Finally my Sony Action Cam arrived. I purchased the WiFi version so I can monitor the pictures on my iPhone or iPad when setting it up or maybe when using it as an impromptu pole-cam on the end of a microphone boom pole. I have not had a chance to do take an in depth look at the images yet, the weather here is pants, grey and misty and anything I shoot at the moment looks soft. The huge but terrible Action Cam manual. Finally I found the bit that I needed however, the WiFi connection instructions. These comprehensive not instructions tell you to turn the WiFi on and connect to your device using the login details on a tiny sticker attached to the giant piece of paper. OK, so I have a login and password, but what software do I use? At first, assuming this was an app I did a search on the Apple store and found a Sony app called Play Memories and installed this on my phone. However this is some sort of media sharing app for your photos and has no way to connect to the camera. Next I followed the link to www. By now I was getting somewhat frustrated, this should be really simple! Click here to go to the apple store. Even after you have installed the app things are not entirely obvious. You need to run the app on the phone, then turn on the camera. Press the Prev or Next buttons to fire up the camera and go to the setup menu, press next till you get to setup and then press the record button to select. This turns on the WiFi. This is telling you to go to the phones WiFi settings and search for a network with the same name as the SSID on the tiny sticker on the instruction sheet I peeled my sticker off and stuck it on the side of the camera. Select the WiFi network and enter the supplied password. Go back to the Playmemory mobile app and you should now be able to see the live feed from the Action Cam. But come on Sony, you really need to do a better job of the manual.

This also makes it a bit easier to compare the few models that match your budget. But if you are looking for something a bit more basic, you will find few more choices including an intriguing pair of wearable cameras manufactured by Sony. Sony is no stranger to the digital camera and camcorder industry and is confident that their Sony Action Cam series can take on the current leaders in wearable cams. It weighs about 2 ounces and looks and feels like a quality gadget. Mounting the Sony HDR-AS15 is not an issue since the camera comes with two adhesive mounts that are rather simple to use. If you plan to use this camera for surfing or for tough weather conditions, you can use the waterproof housing that also comes with the HDR-AS. You can also keep the waterproof case on if you need to attach a tripod since the case has a standard tripod screw mount. All you have is a standard record button on the back and a pair of navigation buttons placed next to a small LCD screen. The Carl Zeiss Vario-Tessar lens already makes a pretty good impression on paper and it gives the camera a degree viewing angle. This sensor is present in the Sony HDR-AS15 as well and it helps the camera perform quite well in low light situations. The technology can lessen the shaky moments by means of 3-Way-Shake-Cancelling which adds a special electronic roll stability. Because the image stabilization works digitally rather than optically, image quality takes a slight hit but it is still impressive nevertheless and it even works at higher zoom levels. By doubling the frame rate, recorded videos are twice as slow but still look very smooth. You can even increase the frame rate even further to an impressive fps. Both slow motion modes are limited to p. By downloading the PlayMemories Mobile app to your iOS or Android smartphone or tablet, you can change the settings or wirelessly transfer any recorded content from the camera to the device. Keeping the device within 10 feet from the camera is recommended to ensure good wireless performance and stability. Video editing can be a necessity depending on the type of content you record since the HDR-AS15 is unable to flip the video degrees or rotate the lens. You can also upload videos to YouTube or Facebook through the software. Otherwise, wait for Sony to release an updated model and hope that Sony adds image rotation support. The HDR-AS15 is solid proof that Sony can apply some pressure to the other companies deeply invested in making wearable cameras.
