Peyton Manning cast a long shadow over the NFL from 2004 to 2015. Regardless, pure television viewership is down. In 2015, it was 1.1 billion. The reasons are myriad. Colin Kaepernick not being signed in 2013. There is also the fact that a surge in popularity for daily fantasy football in 2013 may have pushed numbers to unsustainable highs. Plus technology has decreased viewership of all television. There is one other reason that has gotten scant attention but may be a bigger contributing factor than most realize. Or more specifically, no Peyton Manning. Manning might be an exception. The uber-popular personality drew in casual viewers in ways that no one else in the league could, or can. While NFL ratings are still extremely high, the league is missing that pop. Sports Illustrated noted that in 2015, just one regular-season game scored more than a 10 million viewers. In 2014, there were 13 such games. Denver lacks the big market to make that happen. But Manning lifted the Broncos up into a sure-bet million plus viewership figure. Manning was injured for part of the Broncos season but in his five times on national network broadcasts that year, Denver never scored lower than 10 million. The games averaged 15 million. However, for the NFL to deliver the truly big event numbers, it needs more than its core audience that tunes in for nearly everything. It needs the more casual fan to flip on the game, see a recognizable name or brand, and watch. His late-career return from neck surgery and push for a second Super Bowl title, and past his rivalry with Bill Belichick and Tom Brady, was a gripping storyline. View photos The Brady-Manning rivalry played out in dramatic fashion in the playoffs, including with trips to the Super Bowl on the line. He was the son of Southern football royalty; his father Archie was a star for the University of Mississippi and the New Orleans Saints. Peyton was a sensation growing up in New Orleans and then at Tennessee. Older brother Cooper was such a presence that at one Super Bowl the NFL actually handed out quote sheets from him even though he never played in the league. His comedic acting ability was considerable. Just consider the breadth of those audiences. From 2004 to 2015, he ranked as the No. 1 most popular player in the NFL. He was either the No. 1 or 2 most popular player in the NFL. So last year, despite not being a football player for two full seasons, there were only five players more popular in the game than Peyton Manning. The ratings tell part of that story.

I sat in with a team during the NFL draft this year. I stayed off camera, but I was able to sit in and watch. Often times if I am speaking at a certain event, I will stop by that NFL team or college team and go talk some football. But I know what that job entails, and that is an all-in job. That is a do-not-put-your-phone-down-ever job. Because I know what that commitment is and what that job entails, it is just not the right place for me right now. According to Sports Illustrated, the Dolphins reached out to Peyton after Ryan Tannehill sustained a season-ending injury. I had a lot of people tell me how much I was going to miss it and be anxious and miserable, and it is such an individual feeling, and that was just not true. Even Joe Flacco had 11 touchdowns and no picks the year he won it. This is the passing age, and the quickest way to get great is to have a quarterback, and protect him. Trent Dilfer is still the go-to reference for a championship game manager quarterback, 16 years later, the way Ray Lewis is the go-to reference for escaping a murder trial, along with O. And now Peyton Manning, age 39, is in the Super Bowl. Manning was awful this year, got benched, got accused of using Human Growth Hormone this year, and was terrible this year. Peyton Manning was at least two kinds of bad this year. Three if you include media leaks. Present-day Manning might be the worst quarterback to ever try to win the Super Bowl. Peyton Manning was 34th. Only Blake Bortles of Jacksonville threw more interceptions â€” 18 to 17 â€” and Bortles needed an extra passes to do it. Manning was 28th in yards per game, 28th in yards per attempt â€” ahead of Aaron Rodgers, weird â€” and 27th in completion percentage. This is like being in a police lineup with a bunch of guys who look like they slept in a hedge, or in their Wall Street CEO offices. But Denver has defence lawyers that can get you out of almost anything. Article Continued Below So yeah: Peyton Manning gets to go to the Super Bowl, and he will face a team that should scare people. Cam Newton is the new thing, the new quarterback, the new great thing that has not been seen before, who laughs when he runs. And yes, Carolina will be favoured. On one play he hesitated, tried to pull the ball back, jiggled on one foot like someone had a Brady voodoo doll, and then threw flat-footed, wide of Rob Gronkowski. Pressure can make anybody wobble. So, Peyton Manning got to the Super Bowl. He was carried on the shoulder of a defence that got to Brady with four rushers, the way the Giants used to do. But it was the extra point that did it, as much as anything. It will be hard to imagine Manning succeeding against the ravenous Panthers, who reduced Palmer to a guy throwing his keys into a parking lot on the off chance it might start his car. The Steelers were 22nd and first, but at least they had a quarterback who could really throw. The Seahawks were 17th and first, but, same thing. Actually, along with Dilfer, Eli Manning in might be the closest thing to this â€” awful year, great defence. But he had an arm, too.

However, the Colts played a sub-par game against the Chargers and fell short of the win; the score was 26â€” His quarterback rating of In the fourth quarter with only a few minutes left in the game, Manning threw what looked to be the game-ending interception to safety Troy Polamalu , but the interception was overturned a call the NFL later admitted was incorrect. On fourth down, Manning was sacked near his own goal line, and the game seemed to be over as the Steelers were one yard from a touchdown. On the next play, the ball was fumbled by running back Jerome Bettis and picked up by Colts defender Nick Harper who appeared to have a clear path down the sideline for what might have been the game-winning score. Then the Colts drove down the field to the Steelers yard line, before Mike Vanderjagt missed a field goal as time ran out. Bush at the White House. After taking the lead twice in the fourth quarter, Manning had to lead a third scoring drive, this time finishing with a one-yard quarterback sneak rushing touchdown in the last minute for a 31â€”28 win. He completed of passes for yards and three touchdowns. Their first loss would come in Dallas. Plagued by a run defense that would allow over yards in every game, the Colts were 11â€”4 heading into their final game. His passer rating Manning led the Colts to 32 points in the second half for a 38â€”34 victory, the final score coming late in the fourth quarter as Manning led the Colts on an yard touchdown drive to take the lead for the first time in the game. He said his goodbyes. View photos AP More Then he talked about the ups and the downs of the season, for him and the team. The year-old had his worst season, by far, and missed seven starts due to injury. He talked to the team about praying, and believing. He started thanking everyone. Even the video staff, trainers, and the rest of the support staff. Manning said he thanked everyone for just letting him be a part of the journey. The rest of the Broncos players started looking around the room and noticed that many others were in tears. I told him before the game, I want to win this for you. The defense carried him to the finish line. The football gods owed him one, giving him this last, improbable title when he was a broken-down version of himself. Manning called or texted all of his NFL head coaches. He was loose all week when he met with the media, seeming to enjoy the entire experience. Story Continues His parents Archie and Olivia were with him after the win. He saw his wife Ashley and hugged his kids. Even when Manning was done with a second round of interviews in the locker room, after he met with the media in the interview room, he thanked reporters who wanted to thank and congratulate him. It would be a huge surprise if Manning ever played again. A little more than a month later, he got the type of sendoff "if this is in fact the end" that everyone hopes for. Manning has many records, multiple rings and will go down as one of the titans of the sport. Email him at shutdown.
