The Parmenter family dog falls into a dry, abandoned well, and, as Hannah and her brother become involved in the rescue and then in their further exploration of the well and its adjoining tunnel, they learn more about their island home and discover some Ice Age fossils that have been buried beneath it.

Recipes, restaurants, and more. July 11, Read the latest local news from Manorville to localNews According to a source close to Zeldin, the three arrived for the scheduled meeting on March 8, but a fourth man entered the room. He refused to provide identification. The man abruptly left the room when asked for identification and escaped without being detained by authorities. Martin Astrof is accused of making threats and trying to run over a volunteer. Man Arrested At Zeldin Headquarters By Rick Murphy With the nation as divided politically as it is today, the chance that a political leader can face a serious threat constantly lurks in the shadows. On Friday, for Congressman Lee Zeldin that threat became all too real. Police did not release the details of the threats made. Zeldin reluctantly agreed to cancel his appearance there. Astrof was arrested in front of his home a short time after he went to the Terry Road office on Friday and charged with making a terroristic threat, which is a felony, and second-degree reckless endangerment, police said. On July 7, Astrof appeared briefly on his way to court, wearing shorts and a horizontal striped t-shirt. It is unacceptable to resort to actions to kill or seriously harm political opponents or otherwise incite those violent actions by others. His column may have made some enemies over the years, but it meant people were reading the paper. And they continued to read, and the paper continued to grow. And his personal generosity to all of us at the paper will be remembered with gratitude and appreciation. Herzfeld rummaged through the personal items in her carry-on bag and removed the apple-shaped Tony Award that reads: We were doing a run-through from the beginning of the show. We started the music, which was very loud. Everyone was in their place. I had just sent five students over to the theater to hang some color gels and lights. And then we started the rehearsal. It just seemed really odd. I wanna finish this scene. So, they continued the scene because I knew we were okay. There was nothing burning in our room. Then one of the kids insisted that we had to go. And then I see my kids duck. And start running back toward the classroom. Still thinking this is a drill and I just have to do my job now. The boys were carrying flowers, chocolates, and teddy bears for their girls. All day, your classes were being interrupted by kids handing out carnationgrams or candy-grams delivered to sweethearts. I even got a candy gram from the Multi Cultural Club. Moore said that the property was overgrown and surrounded by stockade fencing when she first came into office. So, she contacted Bernstein, to ask if something could be done to fix it up. Moore said that she believes people will certainly take notice of the new development, after having the park there for three years. Several people expressed interest in the restaurant portion of the property, however, nothing has been finalized yet, he said. The road to a healthy heartbeat just got shorter. The jetties were built by the Army Corps of Engineers in the s to protect the entrance to Montauk Harbor. The damages were limited to losses that have occurred for the home owners since October 27, The jetties interfere with the littoral drift of sand, scouring the beaches in front of the homes. We will make efforts to set the jury verdict aside because we believe it is contrary to the law. Originally, the suit charged numerous parties, such as the federal government, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, and the Army Corps of Engineers. Over time, however, the court dismissed the suit against the other defendants, ultimately leaving the town to stand in court alone. Support for the push comes from some residents who believe the scenic stretch would not only be more aesthetically pleasing to the eye, but that the move would also be beneficial. It would ensure that residents who receive electricity from the lines would not lose power during a storm, which is a regular occurrence in bad weather. Under state law, Southampton Town cannot enforce the tax on village residents, some of whom live in the Town of East Hampton. That would have to be undertaken by village government. Legislation has already been passed at the state level that would allow the creation of a special taxing district, however, a public hearing and vote would be required to create it, Schiavoni said. He does not expect to schedule a public hearing before developing more of a consensus on the project. Schiavoni said that as the project has been discussed with community members, some in Noyac have expressed concerns about increased taxes and who the project will benefit most. Sander said Sag Harbor officials have been reluctant to support the project because only half of the village is located in the township. But overall, he has found residents in the area 80 to 90 percent supportive of the proposal. Sag Harbor Mayor Sandra Schroeder did not respond to a request for comment by deadline. In the meantime, Schiavoni said an ongoing restoration by Suffolk County of natural habitat along the beach where osprey nests are located will not be finished until upgraded power lines are installed. It is likely the upgrade will not be completed by utility company Public Service Enterprise Group of Long Island until the end of summer, when the ospreys are finished nesting. Civic president Elena Loreto said her membership would like more information about the project from Schiavoni. Given current zoning restrictions, a project of this magnitude will probably never be seen again. More to the point, a brand-new Southampton Hospital, reborn with the name Stony Brook Southampton after a merger, is long overdue and much needed. Southampton Hospital long ago outgrew its confined space, and while Southampton College enjoyed some glory years, it too was losing steam and stature as the millenium came and went. When Long Island University officials announced in that Southampton College was closing, the surprise decision caught locals off guard. Hundreds of jobs would be lost, and the largest parcel of land in the area faced an uncertain future. Even after Stony Brook University was convinced – strong-armed – into taking over the campus, nothing came easy. Shirley Strum Kenny, president of Stony Brook University, retired in and the college eliminated its sustainability program. Attendance, never robust, slowed to a trickle. Stony Brook wanted to pull out altogether, citing budget restraints. Close It Down Dr. Thiele, an attorney by trade, helped prepare a lawsuit on behalf of the soon-to-be-displaced students. The lawsuit, filed in State Supreme Court, charged the university broke state law by failing to hold a public hearing before announcing plans to shutter the dorms and most other buildings on campus. Katie Osiecki, Continued On Page July 11, It will also forever change the makeup of Southampton Village, where the current facility is located. He also revealed an alternate plan to reroute traffic. Former NYC Mayor Mike Bloomberg spoke to Schneiderman on behalf of the golf club and offered the town a package of incentives to reroute some of the Tuckahoe Road traffic away from the course. Last month the state gave its OK to lease 23 acres on the campus. See accompanying article in this section. The new structure will likely be located just south of County Road 39 and west of Tuckahoe Road, where the recreational fields are currently situated. July 11, The area where the gym is now will likely be used for out buildings and parking. Schneiderman said his preference would be to run traffic underneath Tuckahoe Road and the tracks at the CR 39 intersection. Compounding things further, ambulances would be coming and going, and time would be at a premium. During the recent U. Open golf tournament, several measures were taken to improve traffic flow, including changing traffic lights or shutting them off, re-routing traffic, building a pedestrian bridge, and making use of shuttle buses and trains.

Annie Wilkes is his nurse -- and captor. Now, she wants Paul to write his greatest work -- just for her. She has a lot of ways to spur him on. One is a needle. Another is an ax. Twenty-two-year-old Skeeter has just returned home after graduating from Ole Miss. She may have a degree, but it is , Mississippi, and her mother will not be happy till Skeeter has a ring on her finger. Skeeter would normally find solace with her beloved maid Constantine, the woman who raised her, but Constantine has disappeared and no one will tell Skeeter where she has gone. Aibileen is a black maid, a wise, regal woman raising her seventeenth white child. Something has shifted inside her after the loss of her own son, who died while his bosses looked the other way. She is devoted to the little girl she looks after, though she knows both their hearts may be broken. Minny finally finds a position working for someone too new to town to know her reputation. But her new boss has secrets of her own. Seemingly as different from one another as can be, these women will nonetheless come together for a clandestine project that will put them all at risk. Because they are suffocating within the lines that define their town and their times. And sometimes lines are made to be crossed. In pitch-perfect voices, Kathryn Stockett creates three extraordinary women whose determination to start a movement of their own forever changes a town, and the way women -- mothers, daughters, caregivers, friends -- view one another. There they are taken in by an eccentric trio of black beekeeping sisters who introduce Lily to a mesmerizing world of bees, honey, and the Black Madonna who presides over their household. This is a remarkable story about divine female power and the transforming power of love -- a story that women will share and pass on to their daughters for years to come. Relief for him and his disenfranchised peers comes in the form of secret after-hours boxing matches held in the basements of bars. Fight Club is the brainchild of Tyler Durden, who thinks he has found a way for himself and his friends to live beyond their confining and stultifying lives. Louis recounts how he became a vampire at the hands of the radiant and sinister Lestat and how he became indoctrinated, unwillingly, into the vampire way of life. His story ebbs and flows His story ebbs and flows through the streets of New Orleans, defining crucial moments such as his discovery of the exquisite lost young child Claudia, wanting not to hurt but to comfort her with the last breaths of humanity he has inside. Yet, he makes Claudia a vampire, trapping her womanly passion, will, and intelligence inside the body of a small child. Louis and Claudia form a seemingly unbreakable alliance and even "settle down" for a while in the opulent French Quarter. Louis and Claudia are desperate to find somewhere they belong, to find others who understand, and someone who knows what and why they are. Louis and Claudia travel Europe, eventually coming to Paris and the ragingly successful Theatre des Vampires -- a theatre of vampires pretending to be mortals pretending to be vampires. Here they meet the magnetic and ethereal Armand, who brings them into a whole society of vampires. But Louis and Claudia find that finding others like themselves provides no easy answers and in fact presents dangers they scarcely imagined. Creatures extinct for eons now roam Jurassic Park with their awesome presence and profound mystery, and all the world can visit them -- for a price. Until something goes wrong Prison guard Paul Edgecombe has seen his share of oddities in his years working the Mile. In this place of ultimate retribution, Edgecombe is about to discover the terrible, wondrous truth about Coffey, a truth that will challenge his most cherished beliefs As Seattle is ravaged by a string of mysterious killings and a malicious vampire continues her quest for revenge, Bella once again As Seattle is ravaged by a string of mysterious killings and a malicious vampire continues her quest for revenge, Bella once again finds herself surrounded by danger. In the midst of it all, she is forced to choose between her love for Edward and her friendship with Jacob knowing that her decision has the potential to ignite the ageless struggle between vampire and werewolf. Christa Lasher Reynolds has the prestigious position of being the first case in the U. Reynolds was the first Free Exercise case heard by the Supreme Court who would not agree to hear an Establishment case until with Everson v. Board of Education. That is not to say that lower courts did not hear and adjudicate other Establishment or Free Exercise cases. In fact, they did. The Supreme Court simply did not choose to hear any until about 60 years after Reynolds. Up until Reynolds v. United States, Reynolds was the only precedent involving religion decided by the Supreme Court. The decision in that case still has effect today. A brief survey of the highlights will do. Joseph Smith, while living in upstate New York, claimed to have been guided by an angel to golden plates which he translated into the Book of Mormon in 1830. He quickly attracted a good number of disciples who followed him through Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois. During the intervening years, Mormons met with discrimination and violence wherever they went. In 1844, Smith was murdered by a mob that attacked the jail where he was being held awaiting trial. Following his Mormon Temple death, faithful Mormons migrated to what would become the Utah Territory in 1847 with Brigham Young at the lead. George Reynolds was a perfect candidate for this test case, for he was both a dedicated Mormon and yet of only modest standing within the Church. In 1878, the Court heard the case, and in 1879, it handed down its decision. Chief Justice Waite wrote the decision of the Court, with no dissenting and only one concurring opinion. He identified six questions before the Court, the first four of which were technical issues such as improperly excusing jurors or improperly admitting evidence. The fifth question interests us here: On this question about the exercise of religion Chief Justice Waite spent proportionally more time than any other question. Congress was deprived of all legislative power over mere opinion, but was left free to reach actions which were in violation of social duties or subversive of good order. Reynolds may believe whatever he wishes about the importance of polygamy, but that did not mean he could necessarily act upon that belief. The Court had then to tackle the issue of polygamy itself. Marriage, according to this reading, is the base of the entire society. From the marriage comes every other social relationship and institution, all the way up to the government. Still, was the government not required to give Reynolds "an exemption because of religious belief? Suppose, the government asked, someone believed human sacrifice was a religious necessity? Or the practice of sati? The Free Exercise Clause, according to Reynolds, does not allow religion to exempt a citizen from criminal law. Reynolds was, and in certain cases, still is good law, according to the Supreme Court. Until in Cantwell v. Connecticut, Reynolds was the only decision on Free Exercise, and the rule of law was this: Belief is protected absolutely by the First Amendment. The government could not dictate to people their beliefs, nor make belief a prerequisite for benefits given to citizens, nor outlaw or punish citizens for their beliefs. However, practice is not so absolutely protected. Reynolds was the first case "but case law is not static. Connecticut, the next opinion I intend to examine for Religion Nerd, will expand upon Reynolds and apply the First Amendment to the States.
