One. HIS FINGERTIPS SLID ALONG my back, applying hardly any pressure, yet sending shock waves over my flesh. Slowly, slowly, his hands moved across my skin, down the sides of my stomach to finally rest in the curves of my hips.

I looked over real quick to see what he was referring to. My eyes immediately went back to the road. My hands gripped the steering wheel. The exit for the place was coming up soon. Not after what you guys did to me that last time. How can something so creepy that is constantly smiling considered to be friendly and lovable? If you ask me, those painted on smiles were hiding the fact that they were really psychopaths out to murder little children and grown men. It was smiling at me like it wanted to eat my soul. That shit scared me so bad I fell right out of the fucking car. Nick and Aaron were on my case about it for the next couple weeks. The exit was steadily approaching. It was now or never on my part to decide. Feeling their burning gazes on me, I gave in and turned off on the exit to head to the little shop. This place seemed to be more horrific than full of wonders. Shrunken heads were hanging from the ceiling, random anatomy parts were stored in jars, and skulls were scattered along the few shelves in the tiny store. Although I did see some herbs and spices, but for the most part it was full of stuff I would never think of even wanting to buy. Her silver hair was pulled back into a low ponytail and she was bent over her cane. Her spine was probably curved like that from scoliosis or arthritis. Maybe a bit of both. Would you like to have your future read to you? What could it hurt? She motioned for me to follow her to the back of the store where she had a small table set up that was covered with a royal purple cloth. Two chairs sat on either side of the small round table. I glanced up at Nick and Aaron as I sat down. They had their cameras up and already filming what was going on. I nodded and looked back at the woman. I placed my larger hand in hers. She grabbed my hand in both of hers and began running her fingers along my palm. Her touch was so light, it began to tickle, but I kept my composure lest the guys tape it and air it on television. My gaze slid over to Nick and Aaron. Aaron was behind me recording while Nick was getting up close and personal to what was going on. One that has damned your soul. Many of them are cunning and filled with a vengeance. Many are demons who have cursed your soul by the marks they put on your body. You do have a long life line though, which is good. We merely want to prove their existence since there are so many still in doubt even after the proof we show them. You must be mistaken. A woman who will be a light in your darkness. She will help you out of your eternal damnation. She will save you from the horrors you are bound to face. Find her quickly and do not let her out of your reach once you find her. Because if you do you will never be saved.

Shadow Kiss Vampire Academy 3 Author: Slowly, slowly, his hands moved across my skin, down the sides of my stomach to finally rest in the curves of my hips. Just below my ear, I felt his lips press against my neck, followed by another kiss just below it, then another, then another. His lips moved from my neck toward my cheek and then finally found my mouth. We kissed, wrapping ourselves closer together. My blood burned within me, and I felt more alive in that moment than I ever had. I loved him, loved Christian so much that - Christian? Some coherent part of me immediately realized what was happening - and boy, was it pissed off. The rest of me, however, was still actually living in this encounter, experiencing it as though I was the one being touched and kissed. No, I told myself sternly. Get out of there. But how could I listen to logic when every nerve of my body was being set on fire? There was nothing in the world right now except his lips. The kisses were the same, exactly as I remembered with him. I sat upright in my bed, suddenly feeling smothered. I tried kicking off the covers but mostly ended up entangling my legs even more. My heart beat hard in my chest, and I tried to take deep breaths to steady myself and return to my own reality. Times sure had changed. Now her sex life did. To say the two were a little different would be an understatement. This time, Lissa and Christian had unintentionally outsmarted me. In sleep, my defenses were down, allowing strong emotions to pass through the psychic link that connected me to my best friend. My voice was muffled in a yawn. Worse than being woken up, though, was the way I still felt. Sure, none of that making out had actually happened to me. Yet my body seemed to feel the loss of it nonetheless. I ached and felt warm all over. It was idiotic, but suddenly, desperately, I wanted someone to touch me - even just to hold me. But definitely not Christian. I stood up on shaky legs, feeling restless and needing to walk off my weird mood, I put on a robe and slippers and left my room for the bathroom down the hall. I splashed cool water on my face and stared in the mirror. The reflection looking back at me had tangled hair and bloodshot eyes. I left the bathroom and turned toward the stairwell, my feet light on the steps as I went downstairs. The first floor of my dorm was still and quiet. It was almost noon - the middle of the night for vampires, since they ran on a nocturnal schedule. Lurking near the edge of a doorway, I scanned the lobby. It was empty, save for the yawning Moroi man sitting at the front desk. He leafed halfheartedly through a magazine, held to consciousness only by the finest of threads. Turning in his revolving chair, he tossed the magazine on a table behind him and reached for what must have been something else to read. While his back was turned, I darted past him toward the set of double doors that opened outside. Once outside, I eased the door shut as gently as possible. At most, the guy would feel a draft. Feeling like a ninja, I stepped out into the light of day. Cold wind blasted me in the face, but it was exactly what I needed. Leafless tree branches swayed in that wind, clawing at the sides of the stone dorm like fingernails. The sun peeped at me from between lead-colored clouds, further reminding me that I should be in bed and asleep. Yeah, it was a typically miserable winter day in Montana, but that was the point. The crisp air did a lot to wake me up and chase off the remnants of the virtual love scene. Plus, it kept me firmly in my own head. Standing there, staring off at a cluster of trees without really seeing them, I was surprised to feel a spark of anger at Lissa and Christian. It must be nice, I thought bitterly, to do whatever the hell you wanted. Lissa had often commented that she wished she could feel my mind and experiences the way I could feel hers. The truth was, she had no idea how lucky she was. It just ate you up inside until you wanted to scream or kick something. She could carry on with her own romantic affairs, with no regard for what she was doing to me. I noticed then that I was breathing heavily again, this time with rage.
