Short stories bring English to life and evoke powerful creativity that encourages ESL students to try new things and learn more. Implementing a few short stories into your classroom syllabus is a surefire way to keep students engaged and active with each turn of the page.

Fluffy never eats anything that costs less than 50 dollars. He has a really expansive taste. One day Fluffy gets lost. Poor Fluffy walks and walks. He wants his snack, his dinner, his bath and his soft bed. Suddenly he spots a big gray dog, with a big gray nose. The big gray dog chews something. Fluffy tries not to stare, but he is really hungry by now. "I am tired, and hungry, and dirty," Fluffy answers. "Come into my spa. I am all alone and I need my snack! The big gray dog looks at him and turns back. Bam gives Fluffy some food. At first Fluffy wants to refuse, but he is too hungry. She takes good care of me. I get snacks, food, a bath!" "Nice girl. I hope to find her. Fluffy falls asleep and dreams of snacks having baths. Continued in story 02 Golf Fluffy wakes up. He hopes he is in a bad dream, but now he sees this is real. Bam sits beside him. "Are you playing Golf?!" But I need to see it to believe it. A dog playing golf!" Fluffy jumps on his legs and starts running. "Where to, little doggie? Where is your golf field? I will find one! Fluffy is very happy. He finds a stick and a can and brings them to Bam. He digs some holes in the ground. Fluffy grabs the stick and just stands there, looking very very serious. Then, after 5 minutes, Fluffy hits the can with his stick. The can rolls and enters a far away hole. He stands long and tall, and waits for the applause. Bam is surprised, "You are actually good! What is your favorite sports? I am hose cucumber. Some people are couch potatoes. It means they sit on the couch and watch TV. I sit by the hose. How did you know? And that was the beginning of a beautiful friendship.

2: Short Stories | Easy Reading for ESL Beginners

This lesson includes a list of short stories that can be used with ESL learners regardless of their level. The accompanying activities will reinforce reading comprehension and writing skills.

Some short stories have an ESL listening component. ESL Reading Babe the Blue Ox Well now, one winter it was so cold that all the geese flew backward and all the fish moved south and even the snow turned blue. Late at night, it got so frigid that all spoken words froze solid afore they could be heard. People had to wait until sunup to find out what folks were talking about the night before It took five giant storks to deliver Paul to his parents. His first bed was a lumber wagon pulled by a team of horses. His father had to drive the wagon up to the top of Maine and back whenever he wanted to rock the baby to sleep Birth of the Jersey Devil A storm was raging that night in , when Mother Leeds was brought to bed in childbirth. The room was full of woman folk gathered to help her, more out of curiosity than good will. They had all heard the rumors that Mother Leeds was involved in witchcraft, and had sworn she would give birth to a devil. Black Magic Mad Henry was a hermit who lived alone in a decrepit mansion at the edge of town. Rumors were rife about the wild-eyed man. Some folks said that he was a magician who called upon the powers of darkness to wreck havoc upon his neighbors. Others called him a mad doctor who could restore life to foul corpses from the local cemetery. No respectable citizen in town had anything to do with Mad Henry Bloody Mary She lived deep in the forest in a tiny cottage and sold herbal remedies for a living. Folks living in the town nearby called her Bloody Mary, and said she was a witch. None dared cross the old crone for fear that their cows would go dry, their food-stores rot away before winter, their children take sick of fever, or any number of terrible things that an angry witch could do to her neighbors. Boo Hag You know how they say some folks are lucky at cards and some are lucky at love? Oh, he proposed to several girls, and even got accepted by a few. But they always got cold feet a day or two before the wedding, and it was bye-bye Bobby. He set to with a will and before you know it, he had raked and hoed out a beautiful patch of ground and he put in a fine planting of peas. So Brer Fox decided to capture and kill Brer Rabbit if it was the last thing he ever did! He thought and he thought until he came up with a plan. He would make a tar baby! Brer Fox went and got some tar and he mixed it with some turpentine and he sculpted it into the figure of a cute little baby. Then he stuck a hat on the Tar Baby and sat her in the middle of the road. Casey Jones Casey Jones, that heroic railroad engineer of the Cannonball, was known as the man who always brought the train in on time. He would blow the whistle so it started off soft but would increase to a wail louder than a banshee before dying off. Got so as people would recognize that whistle and know when Casey was driving past. Dancing with the Devil The girl hurried through her schoolwork as fast as she could. It was the night of the high school dance, along about 70 years ago in the town of Kingsville, Texas. The girl was so excited about the dance. She had bought a brand new, sparkly red dress for the dance. She knew she looked smashing in it. It was going to be the best evening of her life. Then her mother came in the house, looking pale and determined. Davy Crockett and the Frozen Dawn One winter, it was so cold that the dawn froze solid. The first rays of sunlight froze halfway over the mountain tops. They looked like yellow icicles dripping towards the ground. The party was crowded, the guests cheerful, the food delicious. Then a rumor began to circulate among the guests. The Devil was coming to the party. The Devil was on the way. Her roommate, Jenna, liked to get to bed early, so she packed up everything she thought she would need and went downstairs to study. They were driving home in a carriage, and were somewhere near Spiegletown when the light failed and they knew they would have to seek shelter for the night It was a beautiful night with a full moon. We were laughing and discussing the party when the engine started to cough and the emergency light went on. We had just reached the railroad crossing where Villamain Road becomes Shane Road Ghost in the Alley Rumors were rife about the alleyway behind the tavern. It was haunted, folks said. Haunted by the ghost of a young girl who had been found murdered in that self-same passage. People avoided the small street after dark, for the spirit was said to be a vengeful one. Of course, no one could name anyone whom the ghost had actually killed, but the tales were enough to keep people away from the alley at night. Ghost on the Tracks The train rumbled around him as he adjusted the throttle. He had rumbled through Timpas a few minutes ago and was on his way to Thatcher. Hairy Toe Once there was an old woman who went out in the woods to dig up some roots to cook for dinner. She spotted something funny sticking out of the leaves and dug around until she uncovered a great big hairy toe. There was some good meat on that toe which would make a real tasty dinner, so the old woman put it in her basket and took it home. Heartbeat Something was going on. Jason felt it in his bones. Polly was too happy, too cheerful. No woman could be that upbeat and still be faithful to her husband. Jason sat down to a delicious, warm meal every night, and Polly sang to herself as she washed up. What kind of woman could be cheerful doing dishes? Try as he might, Jason never heard anything that hinted of a secret romance. It drove him crazy. Life was not this perfect. There was an abandoned house sitting in the middle of a fancy neighborhood in Calgary that nobody would go near. And I mean nobody! Now , my pal Albert was the agent in charge of selling that haunted house and he tried everything in his power to close a deal. But folks were too plumb scared to make an offer, even at rock-bottom prices. Milk Bottles She was just another poor, bedraggled woman, struggling to feed her family. He saw them all the time, their faces careworn, and blank. The Depression had created hundreds of them. He was one of the lucky ones who still had his grocery and money coming in to feed his family Everyone in town knew the old log cabin back in the woods was haunted, but Sam Gibb just laughed whenever folks talked about it. Finally, the blacksmith dared Sam Gibb to spend the night in the haunted log cabin No bronco could throw him, no sir! Yep, it was that time he was up Kansas way and decided to ride him a tornado. Piece By Piece There once was a crazy ghost over Poughkeepsie way that got folks so plumb scared that nobody would stay more than one night in its house. It was a nice old place, or was, until the ghost began making its presence known. It got so no one would enter the house, not even kids on a dare, and you know what they are like! Charlie winced when his wife hit the wrong note on the piano for the thirty-second time that day. We were going hiking along our favorite trail in the back of beyond. It was a sunny day, but not too hot; a perfect day for hiking. Larry and I walked along the rugged path leading into the woods, chatting off and on as the mood struck us Seeing an old, neglected house nearby, they went to the door and tugged on the bell-pull. When no one answered, they looked through a nearby window whose shutter was banging in the bitter wind. The window was broken. Through the window, they could see a library. The dust lay heavy over everything The Headless Horseman One cold winter night, early in the New Year, a certain Dutchman left the tavern in Tarrytown and started walking to his home in the hollow nearby. His path led next to the old Sleepy Hollow cemetery where a headless Hessian soldier was buried. At midnight, the Dutchman came within site of the graveyard Vampire Hermit She was nervous when her husband said they were to stay in the abandoned house, for it contained the corpse of the hermit who once lived there, enshrined in a coffin in the loft. It was an old custom and one no longer popular among the Iroquois people, but the hermit had insisted upon it before his death. Wait Until Emmet Comes A preacher was riding to one of the churches on his circuit when darkness fell. It was about to storm, and the only house nearby was an old mansion which was reputed to be haunted. The preacher clutched his Bible and said:

Every story is part of the literary canon and is suitable for deep reading and studying the usual story elements: His brother, Sonny, is a jazz musician with a heroin problem. The public responds enthusiastically at first, but eventually loses interest. She processes the news over the next hour, experiencing a range of emotions. A great overview of the short story for the serious reader Cathedral Raymond Carver A woman and a blind man have kept in contact for ten years, mailing tapes to each other. His wife, Norma Jean, supports them both by working at a drugstore. The confinement has an added negative effect on her mental health, which she documents in her journal. She had been a recluse, so the townspeople are curious about her and her house. The narrator recounts episodes from her life. She likes to observe and listen to people, but she overhears something that upsets her. The Necklace Guy De Maupassant Mathilde borrows a necklace from a rich friend to wear to a party, but she loses it. His father wants him to be a responsible wage-earning family man when he grows up, but Paul is drawn to a life of wealth and glamour, so he decides to go to New York. She encounters many obstacles along the way. A couple takes him and locks him up on their property. The grandmother wants to go to Tennessee instead, so she talks about an escaped murderer "The Misfit" who is suspected to be on his way to Florida. The mob is broken up when they are warned of an approaching company of American soldiers. Lawrence A middle-class woman, successful but perpetually short of money, lives with her two children. He has vital information to communicate to his government, so he comes up with a plan: Scott Fitzgerald Charlie, a businessman living in Prague, returns to Paris to get custody of his daughter, now living with his sister-in-law. Here are two suggestions. Assign reading homework to students. Half the students read Story A and the other half read Story B. Next class, pair up students with different stories. Each student summarizes his or her story. The summary should include a description of character, plot and setting. Encourage students to offer their own views about the story. Why did the woman want to kill her husband? They show students what is possible in terms of creative ideas and story organisation. But first, students need to notice these things. Assign a short story as reading homework. Ask students to complete two tasks. Because they provide students with a clear answer to the question: Get the answer in this delightful short story. Three features make it a great piece to study with students in the ESL writing class. Writing in the third person, the author generates a lot of descriptive detail by telling us what the main character is thinking. This is instructive because ESL students often write stories driven by action rather than character reflection or over-simplified internal motivation. This delightful story also demonstrates how a small clever twist can create an impactful ending. That, in itself, is not bad; it just adds a small amount of text confusion. Pre-teaching a few of those words would probably go a long way to aiding student comprehension. After Twenty Years by O. Henry words, high beginner A straightforward plot with a terrific end. Before setting out on their respective journeys, they agree to meet up again in twenty years. Well, that time has arrived and one man has returned to the agreed upon spot at the agreed upon time. For the ESL writing class, this is a good model because it shows students how to use dialogue to drive the plot.
