The Count was the one featured most prominently in the park brochure. The Honkers did appear in the show for the rest of the year, but when rolled around The Honkers were phased out. They would make sporadic appearances and appeared on print media, but the large amount of characters being added to the roster made them less and less prominent until the costumes eventually wore out. The new land featured a giant record player, bathrooms shaped like shoe boxes and milk cartoons and a giant water slide topped with a rubber duckie the size of a Volkswagen. According to the Muppet Wiki they are named Thomas and Tessie Twiddlebug and are the parents of the Twiddlebug children. These Twiddlebug costumed characters were phased out around , but the Twiddlebug Land remains a popular section of the park. There are topiaries and signage with the characters throughout the area. For the Very Furry Christmas event a special train ride goes through the Twiddlebug Land and featuring dozens of cutouts of Twiddlebugs in their gingerbread factory. In the roster of characters continued to grow. Oscar the Grouch was added to the park. Originally Oscar was added as a puppet. The puppeteer would be inside of an over-sized garbage can and people would meet and greet with him as well as see him in the parade. In a full walkaround Oscar started appearing in the park. Telly Monster also made his park debut at the time. The giant pink Muppet appears in many shows and meet and greets to this day. Rosita with wings left and without wings right. Finally, brought Rosita to the park. The popular Spanish speaking Muppet had debuted on Sesame Street just a few years prior. Her television character originally had wings and so did her Sesame Place character. Rosita was envisioned as somewhat of a fruit bat. The idea was later dropped and the puppet and walkaround characters were redesigned. Jumping ahead two years, brought Zoe to Sesame Place. Zoe debuted wearing lots of jewelry but no clothes. Today she sports her ballerina tutu at Sesame Place. Purchase your copy of Sesame Place at sesameplacebook.com.

The Adventures of Ernie & Bert in Twiddlebug Land is a Sesame Street storybook featuring Ernie, Bert and the Twiddlebugs who live in the window box. Ernie imagines that he and Bert shrink down to the size of bugs.

Plot[ edit ] The film begins with Bert and Ernie introducing the film. As the story opens, Elmo welcomes the viewer, finds his fuzzy cotton blue blanket, and plays with it in his bedroom. After spilling juice on his Blanket, he takes it to the laundromat and has it washed and dried. When he is about to take his Blanket home, Elmo encounters his friend Zoe, who is feeling depressed because her father, due to having to work, cannot take her to the zoo, so Elmo decides to cheer Zoe up by imitating some zoo animals. Upset at this, Elmo declares that Zoe is no longer his friend. Suddenly, Telly inadvertently takes away the blanket while rollerskating right out of control. This then leads into an epic chase around Sesame Street. Grover hears Elmo cry out, and turns into Supergrover, and flies to get the blanket, but crashes. Finally, the blanket accidentally lands in the hands of Oscar the Grouch , who drops it in his trash can after sneezing into it. Elmo attempts to retrieve it, but Oscar pops up and says, "Hey, Elmo! Have a nice trip! Wanting his blanket back, Elmo begins a journey through Grouchland. Feeling that Grizzy is right, Elmo becomes discouraged. However, a green plant named Stuckweed, encourages Elmo that he will make it and that he just has to take his first step into the journey, and Elmo sets out on a quest to get his Blanket back. When Big Bird and Zoe find a Grouch police officer and ask him for help, the entire group ends up arrested and put in jail as the police officer informs them that it is against the law to ask for help in Grouchland. Meanwhile, when Huxley is informed of Elmo coming to retrieve his Blanket, he has his trusted sidekick, Bug the bug, and his minions, the Pesties, trap Elmo in a tunnel. However, Elmo gets out with the help of fireflies. Upon noticing that Elmo is still coming, Huxley has Bug and the Pesties pose as construction workers, set up a fake construction zone, and misdirect Elmo into a nearby garbage dump, where he is forcibly brought before the Queen of Trash for trespassing in her kingdom. At first she assumes that Elmo might be in league with Huxley, Elmo denies this, but then, he remembers that he refused to share his blanket with Zoe, and feels ashamed. The Queen gives him what she believes is an impossible test by requesting that he blows a raspberry for her, in a set time of 30 seconds. Left with no other remaining options to stop Elmo, Huxley sends his humongous chicken to confront Elmo, as the chicken mistakes Elmo for a worm. However, Elmo successfully convinces the chicken that he is not a worm, but this only prompts the chicken to toss Elmo far away, leaving Huxley to conclude that he defeated Elmo. Resting on a rock, Elmo realizes that night has come, and begins to give up on getting his Blanket back. Oscar is convinced to help set things right as well as admitting that Elmo is his friend. He then convinces the police officer as well as all of the Grouches of Grouchland that the only way they can finally stop Huxley from stealing any more of their trash once and for all, is if they swallow their pride and work together. A caterpillar wakes up Elmo the next morning on the rock. Just as Elmo is about to face the fate of never seeing his friends again, the Sesame Street and Grouchland citizens appear in time to rescue Elmo, and the Pesties flee in a panic. Bug refuses, as he has been sympathetic to Elmo, and gives Elmo back his Blanket. Elmo is hailed a hero by the Sesame Street and Grouchland citizens, while Huxley, shocked at being betrayed by his own sidekick, unsuccessfully tries to apologize to Bug for being greedy and selfish, promising to give back everything that he stole. Happy to have finally gotten his Blanket back, Elmo returns to Sesame Street with his friends, where he apologizes to Zoe for not sharing his Blanket and hurting her feelings. He then allows her to hold his Blanket and she happily accepts his apology, agreeing that they can permanently resume their friendship. Elmo then says goodbye to the audience and thanks them for helping before going to dance with his friends, while Bert and Ernie congratulate the audience for playing along and head home as the film ends, but Bert briefly stays to look at the credits, only to leave when Ernie tells him that it is time to feed his pigeons.
