This game is great! This game can be described using one line from the game itself. Now, onto the review. It is awesome, but the graphics are a little basic. There are shoe screeches, commentators, grunts and slam dunk sounds. It all fits together oh so well. The music however, is repetitive. It needed more tunes. Each team has two players each. This is very fun. You can shove people, swat the ball out of their hands and defend your goal. However, if you grab the ball just before it goes in, you get in trouble for "goal tending" and the opposing team gets the points. Also, slam dunks and shots in the arc give you 2 points, while long shots outside the arc give you three. To beat all the teams in this game, you have to team up with a human player. One of you pushes and dunks, the other one does the 3 pointers and defends. So you need a small, tough guy for your attacker, and a tall, thin guy for your defence. It all works together, and making it just a little bit more realistic is like adding tomato sauce on your chips. Some of the designs are bizarre, such as troll heads, wolf men, aliens and animal heads. As you win more matches with your player, you earn more attribute points, which can be used to make your player better. Also, there is a trivia at the end of each match. It is a basketball themed multiple choice question relating to Basketball, such as "When was Michael Jordan Born? These extras are great. You got lots of players to choose from, and the replayability is great. I once played this game all night to the following morning with my cousin. I am not a fan of basketball games, but this one is extremely fun.

Petersburg, Florida where the St. Louis Cardinals , for whom his father broadcast, then conducted their spring training and raised in the St. Louis area, where he attended St. Louis Country Day School. He began his broadcasting career in while he was an undergraduate at Indiana University Bloomington. In the "93 season, he was the play-by-play voice for University of Missouri basketball broadcasts. As his network duties increased, however, his local workload shrank, and prior to the season it was announced that he would no longer be calling Cardinals telecasts for FSN Midwest. That year, he became the youngest man to do a national broadcast for all nine innings and games, as a network employee as opposed to simply being a representative of one of the participating teams for a World Series , surpassing Sean McDonough , who called the World Series for CBS at the age of The Red Sox were trailing 5"1 in the bottom of the eighth inning, with the bases loaded with David Ortiz at-bat. Through , Buck has called 20 World Series and 19 All-Star Games , the most of any play-by-play announcer on network television. After three years, he stopped doing NFL games to concentrate on his baseball duties full-time. He is currently teamed with Troy Aikman as color commentator and Erin Andrews as the sideline reporter. By , his Fox duties forced him to cut his local Cardinals schedule to 25 games. Eventually, Buck left the Cardinals altogether to join Fox Sports "full-time" in According to the Nielsen ratings system, viewership was down for the entire season. Louis Cardinals and the San Francisco Giants. In March , Buck told a St. Buck called about five minutes of the second period, including a goal from the Los Angeles Kings to make it After the Los Angeles Kings made it , Buck shortly thanked the other two guys in the booth and headed out. One of the more memorable spots for the latter had Buck goaded into using the catchphrase , "Slamma-lamma-ding-dong! Buck has also done local commercials in the St. Louis market for the Suntrup chain of automobile dealerships. The tapes were released at the height of the scandal involving Lewinsky and President Bill Clinton. After Vikings wide receiver Randy Moss simulated mooning the Green Bay crowd in the end zone, Buck called it a "disgusting act. In an interview with Richard Sandomir of the New York Times , he defended his reduced baseball commitment: He was gone a lot. He needed to be. So did my mom. Buck explained that he quit Twitter because he found himself engaging negative people and allowing criticism to affect how he was doing his job. Vocal cord ailment In , shortly after broadcasting Super Bowl XLV for Fox, Buck claimed to have developed a virus on the nerves of his left vocal fold.
