The Damon Knight Memorial Grand Master Award is a lifetime honor presented annually by the Science Fiction and Fantasy Writers of America (SFWA) to no more than one living writer of fantasy or science fiction.

She joins a long, distinguished list of recipients going back to the first honoree, Robert Heinlein, in Reviewing that list got me wondering a few things. Who will be named a Grand Master in ? They represent three very different strains of sf, all valid contributions to the genre dialogue. This is a much fuzzier category. William Gibson has publicly moved away from sf, and though you can do that, you can only be named an SFWA Grand Master if you publicly come back. See Silverberg and Ellison. Orson Scott Card meets the longevity and multiple awards criteria, but his recent political expressions might be held against him by some SFWA members. If there were a Posthumous Grand Master award, who should win it? To clarify, only living writers can be named Grand Masters. So for a posthumous equivalent, Roger Zelazny and Octavia Butler are the two names to consider. Tiptree and Cordwainer Smith both had short careers. Kornbluth and Kuttner also had short careers and died so long ago that their work is fading from memory. Plus, where does Kuttner end and C. Frank Herbert comes close, but other than Dune and its sequels, his work is also fading from memory. Seriously, name three non-Dune Herbert novels without resorting to a search engine. Not to rag on him, but van Vogt. Bits of his work stick in my mind: Better to have named him an Author Emeritus and let Damon Knight win the judgment of history. Posted on March 9, , in Blog.
