On the 6th of February , an aircraft took off from a snowy Munich airport carrying Busby's Babes, one of the most successful teams Manchester United have ever had.

Both passengers were saved by Harry Gregg. The accident resulted in the imposition of operating limits for the amount of slush build-up permitted on runways. They claimed he had taken off without clearing the wings of ice, which caused the crash, despite several witnesses stating that no ice had been seen. When the original negative was examined, no snow or ice could be seen, the "snow" in the original having been due to the sun reflecting off the wings, which was clarified when examining the negative rather than the published pictures which had been produced from a copy negative. As the official cause, British authorities recorded a build-up of melting snow on the runway which prevented the "Elizabethan" from reaching the required take-off speed. Thain, having been dismissed by BEA shortly after the accident and never re-engaged, retired and returned to run his poultry farm in Berkshire. He died of a heart attack at the age of 53 in August The 21st victim, Frank Swift , the journalist and former Manchester City goalkeeper, died on his way to hospital. Duncan Edwards died from his injuries on 21 February at the Rechts der Isar Hospital in Munich, and the final death toll reached 23 several days later when co-pilot Ken Rayment died as a result of serious head injuries. At times, he felt like giving up football entirely, until he was told by his wife, Jean, "You know Matt, the lads would have wanted you to carry on. A team largely made up of reserve and youth team players beat Sheffield Wednesday 3-0 in the first match after the disaster. With seven players dead Duncan Edwards died just over 24 hours later , and with only Harry Gregg and Bill Foulkes fit to play out of the surviving players, United were desperate to find replacements with experience, so Murphy signed Ernie Taylor from Blackpool [64] and Stan Crowther from Aston Villa. Bradley was the only one of the three players to play for the first team, and the only one to sign a permanent contract. The remaining places in the team were filled by reserve players including Shay Brennan and Mark Pearson. Bobby Charlton and Bill Foulkes were the only two crash survivors who lined up in that team. Above the plaque was a teak carving of a player and a supporter, heads bowed either side of a wreath and a football inscribed with the date "". The plaque was designed by Manchester architect J. Vipond and constructed by Messrs Jaconello Manchester Ltd. The original plaque was stolen in the s and replaced by a replica now located behind the counter in the press entrance. The clock has remained in the same position since it was first installed. The plaque could not be removed without damaging it, so the old memorial was walled up within the Main Stand and a new memorial was made, simpler than the original, now consisting simply of a slate pitch with the names inscribed upon it, and installed in The trough bears a plaque with the inscription: The new memorial was funded by Manchester United themselves and the unveiling was attended by club officials, including chief executive David Gill , manager Alex Ferguson and director Bobby Charlton, a survivor of the disaster himself. These include a menu card signed by 14 of the players, including the eight who were killed, a photograph taken at the meal and a match ticket. The menu card was acquired by the then British ambassador to Yugoslavia and was auctioned by his son in Red Star Belgrade and Bayern Munich were touted as possible opponents for the match, and fans purchased tickets without the opponents even having been decided. Edwards took the opportunity to combine the two events into one. Martin Edwards was criticised for turning the match into a publicity stunt, while Elizabeth Wood, the divorced wife of Munich survivor Ray Wood , compared the treatment of the Munich victims to that of "dancing bears at the circus". Johnny Berry was forced to leave the flat he rented from the club to make way for a new player. The match kicked off at 3: Representatives from both teams laid floral tributes to those who lost their lives, with crash survivor and United director Bobby Charlton joined by Bolton president Nat Lofthouse in leading out the two teams. A memorial service was held at Old Trafford on 6 February Before the game, pictures of the players who lost their lives at Munich were displayed on big screens, and England players wore black armbands. There was also a tribute to the Busby Babes in the match programme. In the event, it was generally well-observed, but a small number of supporters made whistles and cat-calls and the referee cut the silence short after less than 30 seconds. This was followed by a minute silence, which, despite previous concerns, was respected by all the fans. Manchester City won 2â€”1 thanks to first half goals from Darius Vassell and debutant Benjani. Written by an anonymous author, later revealed to be Eric Winter, the editor of the magazine Sing, [] the song was recorded and released by Liverpool folk band The Spinners on their debut album "Quayside Songs Old and New". Most recently, the English band The Futureheads named their album News and Tributes in honour of the disaster. The title track pays tribute to those who lost their lives, [] and includes the verse: Cut down in their prime, In silence, on that day, February 58, they got what they need, From Belgrade and back home to sleep Film[edit] Barry Navidi, producer of the film The Merchant of Venice , was reported to be working on a script for a Hollywood film about the Munich air crash. The Manchester Evening News reported on 22 April that the survivors had not been consulted and were concerned about how accurate the film would be. Unless you were there, how could you know what conversations took place? The programme was met with criticism from former United winger Albert Scanlon , who claimed that it was full of inaccuracies despite the production having consulted him about the content of the documentary. Errors in the programme included the depiction of Jimmy Murphy giving a pre-match team talk in Belgrade, despite him being in Cardiff at the time, and the plane being shown as only half full when nearly every seat was occupied. He met and talked with some of the first rescuers who had arrived on the scene. A made-for-television film United , written by Chris Chibnall and directed by James Strong for the BBC , tells the story of the crash and the subsequent rebuilding of Manchester United as a footballing force. The story was seen largely through the eyes of coach Jimmy Murphy , who became de facto manager of the team while Busby recovered from the crash. The role of Murphy was played by David Tennant. Other[edit] The University of Salford honoured Munich victim Eddie Colman by naming one of its halls of residence after him.

Ray Wood died 9 July Aged 71 This is the famous Busby Babes - probably one of the best teams that has ever been put together certainly in England, possibly in Europe, maybe the World! Their defensive work was legend, their attacking awesome. At the time of the air crash they were devastating Europe with their skills and at home, in the first division, making history. One of the best games ever seen in England saw them win an amazing game at Arsenal against an extremely strong Arsenal team. It was on 1st February , it was to be their last game together on English soil. The team was the same that was to play Red Star Belgrade the following Wednesday. Duncan Edwards opened the scoring after 10 minutes with a goal of such power that the Arsenal goalie was dumbstruck. Charlton, with a first time volley made it 2 - 0. Tommy Taylor made it 3 - 0 just before half time. Suddenly, in the second half, the game took on a dramatic turn round with Arsenal levelling the score in just three minutes! Dennis Viollet headed home to make it 4 - 3; Tommy Taylor then making it 5 - 3 before Arsenal pulled one back at 5 - 4. Both sets of fans rose, at the final whistle, to give both teams a standing ovation. The teams left the pitch, exhausted, arm in arm. Utd at Arsenal 1st February Duncan Edwards holding arms out, Harry Gregg on the floor. The stories revolving around this team were no less extraordinary. Compared with modern players, who turn up for games in their expensive cars, in luxurious coaches, the Babes would get the bus, alongside their fans, turning up at Old Trafford with boots in brown paper bags or rushing to the ground from the coal mines where they worked Bill Foulkes! Some were seen having a cigarette walking to the ground! They would walk into Old Trafford, signing autographs for the fans as they came in, super heroes who were ordinary lads nonetheless. I hope you enjoy your visit to this little piece of history. The Manchester Evening News are responsible for some of the images contained within the book. The players and staff boarding the Elizabethan to set off for Belgrade. The game finished Dennis Viollet had opened the scoring after only 90 seconds. The dodgy referee disallowed a Charlton goal 14 minutes later. Then 40 yards out Charlton robbed Kostic of the ball ran 10 yards and lashed an unstoppable shot into the net. Charlton then received the ball from Edwards, surrounded by Belgrade defenders, but found the only gap and hammered the ball in for a lead. This they converted to make it The fans were trying to put United off their stride by pelting them with snowballs. Then Red Star got a free kick 20 yards out. Kasic picked the precise spot and levelled the score at in spite of Gregg getting his fingertips to the ball. The referee, Kainer, was that bad, one reporter remarked that if a ball boy had slipped over, he would have given Red Star a free kick! The crash scene, sifting through the debris. The Busby Babes has 14 ratings and 2 reviews. Pete said: I was only 5 at the time of Munich. I can remember being 5, but have no recollection of disaster.

Busby did not assume managerial command until October, after the start of the season, and his first act was to appoint Jimmy Murphy as Reserve Team coach. The club captain was now Johnny Carey, an Irishman whose normal position was right-back but who during his United career played in every position except on the right wing. They would repeat this twice, and though disappointed by this failure, they did deliver the FA Cup in 1948, beating Blackpool 4–2 to claim their first major trophy for 37 years. It was the first of many trophies to come. However, the side captained by Johnny Carey was beginning to show its age and a new set of players had to be found. These changes resulted in the club finishing the 1947 season as runners up in the First Division, and in the club won the FA Cup, beating Blackpool 4–2 in the final. At the start of the following season, Busby began selling some of the older players and replacing them with players from the Youth and Reserve teams. David Pegg, Dennis Viollet, Duncan Edwards, and Bill Foulkes, aged between 16 and 21, all made their first appearances in the 1948 season. United finished eighth in 1948 and fifth in 1949 before winning the league by a point margin in 1950 with Tommy Taylor and Dennis Viollet leading the line for a side which had an average age of only 21. Only two players in the team, Roger Byrne and Johnny Berry, had collected medals in both the 1948 and 1949 title winning campaigns. One of the stars of the team was Duncan Edwards, who set the record as the youngest player ever to be capped for England when he played against Scotland at the age of 17 and 8 months. The record stood for more than 40 years before being broken in by Michael Owen, who would play for United more than a decade later. His legendary status is demonstrated by the fact that he placed sixth in a poll of Manchester United fans, asking them to name the top 50 United players of all time - despite his playing career lasting just five years and up to the age of 21. The Championship was defended successfully in 1951, with Tommy Taylor scoring 22 goals, Liam Whelan getting 26 and a young Bobby Charlton grabbing 10 goals. The return leg was played at Maine Road as Old Trafford did not have any floodlights, and United won 10–0. This is still their record victory in a European match. Munich air disaster[edit] Main article: The match ended in a 3–3 draw, but as United had already won the home leg 2–1, they won the tie 5–4 on aggregate and reached the semi finals for the second year in succession. Takeoff had to be aborted twice because of boost surging, a common problem in the "Elizabethan". The problem was caused by the fuel mixture being too rich, which caused the engines to over-accelerate: The pilots were able to control the surging on the third takeoff attempt, but as they reached the V1 "decision speed" after which it is unsafe to abort takeoff, the airspeed suddenly dropped. The aircraft left the runway, crashed through a fence and into a house. The left wing and the tail were ripped off, while the starboard side of the fuselage hit a fuel tank and exploded. Officially, the cause of the accident was build-up of slush on the runway, which caused the aircraft to lose speed, preventing it from achieving takeoff. Berry and Jackie Blanchflower survived but never played again. Byrne, Taylor and Edwards were all regular members of the England team, with 70 caps and 21 goals between them, while Pegg, Whelan, Berry and Blanchflower had all received full international recognition for England, the Republic of Ireland or Northern Ireland. A total of 23 people died as a result of their injuries; among them were four other passengers and two of the crew, as were eight sportswriters including former Manchester City and England goalkeeper Frank Swift. Among the survivors were goalkeeper Harry Gregg, who had only just joined the club from Doncaster Rovers, full-back Bill Foulkes and forward Bobby Charlton. The disaster bears similarities to the Superga air disaster in which wiped out the highly successful Torino team; the air disaster in Lima, Peru that killed 43 passengers the only survivor on the plane being a member of the crew including the whole Alianza Lima squad, plus members of the cheer squad and the coaching staff; a crash that killed 18 members of the Zambia national team; and a air disaster that wiped out Brazilian top-flight side Chapecoense. Rebuilding[edit] Jackie Blanchflower and Johnny Berry were injured to such an extent that their playing careers were over, and Kenny Morgans was never the same player he had been before the crash. Matt Busby himself was in hospital for two months recovering from multiple injuries.

Initially his chances of surviving were thought to be no better than While Busby recovered in hospital, his assistant Jimmy Murphy took temporary charge of team affairs Murphy had not gone to Yugoslavia with the team, as he was managing the Welsh national side in a World Cup qualifier against Israel. United struggled in the League after Munich, winning only one of their last 14 matches and finishing in ninth place. However, they performed well in the FA Cup matches and made it to the final, but lost to Bolton 2–0. Although they were sound long-term investments, the arrival of fresh blood failed to give the club an immediate leg-up in the league. English rugby club Salford had toured France in the s wearing red shirts and became known as "The Red Devils". Busby liked the sound of it, thinking a devil was more intimidating to opponents than angelic babes - and also had to reflect the fact the side would now feature more experienced players. He declared Manchester United should also be known as "The Red Devils" and soon the club began incorporating the devil logo into match programmes and scarves. The mid-Sixties[edit] Manchester United badge in the s September saw the debut of year-old forward George Best , completing the " holy trinity " of Charlton, Law and Best that would help United to their successes of the s. In 1964 Law scored 46 goals in all competitions. United finished second that season, then won the League in 1965 by goal average over a newly promoted Leeds United , who would go on to be one of the dominant sides in English football over the next decade. That season saw United go on a run of 13 wins in 15 games from September–December The rebuilding was complete: United won another league title in 1967, going unbeaten in their last 20 games and making sure of top spot by winning 6–1 over West Ham , qualifying them for the European Cup the next season and laying the groundwork for the climactic triumph of that era.
