I appreciate your enthusiasm and hopefulness. Michelle 29 Sep Reply Great read. I am a single mom of one, dating a single full time dad of two. The past few months has been an overwhelming whirlwind of baseball double headers, gymnastics lessons, curriculum nights, cooking for three children with three different eating habits, wrestling in the living room, birthday parties every other week, etc etc I really have gotten to make love to him twice in the past two months. Ive spent the past few weeks so mad, hopeless, and a little bitter, wondering if this is what i really wanted. After reading this, it puts it all into a new perspective. All this time I wanted to meet a man who would respect my situation, love my little girl, and understand and my priorities and obligations to my daughter coming first in my life, â€” here I was cursing, and rolling my eyes at his lack of attention he gives me, the lack of time and cash he is able to spend taking me out, when he is doing exactly what I have been struggling through, just DOUBLED.!! This really hit home. How selfish was I being? Dating a single Dad is the biggest blessing for me. Someone who adores his children, and selflessly gets along with his ex wife without drama, puts all of his material wants and wishes aside so they can have what they need for school and sportsâ€ somewhere in between I have faith that we will eventually get some time for each other, and maybe have our fourth date and maybe some wild sweaty fun with no clothes? I followed on facebook, cant wait to continue reading more. Keep rockin the love. Time will take care of everything else. What are your thoughts about this? Easy to answer, for me. A single parent, in my book, is anyone who parents alone. Mary 9 Feb Reply Wow, I am really impressed with your insightfulness! You can include me in any of the further areas of topics for discussion. Sunflower 10 Jun Reply I am a single woman who does not have children dating a single dad and we get along wonderfully. I am interested in his life, he is interested in mine. We find connection in many different ways, including his kids. He is very open and kind hearted. Thankfully neither he nor I wrote each other off based on me not having children yet. We would have missed out! I have been a stay at homemaker who helped my husband stay organized with his insurance business. The last few years I have been a caretaker for my elderly parents. I am scared to be on my own. I married young and had no experience prior to my husband. I grew up in an east European immigrant household. My mother had emotional shortcomings such as not fully loving me based on her superstition of the day I was born etc. My father left us children for weeks at a time without food etc. My childhood was dark and sad. As a girl and teenager I dreamed of meeting Prince Charming. I now know that it seems so childish and premature in the idea of that happening; however it was what got me through most days. So I thank my ex husband for wanting me to stay at home with them as well. God did bless me with being attractive. Lol But the only guys that have approached or have shown interest in me are guys that just want to have sex or are interested in just having another attractive woman by their side. Also, I take great pride in only having slept with one man, but what are my chances of finding a man that has the same old-fashioned values as me??? I have a couple of questions.. Doing joint family activities and events is understandable, but do they have to keep chit-chatting and posting family pictures of each other on social networking sites in front of friends, family and myself? Would be interesting to know your thoughts. Yvonne Hada 21 Aug Reply I have started to date a single dad of teenagers! I have asked to take it slow, but he seemed to want to go exclusive fairly rapidly. I am a single mother of a 20 yr. I have more freedom with my time than he does with his two children, and his devotion to his daughter is sweet. I am in the stage where I have to go with the flow and see if he keeps pursuing me as their are lulls in his texts and calls. The dates have gone well no sex just lots of affection and kissing as we are getting to know each other on my insistence. When I dated childless men, I did everything I could to rally my resources to care for my child while I went out on a date. It meant getting to go out for 4 hours and then going to get my little one. Somehow, my single dad seems to jump at the beckon call and spontaneous planning of his teens. All things are possible if one resourceful. Vim 22 Nov Reply I completely agree with John McElhenney, This is a great write-up, though some are imaginary per your statement in answers, you did pour the inner thoughts of a Single Parent Dad. I am a single parent with two kids, my thoughts are inline with you.

SINGLE KID SEEKS DAD pdf

I accept the fact about introducing the kids, this should be the very well placed in the order of events once a major decision to next step is done and only after that. Many a times, a Single parent dad is not a choice for even a Single parent mom, world worships a single parent mom, but i have never even seen a heart felt remembrance of such people anywhere, People who know us , recognise the value we put in to raise the kids, however there is no where the world recognises it. Without a father, the child would have not come in to this world, i do agree that women go through labor pain etc,. Thanks again for the great post! Ellie 31 Aug Reply Yes! You put it a lot better than me. But there are plenty of girl out there.. I would be happy enough with or without children, although I come from a huge family so I grew up with big gatherings and parties and would prefer that sort of life. But men my age or even 10 years older either want to sleep around or want a woman who can give them children. I would have no issue dating someone who already had children, although my concern would be that they both the father and the child would never consider me as a parental figure. I suppose it is dramatically different if the biological mother is not around and you can literally jump in and provide that role for them. That would be the perfect situation for me. I would have no problem loving that child as my own, much in the same way that I would if I adopted. However, I know in most cases the mother is very much around and I would never have much if any say over the parenting. That makes it a lot harder.
