Diary of Walter Yonge, esq., justice of the peace, and M.P. for Honiton, written at Colyton and Axminster, Co. Devon, from to Item Preview.

He was born in and died in In he married Cordelia Hay, which is interesting, in the light of the references to two other ladies in the Diary. There might be up to five days covered on a page. Rather than punctuation marks, dashes are used for pauses in the diary. To aid comprehension, conventional punctuation is used in this transcription. In the original, a new month is headed with the name of that month but for clarity, in this transcription the month has also been inserted after each date The Diary starts on July and continues without a break up to 18th January Then from then until 20th September , merely the weather details are recorded. The diary resumes on the 20th September until the 7th October The entries in this period are scrawled and are confined to brief factual references. After 7th October there are no further diary or weather entries although there are plenty of pages left in the A5 size exercise book. The diary although only dealing with domestic trivia, gives a wonderful insight into the life of a leisured young man of an English gentry family in the middle of the 19th century.
