Brown made a comment that it was a "strange notion" since the predecessors of Appa Kavi had no knowledge of such a derivation. According to the Russian linguist Mikhail S. Linguistic reconstruction suggests that Proto-Dravidian was spoken around the third millennium BCE, possibly in the region around the lower Godavari river basin in peninsular India. This was where the bird Jatayu fell, wounded after a futile battle against Ravana who was carrying away Sita. It has been argued that there is a historical connection between the civilizations of ancient Mesopotamia and the Telugu speaking peoples. Some reverse coin legends are in Tamil , [35] and Telugu languages. Certain exploration and excavation missions conducted by the Archaeological Department in and around the Keesaragutta temple have brought to light, a number of brick temples, cells and other structures encompassed by brick prakaram along with coins, beads, stucco figures, garbhapatra, pottery, and Brahmi label inscriptions datable to 4th and 5th centuries CE. On the basis of palaeography , the inscription is dated around the 4th to 5th centuries CE. C at Amaravathi not to be confused with the newly planned city of Amaravati. A number of Telugu words were found in the Sanskrit and Prakrit inscriptions of the Satavahanas, Vishnukundinas, and Ikshwakas. According to Telugu lore, its grammar has a prehistoric past. Sage Kanva was said to be the languages first grammarian. He cited twenty grammatical aphorisms ascribed to Kanva, and concluded that Kanva wrote an ancient Telugu Grammar which was lost. During the next fifty years, Telugu inscriptions appeared in Anantapuram and other neighbouring regions. It was also a period of phonetic changes in the spoken language. Middle Ages[edit] The third phase is marked by further stylization and sophistication of the literary languages. During this period the split of the Telugu from Kannada alphabets took place. Vijayanagara Empire[edit] The Vijayanagara Empire gained dominance from the late 14th century, reaching its peak during the rule of Krishnadevaraya in the 16th century, when Telugu literature experienced what is considered its Golden Age. In the latter half of the 17th century, the Mughal Empire extended further south, culminating in the establishment of the princely state of Hyderabad State by the dynasty of the Nizam of Hyderabad in 1724. This heralded an era of Persian influence on the Telugu language, especially Hyderabad State. The effect is also evident in the prose of the early 19th century, as in the Kaifiyats. Literature from this time had a mix of classical and modern traditions and included works by such scholars as Gidugu Venkata Ramamoorthy , Kandukuri Veeresalingam , Gurazada Apparao , Gidugu Sitapati and Panuganti Lakshminarasimha Rao. This form of the language is also taught in schools and colleges as a standard. Hindi tops the list followed by Gujarati. Early Telugu epigraphy According to the famous Japanese Historian Noboru Karashima who served as the President of the Epigraphical Society of India in 1950, calculated that there are approximately 10,000 inscriptions which exist in the Telugu language as of the year 1950 making it one of the most densely inscribed languages. The equivalence between the Telugu linguistic sphere and geographical boundaries of Andhra is also brought out in an eleventh century description of Andhra boundaries. Andhra, according to this text, was bounded in north by Mahendra mountain in the modern Ganjam District of Orissa and to the south by Kalahasti temple in Chittoor District. But Andhra extended westwards as far as Srisailem in the Kurnool District, about halfway across the modern state. Common suffixes are ooru, pudi, pedu, peta, patnam, wada, giri, cherla, seema, gudem, palle, and palli. They can also be seen in the border areas of Tamil Nadu. Dialects[edit] There are three major dialects: Andhra dialect spoken in the coastal districts of Andhra Pradesh, Rayalaseema dialect spoken in the four Rayalaseema districts of Andhra Pradesh and finally Telangana dialect, laced with Urdu words, spoken mainly in Telangana. There are significant populations of Telugu speakers in the eastern districts of Karnataka viz. Bangalore Urban , Bellary , Chikballapur , Kolar.
