Today is November 13th, What is it about the fall season that leads us to seek out quotes and sayings about autumn? Is it the change in the leaves? Is the drop in temperatures? Do we feel nostalgic for those days of our youth when we looked forward to Autumn events such as Halloween and Christmas with great excitement? Autumn is the time when we return to school, which for some children is exciting and for others an end to summer dreams and fun. Autumn is also a time of great hope because we bring in our harvests in the fall months. We look forward to pumpkins and apples and fresh breads. This is also the season when we celebrate our favorite sports. How can you not be excited about autumn? Its brilliant colors and dazzling displays of falling leaves have enchanted thousands of generations of people who looked out upon golden valleys of sleepy trees and waving amber grains. Autumn colors arrive in the fall months in the northern hemisphere. Not everyone experiences autumn in the same way, of course. Only the deciduous leafy trees change colors in the fall and leave the Earth blanketed in a rich veneer of newly fallen leaves. In more tropical climates the autumn months signal change in a different way. Autumn is very much a thing of the northern hemisphere, and we who were born and raised in climates cool enough to be blessed with deciduous falls miss the brilliant, magical displays when we cannot see them. We enrich our poetry with quotes about Autumn. Our literature and hearts are filled with the joy and wonder we feel each year when the fall season begins. Our tears and our laughter are forever engraved in these beautiful quotes and sayings about autumn. The first day of fall is a very special day of the year. May you take new joy in reading these words. Wings beating low over the blue water of Silver Lake, wings beating high in the blue air far above it. It is only the farmer who faithfully plants seeds in the Spring, who reaps a harvest in Autumn. Forbes Change is a measure of time and, in the autumn, time seems speeded up. What was is not and never again will be; what is is change. The winds will blow their own freshness into you, and the storms their energy, while cares will drop off like autumn leaves. My very soul is wedded to it, and if I were a bird I would fly about the earth seeking the successive autumns. Senile fudge and solemn: These dry leaves of his autumn. I trust in Nature for the stable laws Of beauty and utility. Spring shall plant And Autumn garner to the end of time. This is one of the peculiarly dangerous months to speculate in stocks in. We cannot at once enjoy the flowers of the Spring of life and the fruits of its Autumn. Yes, there is a rumor that a young pale beam of a crescent moon touched the edge of a vanishing autumn cloud, and there the smile was first born. Can all men, together, avenge One of the leaves that have fallen in autumn? But the wise man avenges by building his city in snow. Autumn is the mellower season, and what we lose in flowers we more than gain in fruits.

2: Ken Burns, MARK TWAIN, ILLUSTRATED BIOGRAPHY

Mark Twain is the pen name he selected to write these amazing books. The American author, who was very funny was born Samuel Langhorne Clemens. A lover of science and a U.S. patent holder for 3 inventions.

Mark Twain, An Illustrated Biography. The following review appeared 15 November on the Mark Twain Forum. David Thomson Commissions are donated to the Mark Twain Project Upon receiving my review copy of Mark Twain, An Illustrated Biography I was surprised that it was such a slim volume, only about three quarters of an inch thick. The original film ran over six hours. However, none of the other Ken Burns biographical documentaries had exceeded four hours and they decided this one should be edited down to the prescribed length. Ashbel Green is credited as the editor of the text which was apparently expanded considerably from the narrative of the film and suggests that the book was indeed based, at least in part, on the longer version of the film. Reports from those who have seen the film in its entirety noted the absence or neglect of events and personalities such as Joseph Twichell, Bret Harte, William Dean Howells, and others who seem to be given more attention in the book. Book designer Wendy Byrne worked with a wealth of marvelous images. They are truly worth the price of admission. Among the standouts are: The portrait of Clemens as a steamboat pilot with mutton chop whiskers is finally seen as a photograph rather than a graphic derivation p. The portrait of Clemens standing between two cohorts in Nevada depicts his mustache in an early stage of development and his wardrobe picturesquely careless p. The group portrait aboard the Quaker City shows a glimpse of Clemens hunkered down amidst the Innocents Abroad pilgrims p. Clemens is captured in a rare photo aboard ship as he sits with his daughter Clara who is heavily veiled in mourning with sleeping cats stretched out in her lap p. Four marvelous candid shots from show Clemens playing with his favorite cat Tammany and her kittens at Stormfield pp. Two color photos by Alvin Langdon Coburn are reproduced as mirror images of the originals, by accident or perhaps for the sake of page layout. Clemens in his Oxford robes p. Two additional bits of whimsy appearing in the index pages include a advertisement for Cream of Wheat featuring Tom, Huck and Aunt Polly and a Polish movie poster for David O. Through thirteen subsequent chapters Sammy Clemens evolves into Mark Twain and not surprisingly some of the chapters choose book titles to encompass their contents: Four essays by Mark Twain scholars are distributed throughout the chapters: Both delve into the issue of race and the enduring power of the novel. Chapter Seven titled "Truth" is about the writing and publication of Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, the importance of which Dayton Duncan emphasized in his recent interview with Jim Zwick: Clemens dressed in black, Holbrook in white. Clemens did not smoke on stage during his career, Holbrook puffs up clouds of cigar smoke during his performance. Holbrook points out that the public image of the rather lazy, drawling "Mark Twain" concealed an extremely energetic man who admitted that "I was born excited p. The one disappointment for Twain scholars may be the lack of reference notes indicating sources of texts and quotes used for many passages. Mark Twain, An Illustrated Biography is certainly the most handsomely produced pictorial treatment thus far given to Samuel Clemens and should not only please veteran aficionados as a feast for the eyes, but also bring a whole new flock of converts into the fold and intrigue them to dive into his writings as well as other specialized biographical studies which expand on topics that are introduced here.

Top 20 Travel Quotes 1. You see what a tiny place you occupy in the world. What I love about it is that it applies to everything- not just travel. It tells you to be bold in pursuing your passions and the things you are interested in. Whatever you are passionate about, pursue it relentlessly. Traveling for me puts things into perspective. It allows me to realize that there are far bigger things than my problems. So what if the wifi is slow or if my favorite ramen place is closed. Traveling allows you to see that the world is not always about you. It allows me to see how other people live and what they have to deal with on a daily basis. Traveling has humbled me and has broadened my perspective in so many ways. Traveling to places like Southeast Asia and other impoverished areas has given me a sense of gratefulness for the modern day comforts that I am able to enjoy. I would read page after page and obsess over faraway lands. However, there are just some things and experiences that are too beautiful to put down in words. To me, one of the most beautiful things about travel is the fact that every day is different. There are no routines, no set rules, or no expectations. You can do what you want, whenever you please. I have been traveling the world together with my partner for over two and a half years now and one of the things we love the most is the freedom that travel and this lifestyle gives us. But no matter, the road is life. During these times, I realize how much travel is a part of me. During my teenage years, I would read books and wonder what it would be like to go to all these exotic places. I never thought this was possible for me but alas, travel opened up so many doors and opportunities for me that often times, I have to pinch myself. For me, travel is living. It is seizing each day and making the most out of every situation. I hustled and I hustled hard. Unlike most first world countries, you can get a part-time job during your university years to help build up your savings. In the Philippines, as minimum wage is low, you virtually have to work multiple jobs in order to make enough to save which is exactly what I did. I was a teacher at that time and worked from 7am-3pm. Afterwards, I would do private tutorials and work for another hours. At one point, I was earning more from doing extra tutorial work than my job itself. My point behind this is while it seems that all I do now is travel, the quote work, travel, save, repeat is a favorite of mine. Although I no longer work a job, we still apply this theory as we save up for specific trips and holidays along the way. Teacher, to a principal, to backpacker, to travel blogger, and full-time digital nomad. As cliché as it sounds, you can be anything you want to be as long as you have the courage to pursue it. No yesterdays on the road. There is no end to the adventures we can have if only we seek them with our eyes open. If there is one thing I know, it is that life is short. We keep saying one day I will travel the world. One day, I will learn how to speak a new language. Life is short and time will creep up on you. So ultimately, if your goal in life is to be happy, then why not pursue the things that do make you happy? I know this is easier said than done as many of us have obligations and responsibilities but I am one of those people that believe that if you want something bad enough, there is a way to achieve it. Life is not about making money. Yes, money makes things a heck of a lot more comfortable but are you really willing to sacrifice years and years of your life doing something you hate? So either find a job that you love or find a passion that your job can fuel. As harsh as this comes across, really take the time to take a look at your life and what you want out of it. No one realizes how beautiful it is to travel until he comes home and rests his head on his old, familiar pillow. Step out of the box and open yourself up to other cultures, traditions, and religions. In Indonesia, we were invited by a local to his home for some dinner. The only food he and his family had was some rice and sambal heaps of homemade chili. Even if my mouth was burning, I finished my plate because who was I to refuse the kindness that someone who opened up his home to us? I must have finished a pitcher of water but I was still grateful for the chance to get to know him and his family. It forces you to trust strangers and to lose sight of all that familiar comforts of home and friends. You are constantly off balance. Nothing is yours except the essential things. Having been on the road for the last four years, he nailed it spot on. Nothing is set in stone. Friends come and go, transportation breaks down, technology fails us yet at the end of the day, no matter how shitty your day has been, learn how to appreciate the little things in life like sunsets, the sound of the ocean, or a gentle breeze reminding you that you are lucky to be alive. The one by Lawrence Block, on the other hand, speaks about the spontaneity of travel and how we should be open to these things. My partner and I have completely different travel styles. As you can imagine, this drives me nuts at times as I like knowing whether or not I have a place to sleep tonight. Interacting with locals, making new friends, or even getting lost. These are now things that I live for and love the most about traveling. Make the best of it. Climb that goddamn mountain. So throw off the bowlines. Sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails. Then take half the clothes and twice the money. Sleep on floors if you have to. Find out how other people live and eat and cook. Learn from them wherever you go. Real adventure is self-determined, self-motivated, often risky forces you to have firsthand encounters with the world. The world the way it is, not the way you imagine it. Your body will collide with the earth and you will bear witness. In this way you will be compelled to grapple with the limitless kindness and bottomless cruelty of humankind and perhaps realize that you yourself are capable of both. This will change you. Nothing will ever again be black-and-white. I travel not to go anywhere, but to go. The great affair is to move. One should always have something sensational to read on the train. Life is a journey, not a destination. We came, we saw, we loved. They decide to accomplish extraordinary things. Travel has changed my life and I am excited for it to change yours.
