Using a ruler and a bone folder, score the sheet down the center, and then fold the sheet in half. Print the second page of the file egg nog recipe on left, title page on right. Using the same sheet of paper, print the third page of the file contents on left, page 16 on right on the opposite side, manually feeding sheet back into the printer. Depending on your printer, you may need to flip the sheet over. Place sheet on a work surface with the second side face-up. Repeat, printing one page of file at a time and feeding the sheet back into printer to print the next page of the file. As each sheet is completed, place the second side face-up. Using ruler and bone folder, score each sheet down the center, and then fold in half. Slip the folded sheet that you printed last into the folded sheet that you printed before it. Repeat with the remaining sheets. Check the page numbers to confirm the pages are in order. Place stack inside cover sheet. Starting inside the songbook, thread a ribbon through the holes and tie it along the outside of the songbook. Trim the ends if desired. Using a laser or ink-jet printer, print the cover page onto card stock. Print the remaining pages, one at a time. To make double-sided pages, print the first page, and then print the next page on the opposite side of the sheet, manually feeding sheet back into the printer. Repeat with remaining pages. Stack pages in order, from front cover to recipe; check the page numbers to confirm the pages are in order. Add a blank page of card stock at the end for the back cover. Thread ribbon through the holes from back cover to front, and tie. To create the gilded lettering, first print the cover as directed above. This project requires a laser printer the foil clings only to toner, not ink. For the best results, make sure your printer has plenty of toner. Cut a square of gold foil large enough to cover the title. Using adhesive squares included with the gold foil, attach each corner of foil to the cover over title. Pass the cover through the printer again. Print a blank document, manually feeding the cover into the printer. Wait 30 seconds, and then peel off foil.

The History of the Christmas Card Borne out of having too little time, the holiday greeting has boomed into a major industry. The first Christmas Card Wikimedia Commons smithsonian. The problem were their letters: Now, everybody was sending letters. Sir Cole—best remembered today as the founder of the Victoria and Albert Museum in London—was an enthusiastic supporter of the new postal system, and he enjoyed being the s equivalent of an A-Lister, but he was a busy man. As he watched the stacks of unanswered correspondence he fretted over what to do. He approached an artist friend, J. Horsley, and asked him to design an idea that Cole had sketched out in his mind. Unlike many holiday traditions—can anyone really say who sent the first Christmas fruitcake? In their image of the family celebrating, Cole and Horsley had included several young children enjoying what appear to be glasses of wine along with their older siblings and parents. While Cole and Horsley get the credit for the first, it took several decades for the Christmas card to really catch on, both in Great Britain and the United States. Louis Prang, a Prussian immigrant with a print shop near Boston, is credited with creating the first Christmas card originating in the United States in . You were typically looking at animals, nature, scenes that could have taken place in October or February. People soon collected Christmas cards like they would butterflies or coins, and the new crop each season were reviewed in newspapers, like books or films today. In , prominent British arts writer Gleeson White devoted an entire issue of his influential magazine, The Studio, to a study of Christmas cards. While he found the varied designs interesting, he was not impressed by the written sentiments. The Hall Brothers company which, a decade later, change its name to Hallmark , soon adapted a new format for the cards—4 inches wide, 6 inches high, folded once, and inserted in an envelope. As hunger for cards grew, Hallmark and its competitors reached out for new ideas to sell them. Commissioning famous artists to design them was one way: Hence, the creation of cards by Salvador Dali, Grandma Moses and Norman Rockwell, who designed a series of Christmas cards for Hallmark the Rockwell cards are still reprinted every few years. Jacqueline Kennedy painted two Christmas card designs for Hallmark in . The designs, including Glad Tidings featured and the Journey of the Magi, were to be sold as a benefit for the Kennedy Center. Between and , Norman Rockwell created 32 Christmas card designs, including Christmas Surprise , for Hallmark. In , Salvador Dali agreed to design ten Christmas cards for Hallmark. The following year, Madonna and Child and The Nativity, were sold in stores that carried Hallmark cards. The most popular Christmas card of all time, however, is a simple one. The third peers out from the card with big, baby blue eyes, her halo slightly askew. The introduction, 53 years ago, of the first Christmas stamp by the U. Post Office perhaps speaks even more powerfully to the popularity of the Christmas card. Hence, the first printing of the new Christmas stamps came in sheets of . The second printing was in sheets of . Although they are not rare, Piazza adds, the second printing-sheets of these stamps are collectibles today. Today, much of the innovation in Christmas cards is found in smaller, niche publishers whose work is found in gift shops and paper stores. Yet, there are also accounts of Cole selling at least some of the cards for a shilling apiece at his art gallery in London, possibly for charity. Maybe Sir Cole was not only a pioneer of the Christmas card, but prescient in his recognition of another aspect of our celebration of Christmas. Arun Singh, a cardiac surgeon who has performed more open heart surgeries than almost anyone in history—will be published in by Center Street, an imprint of Hachette.

Cole had helped introduce the Penny Post three years earlier. Two batches totaling 2, cards were printed and sold that year for a shilling each. Humorous and sentimental images of children and animals were popular, as were increasingly elaborate shapes, decorations and materials. At Christmas , the lithograph firm Prang and Mayer began creating greeting cards for the popular market in Britain The firm began selling the Christmas card in America in , thus becoming the first printer to offer cards in America. Its owner, Louis Prang , is sometimes called the "father of the American Christmas card. The advent of the postcard spelled the end for elaborate Victorian-style cards, but by the s, cards with envelopes had returned. The now widely recognized brand Hallmark Cards was established in by Joyce Hall with the help of brother Rollie Hall to market their self-produced Christmas cards. Idiosyncratic "studio cards" with cartoon illustrations and sometimes risqué humor caught on in the s. Nostalgic, sentimental, and religious images have continued in popularity, and, in the 21st century, reproductions of Victorian and Edwardian cards are easy to obtain. Modern Christmas cards can be bought individually but are also sold in packs of the same or varied designs. In recent decades changes in technology may be responsible for the decline of the Christmas card. The estimated number of cards received by American households dropped from 29 in to 20 in Despite the decline, 1. In the UK, Christmas cards account for almost half of the volume of greeting card sales, with over Czech Republic , the cards are rather called New Year Cards , however they are sent before Christmas and the emphasis design, texts is mostly given to the New Year, omitting religious symbols. Despite the governing practice of the separation of church and state within American politics, there is a long-standing custom for the President and First Lady to send White House Christmas Cards each holiday season. Eisenhower issued the first official White House card. The cards usually depict White House scenes as rendered by prominent American artists. The number of recipients has snowballed over the decades, from just 2, in to 1. These cards are almost always discrete and secular in design, and do not attempt to sell a product, limiting themselves to mentioning the name of the business. The practice harkens back to trade cards of the 18th century, an ancestor of the modern Christmas card. Charity Christmas cards[ edit ] Christmas card promoting Royal typewriters Many organizations produce special Christmas cards as a fundraising tool. The most famous of these enterprises is probably the UNICEF Christmas card program, [18] launched in , which selects artwork from internationally known artists for card reproduction. The UK-based Charities Advisory Trust gives out an annual "Scrooge Award" to the cards that return the smallest percentage to the charities they claim to support [19] although it is not universally well received by the Christmas card producers. Small decorative stickers are also made to seal the back of envelopes, typically showing a trinket or some symbol of Christmas. In , the German post office gave away 20 million free scented stickers, to make Christmas cards smell of a fir Christmas tree, cinnamon, gingerbread, a honey-wax candle, a baked apple and an orange. Collectors items[ edit ] From the beginning, Christmas cards have been avidly collected. Queen Mary amassed a large collection that is now housed in the British Museum. Collectors may focus on particular images like Santa Claus , poets, or printing techniques. The Christmas card that holds the world record as the most expensive ever sold was a card produced in by J. Horsley and commissioned by civil servant Sir Henry Cole.
