During World War II, the breed was almost lost but save for the efforts of enthusiasts in Italy who reconstructed and brought the breed back from the edge of extinction. A popular gun dog in Europe, the Spinone is a relative new comer to the United States. Attempts to establish the breed in the mid 20th century resulted in failure. Breed standard is set forth and recognized by the AKC and can be accessed by going to the following AKC web address link: AKC Breed Standard The Spinone is a dog of rugged, solid construction being powerfully built with well developed muscular proportions and rough wiry coat which is useful for brush busting as well as water work. The eyes are described as "human like" and give the Spinone a startlingly intelligent look. An intelligent breed, easy to train and eager to please. The face is framed in longer hair that forms arched eyebrow, moustache and beard giving a "gentlemanly" look. Spinone come in brown roan with brown patches, orange roan with orange patches, white with brown and solid white. Grooming is made easy by the occasional stripping of hair from the body. The Spinone is a happy and enthusiastic breed. Very easy going he is always eager to please his people. Spinone do require inclusion to the family and thrive on being with their people. A very low key breed not prone to barking unless a stranger shows up, nonetheless, exercise and room to run is essential to their health and well being. Spinone have a personality that is clownish and a vocalization that is unmatched in its uniqueness. A series of low, guttural growls, ooh-ohhs and other indescribable sounds mark this breeds ability to communicate. Friendly to all the Spinone especially loves children and will play for hours on end. Like any animal, the Spinone needs to be treated with respect and love. Abuse will be remembered by the Spinone. From a hunting perspective, the Spinone is a versatile hunter utilized in both upland and waterfowl hunting. Do not expect a Spinone to hunt in a fast flashy manner as some field breeds do. The Spinone is slower and methodical, working a field with great seriousness, detail and concentration. This can be misconstrued as a lack of ability due to the slower and sometimes seemingly non-chalant pace, but once hunted over, you will find the Spinone can rarely be matched for game finding ability and dedication to the hunt. Even though the Spinone sounds like a perfect breed, he is not for everyone. Things to take into consideration: Though relatively laid back and considered a couch potato at times, Spinone still require a large area to run and play. Hunting or field trialing is highly recommended to maintain the vigor and desire of the breed to hunt; he is bred to hunt and some type of field work is essential. Spinone are constantly looking for your attention. They require human interaction to maintain their health and vigor. S, finding a Spinone pup can be a challenge. Their innate curiosity can cause problems at times. Famous for their "Spinone Slime". For more information on the Spinone please click on the Spinone Club of America link below which will take you to their overview: Answers to Your Questions. This deep-chested breed has a topline that slopes slightly up from below the withers to the muscular hindquarters. Everything about this breed indicates great strength as well as stamina. Suited for hunting in all climates and on all terrain. Its coat in fact protects it from the water and freezing temperatures of the swamp. It goes nonchalantly into cold, deep water, being an excellent swimmer and a model retriever. Although not common in the U. Whether he was the basis for bringing forth other gun breeds, or whether they simply sprang from common stock is not known. Like all Italian breeds it is ancient. In Renaissance Italy a pointer with wiry hair was already present and reached us with much difficulty, due to extraneous crossbreedings performed heedlessly. After the breed was reconstructed by a few great breeders. Its innate merits are its sense of smell, setting, retrieving, recovering, and the close ties it has with the hunter. The breed has excelled as a pointer and retriever for centuries. Today he is still a popular hunting dog in other countries, as well as pet. The United States seem to be at last discovering this versatile dog. It has a great capacity for learning and the desire to satisfy its master most completely. Very sociable, courageous, loyal and an excellent companion. Today the breed is popular not only in Italy but is also raised in England and Scandinavia. The Spinone has a marked tendency to trot broadly and swiftly.

Few Spinone Italiano have achieved both Master Hunter and Grand Champion titles, fewer yet also awarded Best in Speciality followed by Best of Opposite in Speciality. Bruno, Lucy's son, is a prime example of the word "Robust" for the Spinone Italiano breed type.

Testimonials 8 Submitted by: She kept us posted throughout the entire process with lots of update and photos and answered the many questions I had. She did a fantastic job with the litter. Ripley has been awesome. His hunting instincts are very apparent, and I am excited to hunt over him this fall. I highly recommend Camkota Spinoni! Mary did the most amazing job in the first 8 weeks of the puppies lives. Zeppe was raised in her home which much love and attention and it shows. Zeppe knew "sit" and could stand in a stack that she used for the many pictures sent before we met our boy in person. Zeppe is beautiful and we are now beginning to show him. I can count on Mary for any silly question I have to prepare Zeppe and myself. She follows her puppies progress and is always willing to give guidance. I would recommend Camkota without reservation. Thanks, Mary for our wonderful boy! Mary was very helpful and answered many of our questions as we embarked on this journey of choosing the perfect dog for us. My sense was that Mary put a lot of thought into making sure the owner was right for the pup, and vice versa. We have gotten so many compliments on both his looks, and his temperament. Within a couple weeks he was sitting, shaking, and kenneling up. Very playful dog, but very calm also considering he is still a "small" puppy. He loves everyone he meets! We wanted a dog that would be an active member of our family. We are involved in conformation, hunting, obedience competition, and pet therapy work with our other two Spinone and wanted our new family member to do the same activities. He has fit in perfectly. We are very pleased with him! Mary and Stu have been very supportive and they regularly check in to see how Aldo is doing. We would definitely get another puppy from Camkota Spinone. Thank you Mary and Stu!! She has grown up with an adult German Shepherd Charlie , and they are absolute brother and sister. Cami is sweet, smart, friendly, loving, and probably most important; she listens. She learned commands at such an early age, more early than any dog I have ever had. I was so impressed with the early start their puppies get. The puppies being raised in the home also meant a lot to me. My puppy, "Dude", Spinone Italiano is loving as well as beautiful. He is 14 Months old now, very smart and doing well in his Obedience classes. Mary keeps in contact with me regarding my progress with "Dude" and I love that! If I have any questions, she is willing to answer them. I would highly recommend Camkota Spinoni to anyone who wants a high quality Spinone to hunt, show, or just hang out with.. I could tell immediately that Mary was a very conscientious breeder and her utmost concern was to find the best possible homes for her pups. We shared numerous phone calls and emails to ensure we were on the same page in terms of what both of our expectations were in bringing a new pup into the family. She provided a wonderful "puppy information package" which was personalized with photos of each pup and filled with valuable information for everything from grooming tips to feeding and training. I have maintained contact with Mary and she has been an incredible resource in providing support and information for any questions or concerns I have. I would highly recommend Mary and Stu as breeders and credit them with giving Valentino the best possible upbringing a puppy could ever hope for! Valentino is a joy to live with and has grown into a healthy, intelligent, loved member of the family: Barbara Weinlein on May 23, My personal experience with Camkota was wonderful. I would definitely purchase another Spinoni from Camkota. Mary was great to deal with. She even had a goodie bag for me.

Collina d'Oro means 'hill of gold'. We're starting a new adventure relocating in to Southern Oregon and look forward to exploring areas. We breed about once a year, giving us a new Spinone puppy to develop into a sturdy, confident hunting dog and family companion.

Breeders and judges have the responsibility to avoid any conditions or exaggerations that are detrimental to the health, welfare, essence and soundness of this breed, and must take the responsibility to see that these are not perpetuated. History The Spinone Italiano is a rough-haired dog of Italian origin, and is thought to be a very old and established hunting breed. In the Middle Ages, and in the 15th century, this type of dog was often represented by famous artists. The breed is also referred to as the Italian Coarsehaired Pointer. General Appearance The Spinone is a dog of solid construction, and is robust and vigorous. It has powerful bone, well-developed muscles, and rough hair. Its build tends to fit into a square. Characteristics The Spinone is naturally sociable, docile and patient. The breed is an experienced hunter in all terrains, is very resistant to tiredness, goes easily into brambles, and readily enters cold water. By nature, the breed is an excellent retriever and competent swimmer. It is built for an extended, fast trot. Height is measured at the withers. Any departure from the ideal is to be faulted according to the degree of deviation. The width of the head, measured at the level of the zygomatic arch, is less than half the length of the head. The zygomatic arch is the bony ridge forming the lower border of the eye socket. The planes of the skull and the muzzle diverge, making the breed downfaced. Parallel planes of the skull and muzzle. The occiput is very well developed. The parietal crest is well marked. The bulge of the forehead is not very developed, not towards the front nor in height. The brows superciliary regions are not too prominent. The stop is barely marked. The medial-frontal furrow is very pronounced. Its depth, measured at mid length, is one-third of its length. The bridge of the muzzle is preferably Roman, but straight is acceptable. Seen from the front the muzzle is square shaped. The lower profile of the muzzle is defined by that of the upper lips which are fine in texture. The cheeks are lean. EYES The large, well-opened eyes are set well apart. Both eyes are on the same frontal plane. The eye is almost round, and neither protrudes nor is set deep. Eye color is ochre, more or less dark according to the color of the coat. Expression is soft and sweet. NOSE The nose is in the same line as the nasal bridge. It is voluminous, and spongy in appearance, with a very thick and quite rounded upper edge. The nose protrudes over the forward vertical line of the lip. The nostrils are large and protruding. In white dogs, the pigment is flesh-colored. It is a bit darker in white and orange dogs. It is chestnut brown in brown roan to chestnut dogs. EARS The ears are practically triangular in shape. In length, they are not more than two inches longer than the line of the throat. In width, they go from the point of the inset of the head to the neck to the middle of the zygomatic arch. The ear is nearly always carried low, and has little erection power. The forward edge is close to the cheek. It is not folded, but turned inwards. The tip of the ear is slightly rounded. Ear cartilage is fine. The skin is covered with dense hair mixed with longer scattered hairs, which becomes thicker at the edges. Neck The powerful, muscled neck is clearly distinguished from the nape, and merges harmoniously into the shoulders. The length of the neck must not be less than two thirds inch of the length of the head. Its circumference reaches a third of the height of the dog. The lower edge of the neck has a lightly-developed double dewlap. Forequarters Shoulder blades are long and sloping, forming an angle with the upper arm of about degrees. Withers are not prominent, and tips of shoulder blades are not set close together, ideally they are about two inches apart. Length of leg from elbow to ground is one-half the height at the withers. The point of the elbow is a little forward of a line dropped from the top of the withers to the ground. Pasterns are long, flat and flexible. Body The body is almost square. The upper profile of the back is made up of two segments. The first, which is nearly straight, slopes from the withers to the eleventh dorsal vertebra. The second rises gradually to the strong and well arched loin. The chest, which descends to at least the level of the elbows, is broad, deep and well rounded. The slanting ribs are well sprung, with wide spaces between the ribs. The back ribs false ribs are long, oblique and well opened. The slightly convex loin has well-developed muscles. The croup is long, and the hipbones fall away from the spine at an angle of approximately 30 degrees, making a slightly rounded croup. The underline is straight to the back of the ribs, then slightly tucked up. Hindquarters When viewed from the rear, the hindquarters are parallel and perpendicular to the ground. When viewed from the side, the back edge of the buttocks is slightly convex. The hindquarters are well angulated. Hock joint is broad, and angulation at the joint is about degrees. Rear pasterns are perpendicular to the ground and their length is about one-third the height of the dog. A single dewclaw on each of the hind legs is acceptable. Feet The forefeet are round and compact. The hind feet may be slightly more oval than the forefeet. The arched toes are well-closed. The feet are covered with short, thick hair, including the spaces between the toes. The pads are lean and hard, and are pigmented more or less according to the coat color. The strong nails curve toward the ground. They are well pigmented, but never black. Tail The tail is thick, especially at the base. It is carried horizontally or down. There are no fringes. The tail is generally docked to a length of from six to ten inches. Tail carried above the level of the back. The hair is stiff, dense and rather flat, with a lack of undercoat. It is shorter on the muzzle, the head, the ears, the front side of the legs, and on the feet. On the back side of the legs, the hair is a rough brush, but never with fringes. Long, stiff hair garnishes the eyebrows and the lips, forming eyebrows, a moustache, and a tufted beard. The very thick skin fits close to the body. It is thinner on the head, throat, groin, under the arms, and on the back parts of the body. In the elbow folds, it is soft to the touch. There are two folds dewlaps from the sides of the lower jaw, gradually disappearing at the first half of the neck. When the head is carried low, there is a fold that descends from the outer corner of the eye over the cheek in its hind edge. This fold ends in a tuft of hair. Skin pigmentation varies according to the coat markings color. Color Acceptable colors include: Coat color must correspond with the color of the external mucous membranes.

Testimonials 21 You are viewing the 10 most recent - Click here for more reviews Submitted by: I was just inquiring about the available "orange girl" Spinone pup one day and then picking the precious pup up one week later from the airport. Sherry was simply amazing to work with, making this transition as easy as possible for all involved. The information she provided throughout the process was invaluable and it was obvious that she absolutely loves this amazing breed. And by the way, our sweet pup is incredible. Tessa is absolutely beautiful and she has personality plus! She is smart and totally "birdie". We are planning to use her to hunt and from what we see so far, we think she is a true natural. Right away I had a good feeling about them from their detailed website and numerous youtube videos showcasing smart, beautiful spins. From start to finish Sherry was fantastic and great to work with. We ended up waiting a year for our puppy, as we had our hearts set on a brown roan boy. Sherry sent loads of pictures and video updates through it all, as well as numerous phone conversations with updates on our puppy and even was willing and happy to continue phone conversations into ownership. After bringing our beautiful Spinone puppy Luca home, it is evident all the time and effort that Sherry and her team put into their dogs and breeding program. Just from handling him initially he is at ease with pressure on his paws, looking in his ears and mouth, etc. It is obvious he was raised in a very loving home at Winterborn. Not to mention Luca is basically already potty trained! From the moment we got him he was happy to sleep in his crate too, which is wonderful. What a great breed! So happy to have found the Spinone breed, and to have such a wonderful introduction to them through our amazing breeder and team at Winterborn. We are extremely happy with our choice of Winterborn Spinone and would choose them again in a heartbeat And plan to in the coming years for 2! Luca is very sweet, friendly, and SO smart. He is more than we ever dreamed of. Thank you for our amazing puppy. You can tell she loves what she does, adores this breed and each and every puppy. She was patient and kind with all of my questions and concerns. She handled the logistics of flying our puppy all the way across the country to us. We picked up the sweetest, most cuddly, loving puppy anyone could ever ask for. She was already well on her way to being housebroken and is already quite well socialized. I cannot recommend Sherry and Winterborn highly enough! I did extensive research on breeders and I do not regret my decision to go with her. She put a lot of work into matching us to our puppy and she was spot on. She is not your average breeder she puts all her efforts into these wonderful dogs and it shows. She is an extremely knowledgeable and caring breeder who is very focused on providing the best match between pup and owner. Our little Tino is a love and adapting well to his new home. Thank you Sherry for your hard work and dedication to the breed and your owners!! Jk on Apr 30, Superior caring passionate breeder. I am lucky that I contacted Sherry by simple chance. She is rare find. An absolute positive experience. Ya can tell I lock my pooch Boone spinone Italiano, 10 weeks old Submitted by: My research more than paid off in getting a puppy that is one of the smartest, sweetest, and beautiful puppies I have ever had or seen. Sherry and her family spend a lot of time with their puppies and ours came to us kennel trained, started with potty training, and does not bite or jump. She knew her name, comes to us when called, then sits looking up at us with those Spinone eyes. This all has made for the easiest transition for both our puppy and us. Sherry also provided us with regular updates, photos, and videos. She also takes time observing each puppy to help place puppies with traits that match with what we Are looking for. I was looking for a puppy that I could train as a therapy dog to work with me working with homeless Veterans. Our new girl had been socialized in a way that has already made this very easy. She is very sweet, friendly, polite, and has already demonstrating the exact behaviors I had hoped for. Thank you for this amazing, almost human puppy. Kay Comiskey on Apr 18, Sherry and her team do an amazing job with these puppies to get them ready to go home. Our little boy from the Gunslinger litter is so well mannered. He is calm, cuddly and adventurous. Sherry matches you with the perfect puppy after talking to you and figuring out what puppy makes sense for you. She also makes sure your puppy is ready to go out into the big world! What more could you ask?? This was a new experience for us Sherry is so knowledgeable, a true expert in this breed. Her attention and discipline to send picture and video updates regularly is something that was such a bonus and helped us in what seemed like an eternity while waiting for our new family member. I would also like to add her matchmaking skills are second to none. Our criteria for a puppy mostly focused on having a "buddy" for hiking, fishing, and running but we also wanted a dog with curiosity, a sense of humor and can travel. This little girl is all of this and more! We were so lucky to find Sherry. Our experience could not have been better. She listened to us and picked out the perfect puppy for us - twice. She is a very caring and understanding breeder with great knowledge of the Spinone breed. Our Orsino was a goofy and majestic boy with great hunting aspect. Our Gia is a beautiful playful little girl who loves to fetch and also has great hunting instincts. These dogs are fabulous, well adjusted, and a great companion.

Spinone Italiano Shirt - # - With our stylish Spinone Italiano shirt, the loyal and rugged dog known for his friendly intelligence finally gets his due. Made with premium weight fabric selected for strength and durability, you'll find this Spinone.

A versatile and popular hunting dog, they excel in pointing and retrieving. The Spinone Italiano is an excellent swimmer that is suited for hunting on all types of terrain and in all climates. In addition to their hunting skills this breed makes a lovely companion. Character Often referred to as the Spinoni, this breed is a large, strong, and substantial dog with a distinctive appearance. In their hunting duties they exhibit great stamina and endurance and are also methodical and efficient. They are not considered a racy or flashy breed. As companions they exhibit a loving, sweet, and affectionate nature. Temperament The Spinone Italiano is exceedingly intelligent, exuberant, and cheerful. They take their hunting duties very seriously, but are lively and entertaining in the home environment. They thrive on human companionship and do not do well if left alone for extended periods of time. They will suffer separation anxiety and will become bored and destructive. Spinone Italianos are excellent with considerate children and other household pets, although they do have a tendency to chase after anything that runs. The Spinone Italiano is generally quiet and is not suited for use as protection. They have a very patient nature and will return respect they are given. Care This breed requires weekly brushing as well as occasional professional stripping of the coat. Bathing should only be done when absolutely necessary to preserve the integrity of the coat. The Spinone Italiano is typically a healthy breed but may be prone to hip dysplasia, bloating, or an inherited disease called Cerebellar Ataxia which causes an abnormal gait. Coat The Spinone Italiano has a thick, wire-haired coat that is slightly wavy and water resistant. The hair is longer on the eyebrows, lips, and chin where it forms a moustache and beard. The coat comes in such colors as white, orange roan, white with orange, orange roan with orange patches, white with brown, brown roan, or brown roan with brown patches. This breed is an average shedder. They have a mind of their own and often want to make their own decisions regarding tasks assigned to them. Spinone Italianos must have proper socialization training to prevent timidity. They are very sensitive and do not respond to harsh or heavy-handed training methods. They require motivation, positive reinforcement, respect, patience, and consistency. When indoors they are low to moderately active; when outdoors their activity level is medium to high. The Spinone Italiano benefits from securely leashed walks and makes an excellent jogging companion. They greatly enjoy family play sessions, swimming, and hunting. This breed does best in a home with a yard that is securely and highly fenced.
