1: Scooby-Doo! Mysteries Series by James Gelsey

Scooby-Doo! and the Masked Magician is a children's book by Scholastic, the fourteenth in the Scooby-Doo Mysteries series. The Mystery Inc. gang is visiting the Magic Palace - a place where magicians can make twelve-course dinners appear.

Fred Silverman , executive for daytime programming at CBS , was then looking for a show that would both revitalize his Saturday-morning line and please the watch groups. Also successful were the musical numbers The Archies performed during each program one of which, " Sugar, Sugar ", was the most successful Billboard number-one hit of Eager to build upon this success, Silverman contacted producers William Hanna and Joseph Barbera about creating another show based on a teenage rock group, this time featuring teens who solved mysteries between gigs. Silverman envisioned the show as a cross between the popular I Love a Mystery radio serials of the s and either the Archie characters or the popular early s television series The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis. Their treatment, based in part on The Archie Show, was titled Mysteries Five and featured five teenagers: When The Mysteries Five were not performing at gigs, they were out solving spooky mysteries involving ghosts, zombies , and other supernatural creatures. Ruby and Spears were unable to decide whether Too Much would be a large cowardly dog or a small feisty one. After learning the characteristics of a prize-winning Great Dane from her, Takamoto proceeded to break most of the rules and designed Too Much with overly bowed legs, a double chin , and a sloped back, among other abnormalities. The treatment retained the dog Too Much, while reducing the number of teenagers to four, removing the Mike character and retaining Geoff, Kelly, Linda, and W. CBS president Frank Stanton felt that the presentation artwork was too scary for young viewers and, thinking the show would be the same, decided to pass on it. The rock band element was dropped, and more attention was focused upon Shaggy and Too Much. Original television series run CBS years 1975 Every episode of the original Scooby-Doo format contains a penultimate scene in which the kids unmask the ghost-of-the-week to reveal a real person in a costume, as in this scene from "Nowhere to Hyde", an episode of Scooby-Doo, Where Are You! Scooby-Doo, Where Are You! Each of these episodes features Scooby and the four teenage members of Mystery, Inc. Encountering a ghost, monster, or other ostensibly supernatural creature terrorizing the local populace, they decide to investigate. The kids split up to look for clues and suspects while being chased at turns by the monster. Eventually, the kids come to realize the ghost and other paranormal activity is actually an elaborate hoax, and often with the help of a Rube Goldberg-like trap designed by Fred they capture the villain and unmask him. Revealed as a flesh and blood crook trying to cover up crimes by using the ghost story and costume, the criminal is arrested and taken to jail, often repeating something nearly identical to " Seven of the second-season episodes featured chase sequences set to bubblegum pop songs recorded by Austin Roberts , [18] who also re-recorded the theme song for this season. With Stefanianna Christopherson having married and retired from voice acting, Heather North assumed the role of Daphne, and would continue to voice the character until Of the similarities between the Scooby-Doo teens and the Dobie Gillis teens, the similarities between Shaggy and Maynard are the most noticeable; both characters share the same beatnik -style goatee , similar hairstyles, and demeanors. The role of each character was strongly defined in the series: Fred is the leader and the determined detective, Velma is the intelligent analyst, Daphne is danger-prone, Shaggy is a coward more motivated by hunger than any desire to solve mysteries, and Scooby is similar to Shaggy, save for a Bob Hope -inspired tendency towards temporary bravery. Scooby-Doo itself would be an influence on many other Saturday morning cartoons of the s. During that decade, Hanna-Barbera and its competitors produced several animated programs also featuring teenage detectives solving mysteries with a pet or mascot of some sort, including Josie and the Pussycats 1971 , The Funky Phantom 1972 , The Amazing Chan and the Chan Clan 1973 , Speed Buggy 1974 , Goober and the Ghost Chasers 1974 , Jabberjaw 1978 , Captain Caveman and the Teen Angels 1980 , among others. Pat Stevens took over her role as the voice of Velma. Scooby was seen as the team captain of the Laff-a-Lympics

"Scooby Doobies" team, which also featured Shaggy and Scooby-Dum among its members. After nine weeks, the separate Where are You! The special revolved around Shaggy and Scooby attempting to convince the network to move Scooby out of Saturday morning and into a prime-time series, and featured spoofs of then-current television series and films such as Happy Days, Superman: Lennie Weinrib voiced Scrappy in the 1980 episodes, with Don Messick assuming the role thereafter. At this time, Scooby-Doo started to walk and run anthropomorphically on two feet more often, rather than on four like a normal dog as he did previously. Fred, Daphne, and Velma were dropped from the series, and the new Scooby-Doo and Scrappy-Doo format now consisted of three seven-minute comedic adventures starring Scooby, Scrappy, and Shaggy instead of one half-hour mystery. Most of the supernatural villains in the seven-minute Scooby and Scrappy cartoons, who in previous Scooby series had been revealed to be human criminals in costume, were now real within the context of the series. Beginning in 1985, a half-hour of reruns from previous incarnations of Scooby-Doo were broadcast on ABC Saturday mornings in addition to first-run episodes. Heather North returned to the voice cast as Daphne, who in this incarnation solved mysteries with Shaggy, Scooby, and Scrappy while working undercover as a reporter for a teen magazine. This version of the show lasted for two seasons, with the second season airing under the title The New Scooby-Doo Mysteries. The 1985 season episodes featured semi-regular appearances from Fred and Velma, with Frank Welker and Marla Frumkin resuming their respective roles for these episodes. At the same time, the series returned to its original formula in that the group unmasked human villains in costume, as opposed to the supernatural monsters of the early to mids. Scooby-Doo, Scrappy-Doo and Shaggy starred in three of these movies: These Three Films Took Their Tone from the Early Scooby-Doo and Scrappy-Doo Entries, and featured the characters encountering actual monsters and ghosts rather than masqueraded people. Animation and Hanna-Barbera by then a subsidiary of Warner Bros. Frank Welker was the only original voice cast member to return for these productions. Don Messick had died in 1984 and Casey Kasem, a strict vegetarian, relinquished the role of Shaggy after having to provide the voice for a Burger King commercial. These first four direct-to-video films differed from the original series format by placing the characters in plots with a darker tone and pitting them against actual supernatural forces. Scooby-Doo on Zombie Island, featured the original gang, reunited after years of being apart, fighting voodoo-worshipping cat creatures in the Louisiana bayou. Scooby-Doo and the Cyber Chase was the final production made by the Hanna-Barbera studio, which was absorbed into parent company Warner Bros. Warner Animation would continue production of the direct-to-video series while also producing new Scooby-Doo series for television. The direct-to-video productions continued to be produced concurrently with at least one entry per year. Two of these entries, Scooby-Doo! Enter the Haunted Mansion and Scooby-Doo! Mystery Mayhem use the original designs and feature Matthew Lillard as the voice of Shaggy, the character Lillard portrayed in the live-action theatrical Scooby-Doo films. Haunted Hollywood and Scooby-Doo! Curse of the Speed Demon. In addition, a live-action TV movie, Scooby-Doo! A Second Live-Action TV Movie, Scooby-Doo! The Three Films Serve as Prequels Taking Place Before the Events of the Film. Theatrical films Main articles: Scooby-Doo film and Scooby-Doo 2: Pictures on June 14, Scooby-Doo, voiced by Neil Fanning, was created on-screen by computer-generated special effects. Monsters Unleashed, followed in March with the same cast and director. Pictures was developing a fully animated Scooby-Doo feature film with Atlas Entertainment. Charles Roven and Richard Suckle, who produced the first two live-action films, were producing the animated film, and Matt Lieberman was writing the film. Produced by Warner Bros. Animation, the show follows the format of the original series but places it in the 21st century, featuring a heavy promotion of modern technology computers, DVD, the Internet, cell phones and culture. Casey Kasem returned as Shaggy, on the condition that the character be depicted as a vegetarian like Kasem himself. The series was produced by Chuck Sheetz, who had worked on The Simpsons. In the new premise, Shaggy inherits money and a mansion from an uncle, an inventor who has gone into hiding from villains trying to steal his secret invention. The villains, led by "Dr. Phibes" based primarily upon Dr. Phibes, then use different schemes to try to get the invention from Shaggy and Scooby, who handle the plots alone. Fred, Daphne, and Velma are normally absent, but do make
