End of the School Year Projects source: I think the large photo piece is so beautiful and would make for an excellent end of year display. Create a Class Quilt â€” Here is a beautiful example of how you can create a class piece to bring the entire class together for an end of the school year project. This quilt was made with handprints in order to fit the alphabet, but you could easily input your own artwork or writing ideas with beautiful borders to tie it all together. This is a quick idea that parents are sure to love. End of the Year Election â€” Get students thinking positively about their classmates by describing them in an end of the year election. Let them think of the funniest, happiest students and to nominate them for the election. Tabulate the results for some end of the year fun. School is Cool â€” Get students reflecting on their year and have the year in a snapshot piece. This is a craft with a girl and boy template for students to write what they like best about the school year. The sunglasses really make this project a keeper! Have you already got your end of the year teacher shirt? Here are my current favorites. Hallway Countdown â€” If you celebrate any type of graduation for your grade level, start a countdown in the hallway. This idea was designed for kindergarten, but why not host your own mini-graduation ceremony in your classroom with red bulletin board paper as your red carpet to celebrate the end of a hard working year! When you add a poem and a picture of you and your student together you have a very personal, meaningful gift together. Bind or assemble to make it special and a gift for each student. Memory Books â€” There are tons of memory books and pieces available to create your own template. During the last weeks of school, making books that are like personal yearbooks is a great plan. Bulletin Board Displays â€” Bring on the end of year cuteness with a sailing inspired bulletin board display. Handprint Poem Kindergarten â€” This cute project will also work for an end of year parent gift or make a great page in a memory book. Students add their handprints into the empty space on the page or could mount this onto a larger piece of construction paper with handprints beside. Teacher Poem â€” Send your students off with a poem from the teacher to remind them that they are special. Pair this with a picture of you and your students, or a photo with you and each student one on one. Learning With Toys â€” Here is a great step by step set of toys to put together to give as student gifts with a tip on getting books at a fraction of the price. This tutorial gives you a printable for kindergarten that explains each toy and how it can have educational value for over the summer fun. End of Year Celebration Invitations â€” Are you planning a celebration at the end of the year and inviting parents? This printable set includes summer themes that are bright and fun! You can print on these in Powerpoint too making them print and go. Celebration Event â€” Here are some great tips on hosting and end of the school year celebration event. Includes photos of table displays, student gifts and how to make it a smooth event. Luau â€” Have an end of the school year luau. Host fun activities throughout the day that fit a Hawaiian theme and pass out small favors like leis to your students as a gift. Here are some stations that are designed for kindergarten as sample ideas. Take multiple photos throughout the day to put together as a gift for each student. Camp Read a Lot â€” This week long idea will transform your classroom during one of the last weeks of school. Find different lesson plan ideas to do each day with your students to keep it fresh and to keep them excited and engaged. Most of all, I love that this one celebrates reading. Such a clever idea using probably lots of camping gear you already have in your closet. Photo Slideshow â€” If you put together a slideshow for your students to show the last days of school, here is a list of music suggestions and titles that might be a great fit. Kindergarten Graduation Event â€” If you are planning on hosting a kindergarten graduation event, here is a cute craft to create. Use simple shapes to create graduation kids. Add a quick little poem or tag to make this a keepsake. End of Year Awards and Diplomas source: Diplomas â€” Most often if

First Grade Skills written by: School becomes more directed and the student feels more like a big kid. Get your first-grade child prepared to pass to second grade. Work sent home for review and extra practice are tasks worked into the routine of the year. The student receives information at a rapid pace. Each school district is a tiny bit unlike the other in what first grade skills they work on as well as the pre-entry and exit skills they expect them to have. First grade-level reading targets the retention of sight words. Homework and class work alike revolve heavily around common words that the student rehearses and recites regularly. Beyond remembering words, they learn to decode words and comprehend text. Text will be short and words small, but basic reading skills primer words will definitely be developed toward mastery. Writing and Spelling First graders start to work on capitalization and punctuation in the first portion of the school year. Spelling lists consist of short words that practice letter sound. Math Counting small units of money is a first-grade skill along with skip counting. This complex subject will build steadily over the next few years. The child learns to count to and above as she learns addition and subtraction. You can read about a first grade and Kindergarten activity using a tiny seed. Very basic concepts about the world of science, geography, civics, and social studies reach the first grader on field trips, through movies, and in class play. These topics are less likely to be interesting to this age group so it is made fun through the implementation of these strategies, but be assured that they are learning these subject areas, just on their processing level. Story mapping comes to the light in first grade. Reading flow leavens and decoding is a first-line backup tool for words unknown. Writing and Spelling Short sentences to comprise stories are all the rave for the little learner and they can draw to pictures to accompany them. Their sentences no longer run together, either, and they make more sense as they writer continues to compose stories. Journal writing is a task they feel comfortable with. Making corrections for misspelled words is a well-practiced skill for first graders by the end of the year. Spelling tests of short lists of sight words are the usual weekly assignment. Math Math concepts like telling time by the half hour, learning odd and even numbers, studying place value, and writing larger numbers are what young learners need to know before exiting first grade to move on for success in the second grade. Math facts like facts of five and ten will fill their free time after school. First graders have worked on many basic word problems on addition and subtraction and they know some math rules to help them in the first weeks of second grade. Momentum builds for social studies and science topics to include physical science in the area of measurements of liquids and solids and chapters devoted to single countries to discuss their contributions to society. The majority of the first grade skills posted are basic enough that the student with average development can grasp them within an entire school year. If this does not happen, do not worry; they have time to catch up as these skills are worked on repeatedly and built upon until third grade, when advanced concepts are introduced. Engrain what you want them to know when you support what takes place in the classroom with real-world lessons.
