It was funny, in some twisted way. Funny that the man he was arse over tits for was with his best friend. Funny that he actually thought that man could turn out to be gay. And what made this whole thing uproariously funny was that even if Arthur could be gay, Merlin actually thought he stood a chance. Upon finding Rex is sick, and he is the only one able to take care of him, Six finds that he might just care about the little nuisance. I do not own Dan, Phil or any other youtubers I may add in. I received a free e-copy in exchange for an honest review. Based on a true story, Sunshine and Tears is an open, honest, and believable glimpse of how alcoholism affects the lives of alcoholics and the people around them.

The simple but confronting concept dares two estranged people to look each other in the eye, without conversation. But this will be one of the top 5 shows of this year, I promise you. What Would Diplo Do? The ten-part series is the story of life in the dystopia of Gilead, a totalitarian society in what was formerly part of the United States. Facing environmental disasters and a plunging birth-rate, Gilead is ruled by a twisted fundamentalist regime that treats women as property of the state. Surrounded by the picturesque polar landscape and filled with residents who form a tight-knit community, the town has never been the site of a violent crime. That changes, though, when a research scientist is killed, which leads to an investigation that prompts police officers to suspect and mistrust one another. Taken under the wing of local gold lord Antoine Serra, Vincent quickly falls into the much more lucrative and more dangerous world of gold trafficking. Miller has a clandestine mission: Israel Documentary Look Me In The Eye SBS Starts 6 September A social experiment based on the studies of neuroscientists, this documentary series hosted by Ray Martin, explores what happens when two estranged people come face to face without conversation to look each other in the eye. Each of those seeking to reconnect has an unresolved conflict, or has drifted apart from a family member, friend or colleague. The Doctors at Austin Health are taking a different approach by treating obesity as a chronic genetic disease. Patients are told, often for the first time in their life, their weight problems are not their fault, but a result of a genetic predisposition. How did we get here? What shaped our cities? What secrets lie within them? Through honest and compassionate accounts of people and communities, the series will give people the opportunity to share their stories of resilience and community spirit with all Australians. From national issues, to personal battles and triumphs, each story inspires a sense of place and allows viewers to discover new perspectives on the Australian spirit through Indigenous storytelling. The architects have been called in, a business plan formed and Matthew Evans is about to go full circle from reviewing restaurants to building his own. The stakes have never been higher! When the doors are flung open of his farm-to-table restaurant Fat Pig Kitchen, Matthew will serve up only what he grows and rears on his own farm and neighbouring communities. Food critic turned farmer turned restaurateur how hard can it be? From the early history of man, vegetables, fruits and grains have been the major part of the human diet; meat, whether hunted or herded, being a special occasion ingredient. Worldwide there is a move towards meatless meals to explore more vegetable-based eating for environmental, religious, health benefits and simply for the pure taste. The series will showcase beautiful local produce alongside fascinating science behind cooking and feature many simple, tasty recipes for viewers to create, and experiment with, at home. From the first pedal stroke at start line to the finish line and podium presentations, audiences have access to more race coverage than ever before. Played on hard courts in Queens, New York, the US Open is the final of the four annual tennis majors, wrapping up the year for the major tournaments. The program uses case studies to offer tips and insights into the roller-coaster of conceiving and running a small business in Australia. The Point NITV Weeknights, 9pm The Point combines original journalism, agenda setting interviews, considered analysis and delivers a daily wrap-up of the stories and issues that matter to First Australians. With exclusive and never-before seen interviews with the hottest Asian celebrities, the latest music videos fast-tracked from Asia, updates on events and activities in Australia and non-stop pop from the biggest Asian sensations. The major role reversal gives women a chance to bare their hearts in front of 24 eligible bachelors, and the men get an opportunity to join the notoriously hilarious and witty dating panel in front of a live audience. No quirky personality trait will be left uncovered.

Sunshine And Tears - Ruth O'Neill Review ~ The Empty Pages Review of "Sunshine And Tears" a book which expresses the problems which an alcoholic persons family goes through to bring their loved one out of their tragic and agonized life.

Moving from camp at Eccleston near Chester, the Yeomanry arrived in Norfolk in September to take up coastal defence duties. This time was also occupied with training and Frank unfortunately had a fall from his horse, which hospitalised him for a short time. In a follow-up letter he wrote somewhat graphically about his experience in the Eastern General Hospital at Cambridge. Moore, of the Crescent, Northwich, who is attached to the Cheshire Yeomanry, and has been invalided home consequent upon accident sustained under circumstances described in a recent issue of "The Chronicle," has written for us the following interesting impressions of life in a present-day military hospital. He says; "At 7 a. Afterwards some of the men make their beds, and the nurses do it for these who are too badly wounded to do their own. The nurses then begin the dressings. This was my most unpleasant experience. Several men had been so badly hit that they could hardly bear being touched. Yet the nurses had to keep with the good work all the time the poor fellows were screaming. One man had a hole the back of thigh. I saw it myself, and I could have put two fists it easily. Had to dressed every hour, and it was like a murder each time. We ate our meals while it took place. Each sister of each ward would select a few, and they paraded at It was very amusing see us arrayed in the hospital clothes of saxe blue, with all kinds, of coloured dressing gowns put over them. I myself saw a man who had the flesh blown from his leg from the knee to the thigh. His life was given up, and for the short time he was expected to live he had everything asked for. His slightest wish was law. The doctors and nurses between them managed to save his life, but thought the limb would have to be amputated because of gangrene. However, this evil was overcome and his life and leg were saved, and the man is doing famously. His name is Conway, ward 3B. This is only one instance of many marvellous cures. I have seen men there wounded in all manner places. Many were in the legs, and one man had each lip divided by a piece of shell. I watched them improving each day. You would notice a man walk better, another would have a little less bandaging on him, and so on. These poor fellows had been through it from Liege till the fall of Antwerp. I got the hats from two of them, and a prominent Northwich tradesman has them in his window. Several of them could speak French, and I was able to have a little chat with them. One, a gunner, told that he had found his wife and three children murdered. They met their deaths in the burning and sacking of Louvain, and he himself found their mutilated bodies. I was struck by the restless look of some of them. You could see that their thoughts were miles away. We lit cigarettes for them and put them in their mouths, and it was grand to see the look of satisfaction on taking the first whiff. I would that the young fellows who are hanging back could have seen them. It would have stirred their small spark of patriotism into a burning flame, with strong desire to help them to get back what they have lost. Over five days, commencing 25 August , the town was destroyed by German troops. Yesterday it was announced that the Belgian town of Louvain, with its Hotel de Ville, its churches, University, Library, and other famous buildings, had been utterly destroyed by the soldiers of the Kaiser. The excuse for this unpardonable act of barbarity and vandalism that a discomfited band of German troops returning to Louvain were fired upon by the people of the town, who had been disarmed a week earlier. The truth is that the Germans, making for the town in disorder, were fired upon by their friends in occupation of Louvain, a mistake no means rare in war. How the fell work was done has been described by the well-known American writer, Mr. Richard Harding Davis, who arrived at Louvain by rail on the fatal day and spent two hours there. They wanted to talk about it. They were all like men who had been through an orgy. But the work of destruction itself was done with perfect system. They began at the heart of the city, and they worked down to the outskirts, taking street by street and house by house. The following item provides a vivid personal account from someone who escaped from the town. On Monday evening, he said, firing suddenly resounded the streets. Some declared that German troops fired upon each other, but the German insisted that the shots came from the inhabitants, killing several soldiers. We sought shelter cellars. There we had to part, the men on one side, and the women and children on the other. The town was now one flaming mass. Altogether we were 73 men, handcuffed like criminals. We were locked in the church, and had to lie on the cold floor. Fresh prisoners arrived at intervals. Inside the imprisoned priest gave us absolution. When we left, the church in Campenhout was burning fiercely. We were told we would be free, but must return to Louvain. He arrived at Malines, and thence went by military train to Antwerp. He was not aware of the whereabouts of his wife and children. He was stripped of his valuables. The fugitive added that the Burgomaster and a number of notables were also shot, but he did not see it himself. The town is completely cut off from communication.
