The Clifford Pier Occupying the space of the original Clifford Pier, our dining destination at The Fullerton Bay Hotel Singapore preserves the pier's hawker culture while honouring its historical role as the landing point of Singapore's forefathers.

The event was named after Clifford Ball , a man who held events for aviators such as Amelia Earhart. The Clifford Ball was a proposed name for the s traveling festival that ultimately was named H. The name Clifford Ball had been known to the band for some five years before The Clifford Ball took place. According to Phish Manager, John Paluska, "The band was walking through the airport in Pittsburgh one day, and they came upon a small, little plaque of a guy named Clifford Ball Three gigantic video screens and four sound towers were erected to amplify the band. Phish, the marquee band who headlined the event, were joined by a classical violin quartet, a blues quartet, a choral quintet, and guitar soloists. Phish performed seven sets of music over the two nights, including a late night set on a flatbed truck that rolled through the parking lot in the wee hours of the morning. The event was named after a quote from the movie Twin Peaks: Fire Walk with Me. Throughout the weekend, the members of the audience each painted their own individual piece of art. The resultant pieces of fan artwork were attached to one another to create a tower that was eventually several stories high. The band also created their own piece of art during a jam on the final night. Later that evening, the band passed their artwork through the audience. As seen in Bittersweet Motel , a giant matchstick was lit, burning the tower to the ground. Phish was the only band that played the main stage, performing seven sets of music over two nights, including a late night disco set at 2: The Bangor Symphony Orchestra performed Debussy and Stravinsky during the afternoon of the second day, accompanied by a glider pilot who soared above the audience. Fans camped out onsite in tents, making Limestone the largest city in Maine over the weekend. Phish was the only band to play the main stage, performing seven sets of music over two nights. Several other bands, including Keller Williams and Manic Mule , played in the sidestage. The concert grounds, shaped like a large figure 8, contained several beer gardens, a Ferris wheel, an elephant, jugglers, and stiltmen. At the festival, the audience made candles throughout the weekend. On Sunday, the night ended with the band lighting fuses onstage, burning a path through the stage and activating a large elephant that sprayed a gusher of water into the air from its trunk, and then slowly made its way through the audience to the tune of "Baby Elephant Walk" [7] Camp Oswego[edit] Camp Oswego was a two-night run hosted by the jamband Phish. Phish was the only headlining band at the event, performing five sets of music over two nights. Fans camped out onsite in tents, creating a community of fans that became one of the largest cities in New York over the weekend[citation needed]. Band and audience attempted to break the world record for the largest number of people doing the same dance at one time during the song "Meatstick," but the record was not broken representatives from the Guinness Book of World Records were on hand. The following weekend, across the state, Woodstock was making new headlines as a few hundred people, out of the , people in attendance, rioted and burned the concert grounds. New York Governor George Pataki made mention of the peacefulness of the Phish show as compared to the debacle at Woodstock. In a cover story for Entertainment Weekly , three of the four Phish members declared Big Cypress to be the greatest Phish concert ever. Phish was the only band at the event, performing five sets of music nearly sixteen hours over two nights. The ABC broadcast was also shown to billions around the world as part of Today. It[edit] It was the sixth festival hosted by the rock band Phish. This was also their most-played festival venue see also the Great Went and Lemonwheel. PBS was on hand to make a documentary of the experience. Phish was the only band at the event, performing seven sets of music over two nights, including a late night ambient set on top of the air traffic control tower at 2: Fans camped onsite in tents, creating a community of Phans that became one of the largest cities in Maine over the weekend. Coventry[edit] Coventry was the seventh weekend-long festival hosted by the rock band Phish , and was announced to be the final performances ever, by the band. The event took place from August 13â€™15, , at a farm in the small town of Coventry , Vermont. An estimated 65,, attended. Fans camped on site in tents, creating a community that became the largest city in Vermont over the weekend. It was simulcast to thousands more in movie theaters across the United States. The event was also simulcast on XM Satellite Radio. Unfortunately, a week of rain had flooded the concert field to the point where people were turned away, causing gridlock on the highway and roads leading to the site. Rumors circulated that the stage was sinking. The band had made use of a local radio station turning it into "The Bunny" radio with live reports. These reports requested patience from concert goers. However, when Phish Bassist Mike Gordon came on the radio, he announced that the field and venue were in a state of disaster and that no more vehicles would be allowed into the venue. Rumor spread up and down the traffic lines that Phish would play another concert, since less than 20, fans had made it into the venue. Instead of turning away and despite warnings from the National Guard, tens of thousands parked their cars on highway medians, in breakdown lanes, and on the sides of roads. Then they hiked in to the concert venue, some walking as far as 30 miles to the venue[citation needed]. Local residents stepped in and began shuttling fans in and out of the site and to their vehicles. Despite efforts by attendees, trash accumulated from fans stuck along the road. The bill for the subsequent cleanup was sent from the State of Vermont to the Phish organization who picked up the bill in its entirety. The band gave away their trampolines during "You Enjoy Myself". They broke down crying onstage several times, most notably when Page McConnell choked up during the ballad "Wading in the Velvet Sea. Festival 8[edit] On June 26, , the band announced a " save the date " for a three-day festival on October 30 - November 1. Attendance figures for Festival 8 were estimated at 40, people. In addition to the official sets, one additional set featuring ambient, avant-garde music similar to the IT Festival Tower Jam was performed. Attendance figures for the festival were estimated at 30, people. Seven official sets of music were played over three nights. This set featured ambient music and projections on the screen with live videos of the band superimposed. The festival sold out, with attendance figures estimated at over 40, people. A live video stream of all three nights was offered for purchase on Livephish. Torrential downpours and flooding throughout the state led the New York State Department of Health to cancel the festival in order to protect the health and safety of concert goers. A mandatory requirement to boil all water was put in place during the week before and on Thursday, August 16th, the water was still deemed too unsafe to drink.
