It is a question worth asking yourself at least once a year. By doing a little research now, you may be able to find a comparable insurance plan at a better rate with another company, and save money. Here are four key steps to take when it comes to switching car insurance: Review your current driving situation. Take note of your driving circumstances as well as the needs of other drivers in your household. Do you have a newer model car? Do you commute several miles each week to work? Do you have recent traffic tickets? According to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners NAIC , your potential new insurance company may ask you all of these questions as part of the underwriting process. Take a look at your existing auto insurance policy. Knowing what you currently have will make it easier to create apples-to-apples comparisons with the rates you receive from different insurers. It may make more financial sense to stay where you are, or switch both policies to a new provider that will give you a rate reduction for both. In addition to speaking to your current agent or insurance company about your options, you can look online to research potential companies and obtain quotes. It is also a good idea to get referrals from family members, colleagues and other people whom you trust, Salvatore says. If they have had to file a claim with the insurer, they could tell you in person about their customer service experience. You might find important savings if you take a look at some Florida Car Insurance Quotes. Some automobile insurance quotes look into cases which are not necessary for your area. The bare minimum for auto insurance in Florida is sufficient coverage for property damage liability and personal injury. Be sure that the insurance companies that you are researching are reliable and reputable. Find out what the prevailing selling price is for automobile insurance by inquiring the insurance agent entertaining you. Bear in mind that you will need to consider other aspects aside from the price of one coverage. Provide the firm with accurate, private information Once you know which insurance companies you are interested in, you need to provide them with specific personal data. Insurance companies require several details from their clients in order to think of a customized insurance quote. The firm might ask for your driving history and information about your automobile. Details such as your marital status, gender, and age will also be considered. Be sure that the details you give is accurate and timely so the generated estimates will also be specific. Increase the deductible amount You may be able to reap savings if you increase your deductibles. Try increasing the insurance deductible amount so that you can see how it affects the insurance coverage quote you get.
