watches while his daddy drives away / He knows that something's wrong / When he sees the tears on momma's face / And his whole life.

December 31, [edit] December 31, 8: At dawn on December 31, about 6 a. McCown , before many in Union Brig. This was the third major battle, after Fort Donelson and Shiloh , in which an early morning attack caught a Union army by surprise. The 10, Confederates who massed on their left attacked in one massive wave. These two divisions swept all resistance aside. Several artillery batteries were captured without having time to fire a shot. His neighboring Union division to the left, under Brig. Davis , was able to hold only briefly. As Rosecrans raced across the battlefield directing units, seeming ubiquitous to his men, his uniform was covered with blood from his friend and chief of staff, Col. Withers and Benjamin F. What saved the Union from total destruction that morning was the foresight of Maj. They had captured 28 guns and over 3, Union soldiers. Two Confederate blunders aided Rosecrans. He refused to send two brigades as reinforcements across the river to aid the main attack on the left. When Bragg ordered him to attack to his front€”so that some use could be made of his corps€”Breckinridge moved forward and was embarrassed to find out that there were no Union troops opposing him. At about that time, Bragg received a false report that a strong Union force was moving south along the Lebanon Turnpike in his direction. He canceled his orders that Breckinridge send reinforcements across the river, which diluted the effectiveness of the main attack. The Union troops regrouped and held the Nashville Pike, supported by reinforcements and massed artillery. Repeated attacks on the left flank of the Union line were repulsed by Col. Hascall sent the 3rd Kentucky to the Round Forest as reinforcements. He declared that it had to be held, "even if it cost the last man we had. The Union line was stabilized by the strong leadership of Rosecrans and by the rallying of the divisions under Johnson and Davis. The new line was roughly perpendicular to the original line, in a small half oval with its back to the river. The attack failed a second time. Thomas responded with a limited counterattack that cleared his front. Unless the Union army collapsed at the first onslaught, it would be pushed back into a tighter and stronger defensive position as the battle continued, while the Confederate forces would gradually lose momentum, become disorganized, and grow weaker. Like a snowball, the Union would pick up strength from the debris of battle if they retreated in good order. But the Confederates would inevitably unwind like a ball of string as they advanced. Some of his generals felt that the Union army had been defeated and recommended a retreat before they were entirely cut off. Rosecrans opposed this view and was strongly supported by Thomas and Crittenden. Although he had suffered 9, casualties, he was convinced that the large number of captured Union soldiers meant that Rosecrans had lost considerably more. The Confederate army began digging in, facing the Union line. Bragg sent a telegram to Richmond before he went to bed: We occupy [the] whole field and shall follow him. God has granted us a happy New Year. Polk launched two probes of the Union line, one against Thomas, the other against Sheridan, to little effect. Convoys of wounded had to travel under heavy escort to be protected from the cavalry, and Wheeler interpreted these movements as preparations for a retreat, and he reported such to Bragg. Buoyed by his sense that he had won the battle, Bragg was content to wait for Rosecrans to retreat. Breckinridge initially protested that the assault would be suicidal but eventually agreed and attacked with determination. The Confederate attack stalled, having suffered over 1, casualties in less than an hour. A Union division under the command of James S. Breckinridge was devastated by the disaster. As he rode among the survivors, he cried out repeatedly, "My poor Orphans! Late that evening, Thomas attacked the center of the Confederate line with two regiments in reaction to constant enemy sharpshooting against troops in his division under Lovell H. Thomas drove the Confederates from their entrenchments, taking about 30 prisoners. Despite this action, the main battle is generally accepted to have ended on January 2. Beginning at 10 p. Rosecrans occupied Murfreesboro on January 5, but made no attempt to pursue Bragg. He had, of course, sound reasons for withdrawing from Murfreesboro. His principal subordinates advised him to retreat. But his decision to retreat allowed his enemies to charge that once again Bragg had lost his nerve.

Shepherds Who are the Shepherds? The Shepherds are a team of respected men who provide spiritual direction for the Stones River Church family. They are recognized and honored by the congregation for having a lifestyle of mature, godly influence through their Christ-like examples of the Good Shepherd, Jesus Christ. We, the Stones River family, love our shepherds and would like for you to meet them: From to , I preached for several churches in Tennessee: My lovely and talented wife, Diane, and I began attending Stones River church in and we have been a part of the Stones River family since that time. I began serving as one of the shepherds at Stones River in and am greatly honored to serve my King and a family of his people in that capacity. Chris Braach Chris has attended SR since They served on the Administration Committee for 5 years. His passion is to work with those who are not normally heard or seen and help them develop their voice. Chris and Angela were married in the fall of He is a proud parent, step-parent, and grandparent, and has had the privilege of homeschooling since He enjoys golf, football and a large variety of music. Chris was raised in a small town Methodist church in Montana. He has served as Shepherd at Stones River since March Linda and I have seven children who are the parents of ten others. Two more are in the oven as I write this brief biography. We were members of the Southside Church of Christ while living there. We found permanent housing in Murfreesboro in May of We began our search for a church family and landed at Riverdale Church of Christ. It was there that I met John Magnuson as he became our worship minister. Shortly after we began to work together he was led to Stones River Church. Linda and I also home churched with the Winters as Linda cared for Jeff. During this period John asked me to join his three member group to lead a Sunday evening event at Stones River. I see Chuck the singer. God sees something else and has used this body church to raise me up in newness of life. He has placed me in the midst of a group of men who differ both culturally and professionally, yet we more than coexist. We build each other up in love. Love lives in our prayers for one another and for all. I also read other gospels with the Holy Spirits guidance and prosper in them. My bible reading habits became study habits once I accepted this shepherds role. I usually study from the KGV as it compels me to search for deeper meaning or definition. I read several other versions for comparison. My participation is in the leading of songs to background vocals on both acappella and instrumental teams. I support events of interest to this family and participate in all men events when possible. The rest of my time is spent with my blood family having fun and still teaching at every opportunity. You know what fathers do. I was forced to retire with 25 years service at the close of Saturn in Needless to say some fear came but so did Savior. Ten years into the recession and three marriages, four grandchildren, three grands graduated HS, one college graduation this year and less debt. Not bragging, Savior did it. Married for 32 years to my beautiful wife Trudy and am blessed with 2 wonderful children, Ian and Rachel. Both children are happily married. I have been a member at Stones River for approximately 20 years. Jerry Bryan Jerry is the husband of his childhood sweetheart Beverly. They have two daughters, Leah and Rebekah. Rebekah and Josh have two children " Maggie and Levi. He enjoys gardening, woodworking and tinkering with antique tractors. David Burgess My wife Donna and I have been married for 35 years. We have 3 children and 2 grandchildren. I have been employed with Roscoe Brown Inc. It is a pleasure to serve as a Shepard. I think the Stones River Church of Christ family is the most loving and welcoming group of Christians I have ever been a part of. Mike Randolph I have been married to Lesa for 39 years. I enjoy spending time with my family, working with wood, and gemstones. I have over 30 years experience in real estate and construction. Currently, I am a Realtor with Reliant Realty. I have been a shepherd for 20 years. I love being a part of what God is doing in his church. It has been a joy to serve with many great men of God over the years. This answer is two-fold: First, the image of a shepherd is an inspiring reminder of our role as spiritual leaders. The relationship of shepherd and sheep is built on trust. As exemplified in John Our desire is to focus on the goal of nurturing mature disciples through spiritual leadership. As a result of this goal, an administrative team was born to free us, the shepherds, from the distractions of administrative operations.

When Napoleon Bonaparte retreated from Moscow, Tsar Alexander I signed a manifest on 25 December declaring his intention to build a cathedral in honor of Christ the Savior "to signify Our gratitude to Divine Providence for saving Russia from the doom that overshadowed Her" and as a memorial to the sacrifices of the Russian people. It took some time for work on the projected cathedral to get started. The first finished architectural project, by Aleksandr Lavrentyevich Vitberg , was endorsed by the Tsar in It was a flamboyant Neoclassical design full of Freemasonic symbolism. The building under construction in as seen from the Kremlin Construction work was begun on the Sparrow Hills , the highest point in Moscow, but the site proved unstable. In the meantime Alexander I was succeeded by his brother Nicholas I. Profoundly Orthodox and patriotic, the new Tsar disliked the Neoclassicism and Freemasonry of the design selected by his predecessor. He commissioned his favorite architect Konstantin Thon to create a new design, taking as his model Hagia Sophia in Constantinople , Turkey. A new site closer to the Moscow Kremlin was chosen by the Tsar in A convent and church on the site had to be relocated, so the cornerstone of the new church was not laid until The cathedral took many decades to build; the scaffolding was not taken down until Vereshchagin continued to embellish the interior for another twenty years. The giant dome of the cathedral was gilded using the new technique of gold electroplating , replacing the older and insecure technique of mercury gilding. The inner sanctum of the church naos was ringed by a two-floor gallery, its walls inlaid with rare sorts of marble, granite, and other stones. The ground floor of the gallery was a memorial dedicated to the Russian victory over Napoleon. The second floor of the gallery was occupied by church choirs. It was to have modernistic, buttressed tiers to support a gigantic statue of Lenin perched on top of a dome with his arm raised in the air. The government plans for economic development in Russia during the s required more funds than were available at the time. In searching for additional sources of revenue and funding, government agencies saw monetary value in religious and historical monuments that had not yet been destroyed or otherwise repurposed for government use. The letter noted that the dome of the church contained over 20 tons of gold of "excellent quality", and that the cathedral represented an "unnecessary luxury for the Soviet Union, and the withdrawal of the gold would make a great contribution to the industrialization of the country. It took more than a year to clear the debris from the site. The construction of the Palace of Soviets was ultimately halted due to a lack of funds, problems with flooding from the nearby Moskva River , and the outbreak of World War II. Some of the marble from the walls and marble benches from the cathedral were used in nearby Moscow Metro stations. The original marble high reliefs were preserved and are now on display at the Donskoy Monastery see the photo. For many decades, these reliefs were the only reminders of one of the largest Orthodox churches ever built. The rebuilt cathedral, view across the Moscow River. Night view next to the river. A temporary cornerstone was laid by the end of the year. A construction fund was initiated in and funds began to pour in from citizens in the autumn of , and about one million Muscovites donated money for the project. In this year the Moskva Pool was demolished and the cathedral reconstruction commenced. The central dome of the cathedral Below the new church is a large hall for church assemblies. The cathedral square is graced by several chapels, designed in the same style as the cathedral. A footbridge across the river from Bersenevskaya embankment was constructed between 21 June and 3 September photo. Significant events[edit] In the cathedral was the venue for the Canonization of the Romanovs when the last Tsar Nicholas II and his family were glorified as saints. The first Russian President Boris Yeltsin , who died of heart failure on 23 April , lay in state in the cathedral prior to his burial in Novodevichy Cemetery. Metropolitan Jonah later described the event, saying that even with a congregation of approximately 2,, the vast church was only half full. About 16 bishops attended the ordination of a new bishop that day. The members were arrested and jailed.
